Let's Talk About the Elephant in the Room

Available on The Comic Book Exchange™

When selecting an auction house to partner with for the sale of your collection, it's easy to be drawn in by the glitzy corporate giant attempting to justify its high commissions with its bigness. You know the drill – guys in suits trying to sell you on cross-marketing your comic book collection to coin and dinosaur bone collectors who have never even purchased a comic book! The glitzy corporate giant also pushes their over-produced print catalog, which in reality doesn't impact bidding as today's buyers are all online – it's 2016 after all! Those glossy catalogs only exist to impress potential sellers like yourself, and make no mistake – the seller and buyer commission generated from your items is what pays for it! That does only one thing – it lowers your net return as a seller.

At ComicLink, we think differently. We pioneered the smartest, most cost-effective way to sell your comic book collection, and for 20 years, our sellers have reached the most aggressive bidders in the hobby. Comprised of a mid-sized team of more than a dozen full-time professionals with over 200 years of combined experience in the hobby and nearly $200 Million in sales, our infrastructure is big enough – however, our objective for the seller is not to do things bigger but to do things smarter. Our longevity, expertise and reach combined with our low fee structure means the greatest net return for our sellers.

Come join our global consignor base and enjoy the best value proposition in the hobby!

Ever Feel Like You're Talking to This Guy on the Other End of the Line?

Sold on ComicLink

Have you ever found yourself on the other end of a conversation with a disingenuous rep who pretends to be your best friend but treats your collection like it is more important to him than it is to you? You won't find any of that "used car salesman" nonsense here at ComicLink. Some consignment firms are operated by owners who have primarily been dealers, which can lead to conflicts of interest. Others are "ma & pa" operations being run out of a home. Neither provides you with the security or infrastructure you want in a consignment firm.

From the very inception of our firm 20 years ago, ComicLink has had a "win-win" mindset in regard to the collection owner, working for them, not against them. Believe it or not, this was a revolutionary approach in 1996. We are certainly the best at it now!

We have over a dozen full-time professionals working towards one goal – yours!

Give us a call and you'll see what we mean.

Ready for a great ride? We have a pair of wonderful covers (that join up to form one image) from Amanda Conner and colorist Paul Mounts, a powerful Hall of Fame cover from the great Russ Heath, and an epic Hero Initiative cover from Dan Jurgens, inker Norm Rapmund, and colorist Tanya Horie, and on the Big, Big edition we have Joe Corroney's take on the 50th anniversary of Star Trek. On top of that, we have a feature article from former DC President and Publisher Paul Levitz, a pair of articles by Overstreet Advisor and Hero Initiative board member Charlie Novinskie, a feature article from Captain Action's Ed Catto, and much more.

Success is Often About Finding the Right Partner

Sold on ComicLink

Whether selling an entire collection or a single comic book or art piece, when you partner with ComicLink, you select a firm whose objectives align with your own. We've spent the last 20 years growing a business geared specifically towards affordably enabling owners of comic book collections to easily achieve outstanding net returns. Our highly experienced team includes leading experts who understand how to market your comic books and handle every aspect of the fulfillment process. We'll help you to determine which books are strong candidates for third-party grading, handle the submission paperwork and even lay out the funds for the third party grading fees. And, if you need a cash advance when you consign, all you have to do is ask.

Don't Leave Huge Money on the Table

If you have key or high-grade comic books talk to us before you sell. This guide is great for many reasons, but guide prices don't tell you the whole story. Did you know that even some non-keys certified by CGC or CBCS go for hundreds or thousands of dollars more than is reflected in the guide? For example, we auctioned off an X-Men #76 (a fairly common run book from the reprint era) in CGC 9.6 for $4,302 in 2015! The highest guide price for this book in 2015 was a mere $140. There are hundreds of similar examples of collectors paying record prices at auction for common books in the higher grades. Don't know which ones? You don't have to. Just call us, we do!

"This is my second time dealing with you. The first was after my husband passed away and I found his childhood comics. I was very pleased with your company and the level of service and friendliness I received, so I thought of you again when I found a few more comics that I missed selling the first time. Thank you for making this a very easy way to deal with something that is unfamiliar to me."

- Laurie C., East Aurora, NY

"Doing business with Lone Star Comics was a very satisfying experience. Lone Star Comics will treat you fairly and in a professional manner. I highly recommend them to do business with. I was very impressed. I purchased these comic books (my "treasures") over 68 years ago as a young boy. Unknown to me, all my comic books were saved and carefully stored by my mother. At age 97, my mother left her home due to illness and I rediscovered my comics."

"After inheriting my grandfather's collection, I knew I'd only have one chance to make the right choice in selling it. I looked at all my options and ComicConnect was clearly the only way to go. The amazing prices they got for the comics for my family was a dream come true."

- Barbara R.

"They treated me like family. Their incredible efforts in promoting my collection along with the fact that they don't charge a buyer's premium put a lot more money in my pocket. I met with other auction houses before making my decision and I am so glad I went with ComicConnect."

DO YOU LOVE ORIGINAL COMIC ART? I DO!

Hello, my name is Nick Katradis. If you love comic art as much as I do, and you are considering selling any of your comic art, please contact me. I am a lifelong collector of comics and I am one of the most serious collectors of comic art, specifically from the Bronze Age.

I want to purchase your comic art from DC, Marvel and Charlton. I collect mostly Bronze Age art from 1968 to 1979. But I will purchase Silver Age and Golden Age art too. I also collect Bronze Age Romance art, from DC, Marvel, and Charlton, from 1964 to 1977.

I collect comic art by Sal Buscema, Jim Aparo, Gil Kane, Gene Colan, Nick Cardy, John Romita, Jack Kirby, John Buscema, Steve Ditko, Irv Novick, Rich Buckler, Curt Swan, Herb Trimpe, Dick Giordano, Dick Dillin, Don Heck, George Tuska, Mike Sekowsky, Jim Mooney, Ross Andru, Marie Severin, etc.

If you are interested in selling your comic art to a fellow collector, or if you would like to purchase any of my comics or comic art on my website, please contact me and we can discuss a possible sale or trade.

PASSION for COLLECTING...

When it comes to passion for collecting, dedication to the hobby, and amassing high-grade, award winning runs... few measure up to Pedigree Comics' CEO and President, Doug Schmell, who sold his personal collection of Silver Age Marvels in 2012 for over 3.94 Million Dollars (a record price for a comic book collection).

So, who is best qualified to help you build your collection and find you the books and upgrades you need?

Over the past 20 plus years, I have amassed over fifteen thousand Marvel comic books, most of which are in very high grade condition. When CGC was in the process of forming in March, 1999, I was one of a handful of collectors asked to attend their start-up meeting and provide input to the creation of this third party grading service. When the CGC commenced operations later that year and began encapsulating and grading comic books for the public, I began submitting my runs of Marvel titles. Now, known as "Captain Tripps" on the CGC Registry and chat boards, I have come to be recognized as one of the leading collectors of Marvel Silver and Bronze Age comics, with many of my books being the highest graded copies in existence. In fact, I received the coveted Achievement in Comics Collecting 2006, awarded by the CGC Comics Registry, in honor of the outstanding runs of Marvel comics I had registered since November, 2003, including the highest graded set of virtually every Marvel Silver Age and Bronze Age title.

Although I sold the majority of my Bronze Age titles when I moved to Florida in 2004, I kept and continued to add to my Silver Age sets, looking for upgrades on any individual issue whenever possible. The formation of this collection, which has been painstakingly pared down to around 700 books, took an incredible amount of effort, time, expense, and patience. The stories I could tell of meeting at diners, post offices in Northern New Jersey, law offices, street corners in New York City, dealers' tables, and comic stores around the country in order to obtain that missing issue or coveted upgrade, would blow your mind. My decision to sell the collection was based on my feeling that I had reached a sort of collector's Nirvana, that I had finally obtained every sought after pedigreed issue or top of the CGC census book I could possibly find. The long journey has taken me to this point in time and I couldn't be any happier.

Let me help you find the same fulfillment I have!

- Many of the comic books are listed in groups, such as 11-20, 21-30, 31-50 and so on.
- The prices listed along with such groupings represent the value of each issue in that group, not the group as a whole.
- It's difficult to overstate how much accurate grading plays into getting a good price for your sales or purchases.

It's a good practice to develop relationships with dealers and other collectors who prove themselves trustworthy.

MANY PEOPLE HAVE STARTED USING INDEPENDENT, THIRD-PARTY GRADING SERVICES, SUCH AS CGC OR CBCS.

HEY, SOMEONE TOOK A BITE OUT OF THIS COMIC!

THE BEST PART IS THERE ARE MANY DIFFERENT WAYS TO COLLECT.

YOU CAN CHOOSE TO FOLLOW INDIVIDUAL PUBLISHERS, WRITERS, ARTISTS, CHARACTERS...

YOU CAN COLLECT SUPERHEROES, WAR COMICS, WESTERNS, ROMANCE OR WHATEVER YOU LIKE...

YOU CAN CHOOSE #1 ISSUES, FIRST APPEARANCES, CROSSOVERS, OR MANY OTHER VARIATIONS.

THE BEST THING TO COLLECT IS WHAT YOU LIKE, NOT WHAT SOMEONE ELSE LIKES.

WHETHER IT'S SPIDER-MAN OR EVERY COMIC THAT CAME OUT THE MONTH YOU WERE BORN, IT'S BEST TO DO IT WITH A PLAN.

OVERSTREET MARKET REPORT 2016

TOP KEY GOLDEN AGE BOOKS IN THE LOWEST GRADES SET RECORD PRICES

by Robert M. Overstreet

A few examples of noteworthy sales: Action Comics #7, CGC 2.0 for $71,000, All Star Comics #8 in CGC 1.0 for $11,950, Detective Comics #35 in CGC 2.0 for $19,120, and Superman #1 in CGC 2.0 for $83,650.

First of all, I want to thank all my advisors for their continued support and input going on now for 46 years. It has been through their years of input that has made the Guide the reference book that it is today. San Diego Comic-Con is always impressive and I appreciate being able to visit with many of my advisors (old and new) last year.

As prices realized for high grade examples of the top tier of comics continue to escalate, more and more collectors are now accepting lower grade copies which are more affordable. This is creating a higher demand for unrestored copies in the Fair to Good range. Even covers and loose pages are now in demand.

As Benjamin Labonog pointed out, "Prices for the key GA books are getting so high, even in low grade, that folks are settling for parts and pieces of books - raw or slabbed centerfolds, front covers, back covers, single wraps, single pages - they are all in demand." "A complete cover of Cap #1 CGC sold for nearly 10K earlier in 2015." Dan Gallo agrees: "Big Gold can be very pricey which is why we see low grade copies fetching huge prices."

As Dave Anderson, DDS reported, "Comics in all grades sold well due in part to the separation between the buyers who truly love to read and collect them and the buyers who are buying for investment. For the investor, the book will need to have been graded by CBCS or CGC since most of these investors lack the knowledge to acccurately grade a comic or detect restoration." He continues, "This portion of the comic book market accounts for many of the high profile sales we hear about. On the other side of the market, comics are bought to be enjoyed both by reading and collecting." Ted VanLiew pointed out, "CGC is still top dawg, but CBCS has established instant credibility since Steve Borock is one of the principals of the company, and they're doing a bang up job overall."

Eric Groves agreed, "Just about everybody knows that the major competitors in selling slabbed comics are Heritage in Dallas, and ComicConnect, in New York. They regularly acquire excellent collections and put them up, graded for bid several times a year. The major auction houses tend to focus on offering the most sought after comics, mainly superhero books. Other genres are not as well represented, with the exception of very high grade books."

Golden Age: As Eric Groves wrote, "Golden Age still rule. Superhero books dominate, as usual. DC comics are sought out by fans old and young alike. This is especially true for 'generation-skipping' characters such as Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Flash and Green Arrow. Timelys still prevail, if you can affford them. Any book with a WWII cover, especially those featuring Hitler, Tojo or Mussolini will find a new home, particularly a cover with all three. Off beat titles like Cat-Man are also hard, and thus easy to sell. Early copies of Crime Does Not Pay, with their bloody covers, are in demand. Pre-Code horror comics are avidly sought, including titles which traditionally were of limited interest, such as Mysteries, Weird and Strange, Mr. Mystery, Haunted Thrills, Worlds of Fear, Journey Into Fear and the like. EC titles are as popular as ever."

Thrilling Comics* #44 with a Hitler cover, CGC 9.4 Mile High sold for $28,680.

As collecting runs of key Golden Age titles becomes so expensive, collectors are more and more selecting the "best covers' to collect. The Marvel Mystery "Super Plane" cover #44) and the Nazi Dirigible cover (#4 l ys s for over-Guide when they come up at auction. Classic covers such as Suspense Comics #3 in CGC 9.0 sold for $174,275 and Punch Comics #12 in CGC 7.5 went for $28,680 in 2015. Covers depicting bloody and gory scenes still go for high prices. Fight Against Crime #20 decapitation-c, CGC 6.5 went for $3,346. Tomb of Terror #15 in CGC 9.4 head exploding cover sold for $5,541 in Feb. 2016. A copy of Weird Mysteries #5 in CGC 8.0 sold in 2015 for $17,925. Crime SuspenStories #22 which is probably the most outrageous decapitation cover of the pre-Code period always sells for over-Guide.

Robert Krause pointed out, "Golden Age comics continue to be a brisk seller for the superhero, sci-fi and horror genres, often selling for multiples of Guide if high grade (8. VF higher) regardless if the issue is key or not."

Jamie Newbold of Southern California Comics gives a detailed report in this edition about pricing in the market compared to the listed Overstreet price. He concluded, "I prefer to stay with OCBPG's 9.0 and 9.2 prices on non-key comics. I can live with that since I feel those OCBPG price tiers are about as accurate as the market can be." Dan Gallo agreed, "Everyone uses the Guide. It's just that most people don't realize it! As a full time dealer the Guide is never more than an arm's length away from me as I refer to it multiple times a day. It doesn't mean that I price books at the exact number on the page. It doesn't mean that I don't refer to other sources such as market data or use my knowledge of the marketplace. I use every tool in the shed with the Guide being the tool as it is the foundation of what we do as buyers and sellers. As for prices, sometimes books are priced right around Guide if not exactly that. Other times prices are not even close. They may be half Guide, double Guide, or 20% +/- Guide but it is still based on the Guide."

Silver Age: The Silver Age is now over 50 years old and the vast majority of books bought and sold are from this period. Key books continue to set records, even in the lower grades. Paul Clairmont wrote, "This genre continues to be undervalued in the price guide and overshadowed, at times, by the speculation market. All grades sell above Overstreet Price Guide price levels as it's tougher and tougher to find these quality books. In our local market it is nearly impossible to find DC Silver Age. The most common grades seem to be VG to FN and it's becoming scarce to find them in higher grades above FN.

Frank Simmons agreed, "Across the board all major Marvel and DC Silver Age #1 comics as well as first appearances seemed to increase in an accelerated manner. We noticed in particular that low grade copies in the 1.0, 1.5, 1.8 and 2.0 grade range had a tremendous surge in pricing and the demand for these more affordable copies was in fact the culprit."

Robert Krause also agreed, "The Silver Age is white hot. Early Marvel and DC superhero titles dominate the landscape. All titles in all grades sell briskly. There is a true scarcity of high grade DC books from this age. Any 9.0 VF/NM copy of a DC superhero book will sell for multiples of Guide. Marvel high grade books are somewhat more plentiful but true high grade examples bring a bidding war. Key books for this age are ultra desirable. Not everyone can afford a thousand or even hundreds of dollars for a book, so people become content in owning a reasonable example of the book."

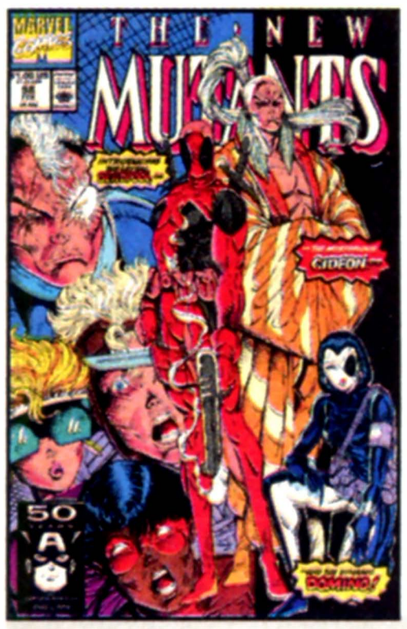
Bronze Age: Benjamin Labonog pointed out, "Hulk #181 is the AF #15 of the Bronze Age. It has relentless demand and oodles of supply but still sells at about $200/point. This is now a 40+ year old book and we will continue to see the 20s generation start buying these up as they begin to work and have money to invest with." Terry O'Neill agreed, "Incredible Hulk #181 and Amazing Spider-Man #129 are still two of the best selling Marvel keys."

Ted VanLiew wrote, "Many '70s through Modern issues have jumped to life because of movie tie-ins. The continued anticipation surrounding the ongoing release of superhero related movies is fueling a mad rush to procure first appearances and "key" issues. This phenomenon differs from the early '90s speculation boom in that these books are holding their value well, as opposed to the boom/bust rise and crash of prices on Modern keys in the '90s."

Amazing Spider-Man #129 continues to be one of the best selling keys.



Steven Houston reported, "Books from 1976-80 in VF/NM to NM- are now falling within the scope of dealer Pressing, It is not financially viable to send 99.9% of this era's books into CCS and then CGC, but many dealers now have their OWN pressing operations and will take the time to press these books in the hopes of getting 9.8's." He believes dealers before the shows open are sniping his high grade books (9.0 and above) from this period probably for pressing hoping to get the 9.8s.

Paul Clairmont pointed out, "What we are beginning to notice is the market becoming diluted with so many new shows, movies and rumors that the books that become hot have a much shorter time period of holding that hot status as collectors are bombarded with information overload and quickly switch to the next hot book." (Editor's note: This means prices for this material can quickly rise and just as quickly fall). He continues "Hollywood is heavily diluting television and big screens with far more super hero themed material than one person can follow and that has created a sense of "quantity over quality" and I'm not even following 25% of what is coming out. Books such as Batman Adventures #12 which has just exploded due to Harley Quinn climbed above $2,000 and are starting to come down a little, but will certainly drop further after the release of the Suicide Squad movie."

Paul Clairmont pointed out, "We sold so many high grade Star Wars books throughout 2015 as the buzz for the movies continues. The one character that is white hot at the moment is Moon Knight. We aren't certain what is causing his first appearance to increase so rapidly and believe it's collectors speculating that his time is finally due. Copies of Werewolf by Night #32 are bringing record prices in any grade.

Copper Age: Paul Clairmont wrote, "After a strong two-year increase in prices, Copper Age back issues are adjusting to the increase in availability of high grade issues coming out of collections as we saw dealers focused mainly on Gold, Silver and Bronze begin to scramble to find these books as well. Chalked full of overlooked keys, this era is causing a feeding frenzy as collectors and mostly speculators scramble to scoop the latest undervalued key."

Modern Age: Terry O'Neill reported, "New Mutants #98 and Amazing Spider-Man #300 and Batman Adventures #12 are three of the best selling comics from any era." Paul Clairmont of PNJ Comics reported, "Well, we didn't listen to our own advice on this genre. We decided to give the variant issue market a tryout for a few titles and found the experience exhausting. The only shops that are making money with this material, and rightfully so, are the ones that step up each week with the subscription orders and can then ask the strong prices these variants bring at the date of release"

The original cover for Green Lantern #76 (DC, 1970) by Neal Adams sold for $442,150.

Pedigree collections 2015: The Mel Dybdahl Golden Age collection was released in February by Heritage Auctions which consisted of a wide mix of titles and issues. Pedigree collections appeared sporadically in all the top auctions held last year. Mile High (Edgar Church), Larson, Pennsylvania, White Mountain, Gaines file copies, Northford, and others were represented selling to eager buyers.

In Summary

2015 was another year in which hundreds of thousands of comic books were sold off web sites, from mailing lists, at conventions, at the major auction houses, and at comic book stores. Prices realized were again mixed depending on rarity, character and grade.

The following market reports were submitted from some of our many advisors and are published here for your information. It has been a fun-filled yet hard working year in the 2015 comic world. Pricey collections were found, yet they were few and far between, set adrift in a sea of overproduced rubbish. It's getting increasingly harder to find original owner collections. They just aren't coming out of the woodwork like they used to, even with all the movie hype of the DC and Marvel superhero movies. In addition, with superheroes and supervillains on 5 prime time TV series, you would think people would dig out their old comic books to sell or get appraised. Just the opposite is happening. Everyone and their brother who bought comics in the early '90s speculation period is sure they have valuable comics in spades. Alas, they leave disappointed. However, even with media coverage of million dollar sales, some people STILL throw away comics.

Get this, it's 2015 and the following occurred, not 30 years ago, but THIS YEAR!! The following anecdote may not carry the romance and excitement of an original owner, 6 figure find, yet it is satisfying in its own right. The story is cool, and us comic freaks love a good origin story, yet baffling all the same. A woman came in our shop with a plastic laundry bin filled with comic books. It was something she had found by a garbage dumpster. She was initially only interested in the laundry bin itself sitting next to the dumpster, completely unaware of its contents. When we examined the contents, there were several Silver Age Marvels just stacked together, raw and unbagged. They were not in high grade at all, with two of the highlights being an Avengers #1 that would grade as a CGC 2.0, and a Flash #105 at roughly 4.0. Overall, approximately 200 books in all. Not a bad bit of dumpster diving on her part! We gave her a price that far exceeded her expectations, and her young daughter walked away with some free comics from the dollar bin. After it was all said and done, she still wanted the laundry bin back!

Every comic dealer tries to assess what a seller has to offer and if they have any interest of buying a collection. This saves time and money for both parties involved. We try to screen people before they come in, making sure they have comics we are actually interested in, for example comics for Spider-Man's original 1963 title and not an issue from the 1999 series, or for those of you familiar with baseball cards: 1990s Donruss, etc.

One of the more unpleasant aspects of this business is being the bearer of bad news. That being said, 2015 also featured one the more humorous encounters we experienced in a find we affectionately call the "Cat Piss Collection." We will classify this as an "UN-PEDIGREE" collection. There was with a gentleman who fit the profile of a longtime collector. He was around 80 years old and assured us he had the goods which included "comic books from when I was a kid," "tons of 10 cent comics" and "I have had them in boxes for as long as I can remember." He lived approximately 100 miles away and so we offered to come look at them in a few days. He agreed. Without notice, he then took upon himself to load all 10,000 comic books into the back of his pickup truck equipped with a leaky canopy. He called us the next day to say the books are loaded and he is on the way.

Originally he was to show up at 2:00, which became 4:00, which finally resulted in a phone call from him at 6:00, saying he had glaucoma, and couldn't drive at night, and was roughly 30 miles away, parked on the side of the highway. This was a very dark and stormy night in December. And so we sent two employees to pick him up. One returned in their own car and the other drove his truck, with him in the passenger seat. And so they backed his truck up to our store and he had upper side door windows on the canopy and instructed us to open them. Immediately, a box came spilling out onto the parking lot, in a puddle, unbagged. Having no idea of what just hit the ground, you can just imagine our dismay. Visions of Captain America # 1, early Batman, you name it, flooded our thoughts as we panicked and tried creating a human umbrella, while others feverishly picked them up as they were dripping water.

As we were unloading his comic boxes, it became obvious that this wasn't an original collection at all. The man was a swap meet seller and had obtained these from several other dealers. When we had them all set out, he mentioned they had been in his garage for a year or so. They were stored in beer boxes, vegetable boxes and oil boxes, complete with oil soaked stains. Some had written on them "3 for a $1." Quickly realizing that not only were these comics from the mass produced period the early '90s, but all of the key issues from that period were missing.

During the entire time he had dodged the question as to how much he was hoping to get. We reconvened in the back room for a few moments to discuss not how, but who, was going to break the bad news to this 80 year old man.

So we opened with this .... "Do you have any cats?"

"Yes, why do you ask?"

It was due to the unmistakable heavy stench of cat piss coating most of the boxes and many of the books themselves. One of our employees exited the store and commenced dry heaving, halfway through the inspection. What was present was all '90s common DC and Marvel issues in not very good condition, even minus the stank. In the end, they wreaked even too much for our dollar bin. We asked him how much he expected to get for these comics. He paused and brought up the Action Comics #1 sale and indicated that "if a single comic can be worth that much, I'm willing to give you guys a great deal on all 10,000 comics. OK, and this means..... ? I'm thinking 1/2 million bucks!!"

We were so stunned and astounded by his answer, that we stared in absolute silence. Trying to wrap our minds around his logic as he stared at us 100% dead serious. As we stared at the smelly beer cases and saturated oil boxes he continued with, "It's all about marketing and presentation." What can you say to that ? Eventually, we explained that we had no offer for him, and would load up his truck for him. We also decided to put him up in a hotel for the night, so he could drive home safely the next day. We gave him $150 for the room at a near-

Hello,

My name is Darren Adams, owner of West Coast Sports Cards and Pristine Comics.com

Some of you may know me as the guy from Seattle who sold the THREE MILLION DOLLAR COMIC BOOK. (see right)
This sale was viewed by over one million people, marking it as the most watched comic sale in history.

This comic book was originally offered to other dealers prior to myself. Yet in the end, only one company stepped up to meet the demands of the seller..... And that was my company.

You don't need to have the world's most valuable comic book to sell to us.

We are also one of the largest Buyers of Magic the Gathering Cards.

Before selling anything, please consider these attributes that we genuinely offer:

DISCRETION: 100% CONFIDENTIAL

We have non-disclosure forms available for those who prefer discretion. We have made other significant purchases that you will not read nor hear about. Quite often for any number of reasons, a seller will prefer discretion.

AN HONEST APPRAISAL:

We know what your comics are truly worth and so will you. Anyone can estimate a value of what a collection might sell for at auction. The fact remains that this is a guess with no guarantees, other than a guarantee only to themselves. They take 10-20+ % of your money regardless of what your comics sell for. YOU pay all shipping cost, have to accept returns in the event a bidder does not pay, take 100% of the risk of getting lower prices than originally estimated, and then have to wait for bidders to pay them, then wait for the auction house to deduct ALL of their fees and send you a check. Sound like fun? Just like in Vegas, the house always wins. Why shouldn't you? After all, it is your collection.

We provide you with a valuation of what your collection is truly worth in today's market and make an offer to purchase your entire collection. If you prefer to sell only certain books within the collection, we can make offers on those as well. We can also provide you with other favorable suggestions after evaluating your collection.

CONVENIENCE:

We can discuss this by telephone, email and in person.

100% PAYMENT IN FULL NOW:

We pay you 100% in full when purchasing your collection. Period. For those clients who prefer to be paid over time for reasons of their own, we have contracts available.

Consignment centers make you wait until after your items are sold & they have been paid.

Auction houses make you wait until after the auction ends, and after the bidder's funds clear their bank, which oddly enough can take several weeks.

YOUR CHOICE OF PAYMENT:

We can pay by bank wire, cashier's check or CASH. For those who prefer, we also trade.

We are only a phone call or an email away!

by decent hotel. He insisted on driving, so we had him follow us to the hotel. As soon as we pulled into the entryway, he hit the gas and took off!! It was a perfect ending to an eventful evening and one I doubt I will ever forget.

Turning to the comic market, it's become abundantly clear that the gap in demand between superhero books and Disney, Funny Animal, and War comics, etc. has widened to historic proportions, the latter being a distant second and are tough sells. An interesting aspect of the superhero reign is that the Golden Age books are finally getting their due. The gap is widening between high grade Gold and high grade Silver. A particularly hot Golden Age character, in more ways than one, (Gal Gadot), is Wonder Woman. One prime example is the price hike in early Wonder Woman comics, particularly All Star Comics #8, Sensation Comics #1, and Wonder Woman #1. While these recent price increases may leave some with sticker shock, the reality is that these books are still underpriced, as it's a true equation of supply vs. demand, with supply definitely outpacing demand.

Also, with Wonder Woman's appearance in this year's Batman v Superman movie, and her solo film next year, prices will only go higher. BTW, we are always on the lookout for the 3 books mentioned above, so please contact us if you find or have them.

Another particularly hot Silver and Golden Age common ground: Batman villains are on FIRE!! For the longest time it was primarily the Joker in terms of value and demand, but now, it's the rest of the A-list, B-list and even C-list villains affiliated with Batman that are all the rage, including Riddler, Penguin, and even Killer Moth!

Thanks to the movies, early Wonder Woman issues like Sensation Comics #1 are on fire.

The ebb and flow of prices involving late '60s Silver Age Marvel characters' 1st issues and 1st appearances is on the rise again, some reasonably so, and some, quite frankly, perplexing. $10,000 for Iron Man #1 9.8 seems ok. $13,000 for Fantastic Four #48, as a bottom line threshold, is now the norm, but over $85,000 for the first Black Panther appearance!?? Then a second sale of 90k??? "Irrational exuberance", sayeth Thor. An interesting correction should be made concerning the Gold Key/Whitman Buck Rogers issues. The prepack only issues #8 and 9 are far underpriced in the Guide. I've seen Good to VG copies of these books sell 5x to 10x Guide on eBay.

In addition, the DC digests are also pulling in higher prices than Guide on eBay, which doesn't take into account the shipping charge. I believe these digests are on a moderate rise, as more and more collectors discover them. DC published a total of 115 digests from 1979 to 1986, and some collectors are taking on the challenge of completing the entire set.

On a closing note, UK copies need to be defined better. At one point they could be had for 50% of their counterparts, but this doesn't appear to be the case anymore,with production estimated at not 1/5th, nor even 1/10th, but possibly 1/50th or greater. Take this current CGC census, for example:

Title/Issue		Total U.S. on census	Total U.K.
Amazing Spider-Man	#1	2900 copies	42 copies
Avengers	#1	2800 copies	38 copies
Incredible Hulk	#1	1270 copies	33 copies
X-Men	#1	3300 copies	46 copies
Fantastic Four	#1	1700 copies	10 copies

Most of these books have the same exact cover date. Some issues such as Amazing Fantasy #15 are off by one month, but their indicias reflect the exact same date, thus indicating they were stamped a month later for time and travel release dates. For those with the exact same month, it is rumored that they in fact were produced prior to the U.S. version in that they were the first ones in the press run, so that they could maintain the same cover month and be shipped and released prior to their U.S. counterparts. This was due to time in transit, and as a result, they tend to have deeper color saturations, since they were at the beginning of the print runs.

There are still a lot of unknowns concerning the UK Marvels and DCs for that matter. I can envision one day in the not so distant future, UK copies exceeding U.S. prices, simply based on documented press numbers. It is one of the very first price variants. One might ask why not Mexican or French versions? Because they are not the same comic book. UK copies are the exact same copy ad for ad, word for word, cover for cover, and produced on the very same presses, at the exact same time, if not, perhaps, even sooner.

Time will tell, ... and if you haven't guessed yet, yes, we are always looking for and paying top dollar for high grade copies of any Pence (U.K.) key issues. In closing, as we look beyond 2016, may the wind of discovery be at all our collector backs!

Grant Adey
Halo Certification Pty Ltd. - Australia/Alabama

In 2015, comic book grading in Australia is coming of age. Collectors are going from strength to strength understanding certain defects such as spine splits etc. which can cause a book's grade to plummet. Paper quality also playing a major roll in considering the purchase of a comic. We have come a long way in the last 12 months. Most collectors are more aware of simple restoration through a tutorial I did on the company website, plus I'm available at local shops & conventions for free inspections. This year there have been some particularly interesting examples of restored comics submitted. Pro-level work was seen with example that had seamless piece adding, piece reproduction and almost perfect recolouring. This level of restoration is beyond a large group of collectors, so remember: if it seems to good to be true, walk on by.

Modern comics are the new hot ticket in town. Sixty percent of comics we slab are post 1980. Here are a few favourites: Batman #1 from the new 52, ASM #1, Harley Quinn #1(1st series), Suicide Squad #1, The Maxx #1, Preacher #1, Batman Adventures #12, Wolverine #1 (1st series & 4 part), Outcast #1, Walking Dead #1, Spider-Gwen #1, Guardians of Knowhere #1 Gwenom (Gwen-Venom) cover, Star Wars anything from '77 to present, Mad Max #1, DKIII, Civil War. Then all the variants, from Alex Ross, J. Scott Campbell, Skottie Young, Humberto Ramos, and Robbi Rodriguez are some of the most popular. Top it off with the Autograph series and these books are stunning. Silver Age is strong, taking 30% of work, all the usual keys and favourites. Golden Age represented by about 5% of this year's numbers.

I have been invited to the Fairfax group's printing facility where they print everything from the daily newspaper to magazines. I asked a few questions and became interested in modern techniques, the state of the art technology that drives the industry today. The machinery runs at an incredible speed. Computers control air/water density and if air moisture drops, fine mist jets bring the air back into the tolerances set for the paper. The printer adjusts the colour, water injection for the inks, ink saturation and up to 5000 copies can be run before everything is dialed in to perfection. Fold followed by the stitching (stapling) is feed by a constant wire, trim then into a shipping box. All automated. The quality of print material today is excellent, so if we're printing a run of 50,000 and lets say the first 5,000 are slightly off on colour that's leaves 45,000 near mint condition. Looking at boxes of Diamond distributed 250 count, slight damage pretty much comes down to shipping. White covers with a black advertisement on the back generally leave rubbing on the white cover. The 52 page comics it's obvious the stitching machine struggles, most main beams are bent. The cockling we see on some modern comics I thought was ink saturation, but it's paper tension as it's printed. Soon as time allows, I will take a tour of the Fairfax factory and be able to deliver a better informed summary. Above is what I was able to absorb within a 15 minute conversation and is a generalization. What I'm getting at is risk of defects is significantly reduced.

Halo sales shuffled along ok for the first part of this year, then we reached August and things just spiked upwards. Pproduction doubled with no apparent reason, and orders flooded in. The company went from 7 day turn around to 21 days to 28+ days where it remains today. I have no explanation to the rise, as a few key books set new records overseas. We are mainly a collector oriented service company. Very few books reach the secondary market. It may be the luxury of running a small company, but I know every nut 'n' bolt, and I move thoughout the day from section to section, right down to polishing the case for shipping. Mmm shipping... there's the burr in my saddle blanket. The company has to shift from the post office to a private national / international carrier. The last 12 months with the post office has been very ordinary at best.

Convention sales: This year's highlight was the Supanova comic convention in my hometown of Brisbane. Guest star artists included Joe Jusko, Bob Layton and Dave Gibbons. Great guys who suffered the plane ride half way round the world to bring us their talent. Halo Cert. commissioned Mr. Jusko to illustrate our company Christmas card for 2015, a brilliant illustration of this year's Marvel stroke of genius, Spider-Gwen. The image is featured on the company website www.halocertificationptyltd.com. Bob Layton, an absolute gentleman, I was lucky enough to obtain his Iron Man folding sign with a huge autograph which is now displayed in our office. A very intelligent and talented man, we spoke briefly on a few subjects outside of comics, I found him very to the point. I like that. Mr. Dave Gibbons extended himself to every fan, worked tirelessly signing comics and giving a seminar to a packed auditorium. I spoke with Norm Bardell who owns my old comic shop (Fats Comics). He had a very busy sales show and had a large display of major key books Halo Certified in the 6.5 region, sold ASM #1, X-Men #1, Green Lantern #1, Norm's finish figures were without a doubt the best I have heard of at a convention in years. The Figures would stand stout in SDCC or Earl's Court in the UK. World class stuff.

Halo's 2nd in charge Tony Nasser completed his training this year and is more than ready to step into my shoes. His observation tour of the U.S and Canada lasting 2 months brought a wealth of information and rounded out his education into the industry. Tony has been employed in the comic industry for 20 years and I think he would agree the last year has been the most intense, it's not so easy to go to a convention as a comic book grader openly show your knowledge.

I have three new graders currently learning. They all started with the numbering system, and progression has been erratic, with all 3 at different levels. In the future I'm going to start back to basics with poor-fair-gd-vg-fine etc. Then we'll take on + & -, then 9.2 & multiples of Guide. I set little assignments like pedigrees, and history of the publishers. The students enjoy exploring the history of comics. My 12 years of Comics Buyers Guide has disappeared down the rabbit hole, there must be thousands of hours of good factual information in those little papers.

Australian edition comics from the 1930s to late '40s are very, if not impossible to accurately date. We use the circa 1940s to date these comics. There are some very rare birds amongst the Australian comics of the '40s and '50s. There is only one known copy of Green Mask #1, an all-Australian issue, story and art. It was recalled from shelves because of its violent story and art. The surviving copy has court transcripts stapled to the cover, with court docket number and judges ruling.

So in closing, it's been a very brisk year. 2016 is looking very exciting with some expansions on the horizon and product updates. This is Slim signing off from the further most outpost.

Greetings! The comic book market overall appeared to be healthy and strong for 2015 while record breaking prices continued to take place. Time has sure flown by quickly. It's hard to believe that comics from the 1990s are now 25 years old!.

Here is a question, did Archie's Madhouse #22 CGC 7.5 sell for $3,351 on eBay in March of 2015? The answer is YES it did. Archie Silver Age key books have been extremely undervalued for years especially key books such as Archie's Madhouse #1 and #22, Josie #1, Life with Archie #1 and Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #23 appear scarce to rare in a certified 6.0 or higher grade. One can check the CGC census.

The Archie 15-cent test market price variants that are confirmed to exist are growing rapidly with 86 of 112 confirmed to exist. All of them should eventually surface. I also would like to mention and point out that type 1a U.S published first print edition UK price variants exist for all regular size Archie comics cover month dated 4/60 to 8/60. They have 9d cover prices on the covers and appear rare to find.

Does anyone remember the short lived (King Comics) published August 1966 to December 1967? Well I came across two versions of King Comics (Blondie #175). One has a 12 cent cover price and the other has a 15 cent cover price. The 15 cent version of Blondie #175 appears very elusive and rare to find. I have only seen one copy of it ever and believe that the 15 cent cover price versions were only distributed and sold in the UK? The 12 cent cover versions were sold in the U.S in King (bagged) 3 packs. Type 1a U.S published first print edition UK price variants exist for King Comics.They have 10d cover prices on the covers. I suggest checking out King Comics of the 1960s they are cool to read and also to collect.

Happy collecting everyone.

David T. Alexander
Tyler Alexander & Eddie Wendt
DTA Collectibles / Culture and Thrills, Inc.

The Culture of Collecting: My interest in comic books has been ongoing since 1949 when I first saw a copy of More Fun Comics. I vividly remember the early 1950s when the concept of the Comics Code was being publicized and think one of the worst days of my life was in early 1955 when I first saw the Code seal on the cover of a comic book. That was a low point in the history of collecting that was slightly tempered by the return of superheroes in the late 1950s. Things were good for collectors in the very early 1960s as the superhero revolution was in full song and I was happy collecting comics until the sad day in 1962 when I went to the news stand with a dollar planning to buy 10 comics and saw the cover price had been raised to 12 cents and I could only get 8 books for my money. That was the second worst day of my life. I have been selling comics full time since 1969. I was a dealer at the first San Diego ComiCon at the U.S. Grant Hotel in 1970, and I have had an ad in every Overstreet Price Guide since the Second Edition in 1972.

The phenomena of comic book reading and collecting has a new relevance in society today. With the publicity and attention given to comic book related media events, everyone has had a chance to become familiar with characters and concepts that had never received prominence. Multiple comic book movies and TV programs have become some of the most viewed and talked about entertainment vehicles in history. Everybody has had a chance to get a feel for the fun provided by comic characters.

Many years ago comic book collecting was considered to be "America's Secret Hobby." Adults who participated in the hobby certainly did not publicize their passion and if they did get any reactions to their interest it was usually expressed as comics were for kids and they were looked upon as being weird or socially strange. No one feels that way anymore and when people become aware of prices realized for key issues of historic comic books, they wish that they shared the "Secret Hobby."

Comic characters have generated billions of dollars of revenue from movie goers and TV viewers. Unfortunately, the comic books themselves are not generating large sales volume. Many factors contribute to this situation including the internet replacing the volume of printed material that existed in the past and video games that offer hours of fun to kids. Historically children were the end users of comics but now they can rent a video game for the weekend at a cost of $7.00 or buy two comics for the same amount, and they can read them in 30 minutes. As I have discussed this situation with many serious collectors and long time dealers, the consensus has been that no publisher will ever give up the printed version of comics. Some feel that the format might have changes but no one can imagine a future without comics that you can hold, read and collect. Retailers that focus on lower print runs seem to be doing well, keeping costs down while increasing scarcity for an issue or title that becomes popular.

The interest in comics has never been higher and the future seems strong for my favorite form of media. More fans have become collectors and have strengthened the hobby. When the internet became a natural place to trade comics the convention concept took a real nose dive. What the internet could not provide was face to face contact. Now many conventions are huge events and have a large financial impact on cities where they take place. How many city governments currently solicit and encourage conventions and comic related activities?

The interest and enthusiasm for the comic book hobby has never been greater. The conventions allow fans and collectors to have a real "hands on" experience with the hobby. Many fans have had their first introduction to collecting at conventions. We travel to many conventions each year and have done so for decades. Over the last two years our convention purchases have provided a huge percentage of our inventory, so if you see us at a con or show this year please say hello and invite us to your booth. We always need more inventory. Our sales focus has changed since 2014 and we are only setting up at a few conventions. Most of our trips are for buying exclusively. Our concentration now is on website and internet sales. Although I am not involved with them I think I should let you know about three of the best events in the country and invite you to try them out. All are in Florida so you can't miss if you visit one them.

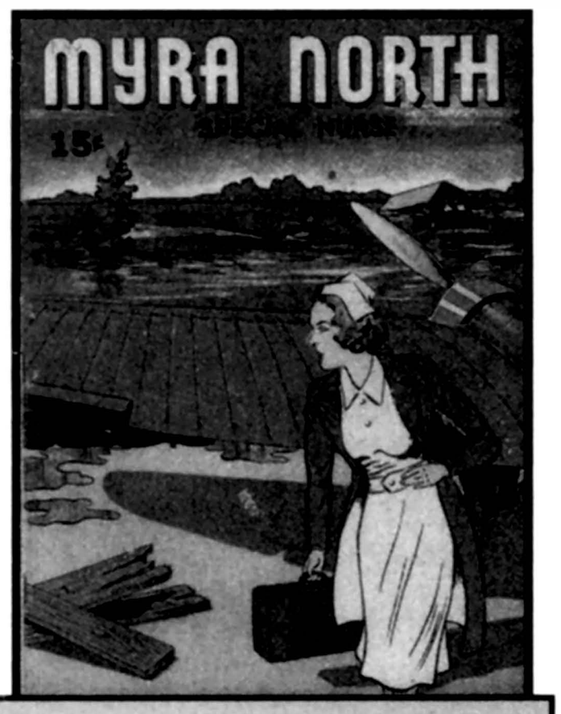
The Tampa Bay Comic Con has grown from a hotel show with 500 attendees to 50,000 person blowout that strains the confines of the Tampa Convention Center. The facility is located at the intersection of the Hillsborough River and historic Tampa Bay. Scenic location, lots of fun, loads of comics, check it out. The Mega Con in Orlando has been going on for years and draws crowds approaching 100,000. It was recently sold to a Canadian promoter and moved to Memorial Day weekend. Dealers and collectors from all over the country are always in attendance and you will get to see a lot of books. It takes place at the gigantic Orlando Convention Center and when you attend this event you will not be far from the beaches on either side of the state. If you only have time for a quick trip to the beach the Gulf Coast is best. The Daytona Beach Comic Con does not have the size of the major events but it is not lacking in enthusiasm. Taking place in March and November it often draws out of state dealers and collectors. The high intensity single day event is packed with comics and highlights Golden and Silver Age issues. It is held in the shadow of the Daytona Speedway and is lots of fun if you want to buy or sell comics. When you come to Florida for the shows feel free to call us. We have over 750,000 items in our warehouse and will never be able to get them all to a show.

While I am on conventions, I want to make an appeal to promoters. When you advertise your event please include a list of dealers who have registered to set up. Most of the convention trips I make are purely to buy inventory. Many other dealers use this same strategy. We don't care who the stars are that will attend, actually in our eyes the stars are the dealers that will have merchandise for us to buy. I schedule many convention trips based on the dealers list that promoters provide. Unfortunately many promoters see dealers as unimportant in their advertising campaign but this is not the case. Let us know who is going to your show. If I can get to your event I will try to make your dealers very happy.



Conventions in general have rebounded as profitable business endeavors largely due to big media guests, and they remain great places to buy, sell and trade. But the real growth is on the internet, and not just eBay and Amazon. Various comic-focused message boards, Facebook and even Instagram have become platforms where buyers and sellers can meet. While these venues lack the robust safety offered to eBay and Amazon users, there are still deals to be made if you are smart, patient and willing to take a little risk from time to time.

Acquisitions and Sales: We were very happy to receive two original owner Golden Age collections this year. The best of these had about 200 issues and came from a relative of the original owner. Highlights were early issues and impressive short runs of Human Torch, Sub-Mariner, Marvel Mystery and Batman. There were scattered copies of early titles including a copy of Our Flag #5. This is the final issue of the series and features the first appearance of Mr. Risk and several other superheroes but stands out with its graveyard horror cover. Published during the WWII era in 1942, this has one of the first horror covers to appear on a comic book. Selling price was about 30X Guide value. The best book in this group was a nice copy of Jackpot # 4 which features the first Archie cover appearance.

Silver Age to Present: The most requested book from the Silver Age period is Amazing Fantasy #15. The most popular Bronze Age comic is Incredible Hulk #181. We sell several copies each month. More collectors are seeking Silver Age books than at any previous time. This is not breaking news to anyone. As the superheroes introduced in the 1960s become more visible in our culture, demand has skyrocketed for their first appearances.

Certain Bronze, Copper and Modern Age issues that used to be considered dollar box filler are increasing in price overnight if they offer the first appearance or a story used in the plot of a new movie or TV show. Third and fourth tier characters plucked from obscurity and placed in a new Hollywood project can turn a 25-cent book into a $40 or $50 issue almost immediately after a casting announcement is made. It keeps us hoarding back issues and willing to purchase full collections of 1980s and 1990s comics even if they contain few keys. If you have the time and the space it is worth holding onto back issues. You never know when the next Incredible Hulk #271 will pop up.

New Discoveries: We are always looking for previously undocumented comic books. This year we located Four Color Comics #3 Series 1, from 1940, Myra North, 15-cent cover price variant. Research has been done and other dealers and Price Guide contributors have been interviewed and no one has ever seen a copy of this book. Could this be a new "holy grail" for Dell collectors?

A 15¢ cover variant for Four Color Comics #3 Series 1 (Myra North) was a new discovery.

Fanzines: Fanzines have continued to be a hot collectible this year. Fanzines published prior to 1970 when the first Comic Book Price Guide appeared in 1970 are generally scarce. Many early issues among those published in 1969 and before had print runs of 50 copies or less. There are a lot of titles that could have only a handful of copies surviving today. Some of the rarest zines have sold in the $1600 to $3500 range. Dale's Comic Fanzine Price Guide appeared in early 2015 and has a wealth of information for those who collect and appreciate the days of organized collecting.

This is a great era for both dealers and collectors. Comic books are easier to locate at any other time in the history of the hobby. If you have the means you can wake up, turn on your computer, buy a Spider-Man #1 and have it delivered to your door in a day. Several copies of most key issues are readily available at the touch of a button. The instant gratification available to hardcore collectors can be satisfying and addictive. For dealers, the ability to connect with buyers all over the world keeps the hobby moving. At no time have we been able to offer more comics to more people. It is likely that this era of Hollywood hype driving some of the more casual interest will subside at some point. But for the hardcore collectors of the hobby we don't think the need to keep checking off books from a want list will ever go away.

Comic book sales for 2015 remain very strong. Comics in all grades sold well due in part to the separation between the buyers who truly love to read and collect them, and the buyers who are buying for investment purposes. Buying the right titles in investment grades will almost certainly result in a nice return if held long enough. However, for the investor, the book will need to have been graded by CBCS or CGC since most of these investors lack the knowledge to accurately grade a comic or detect restoration. This portion of the comic book market accounts for many of the high profile sales we hear about, and also a large portion of the money spent on comic books each year.

The other side of the comic market is where collector activity exists and comics are bought to be enjoyed both by reading and collecting. In this world, a comic can be held, read, and appreciated, and even a lower grade comic can find a home. Although the dollars are not as much and the sales are not as high profile, the majority of the activity occurs in the collecting rather than the investing side of the comic book market. Similar scenarios are seen in almost all areas of collecting in other markets, and this always results in a healthy marketplace.

"He was truly one of the nicest, and most knowledgeable comic collectors and historians I've ever known. A true fixture in the hobby and a true gentleman."
- Bill Ponseti.
In memory of Stephen Barrington (1953-2016)

The 2015 year in review was a mixed bag of up and down sales across the board with fewer high-priced key issues selling. The Silver Age market did relatively well but only in mid-grade with prices to match.

Summer sales were excellent with DCs from the '60s attracting some big spenders. Marvels from this period are in short supply, keeping backstock slim at best. Overall, our Silver Age stock has been nearly wiped out with these issues becoming hard to replace. Bronze Age sales have been very strong because mid-grade prices on non-key issues are being snapped up due to lower prices. We rarely come across Golden Age comics and when we do, they can be hard to sell. The post-summer sales did fall off quite a bit, though.

Bronze Age Avengers, Iron Man and Thor sell well while DCs tend to move more slowly. The biggest jumps in modern sales have been Deadpool and Harley Quinn appearances. The big price jump in Harley Quinn's first appearance (Batman Adventures #12, $400) has scared off most of the budget-minded collectors. New Mutants #98, first Deadpool, is still a high-demand book that sells near the $300 mark for 9.2 grades. An overlooked book is X-Force #2 (1st full appearance of Deadpool) and #15, both depicting Deadpool covers and stories.

Marvel's Star Wars titles have been this company's biggest sellers. Old-school Marvel issues are up and down. Harley Quinn issues from the '90s are impossible to find as well as Deadpool's first series. Other comics that are on a lot of collectors' lists are Amazing Spider-Man #298-#300 (1st Todd McFarlane issues, including first Venom appearances). Marvel Super-Heroes Secret Wars #8 (1st black costume) go out as soon as they come in. McFarlane issues tend to be hit or miss after #300. Amazing Spider-Man #361 (1st Carnage) might be an under-valued issue.

There seems to be some confusion on Amazing Spider-Man #238 (1st Hobgoblin) and CGC's observations. According to the Guide, the price listed is the same with or without the Tattooz insert. CGC considers the issue incomplete without the insert. What about all of the Marvel issues that came out years ago with Kool-Aid packets in them? If left in there, they will eventually oxidize and damage the pages.

Overall, most back issues of Amazing Spider-Man seem to be steady sellers with anything under #150 doing well. Image's Spawn (#50 to #200) and The Walking Dead (any issues) are very big sellers. The Walking Dead trade paperbacks do well since fans of the TV show want to read earlier stories but are not prepared to pay big bucks for them. Most are not regular comic fans but enjoy reading the stories.

Slabbed comics are hard to sell though some collectors consider it almost a badge of honor to send one off to be graded.

We expanded our $1 and four-for-a-$1 sections and these sales have exploded. Fortunately, we have a steady stream of collections coming in to stock these boxes. We also have a Vertigo and MAX section in the cheap area (definitely not for children).

On the newer side, this year we've seen a lot of changes in readership among our subscribers and new customers thanks in part to the new shows on television, movies and other media. DC's readership took a dive after the Convergence storylines. Change may be good but DC and Marvel should have scrutinized the market a little better. Experimental title runs, complicated crossovers and unexpected character plots have some fans wondering why they restructured anything at all.

Sales are somewhat steady for Batman, Superman, Justice League, Cyborg and Robin, Son Of Batman. The Bizarro mini-series did well.

Boom's mini-series, Strange Fruit was one of the best stories of the year. The collaboration of J.G. Jones and Mark Waid made for inspired reading. In other sales, TMNT, Sonic and other cartoon-themed titles (My Little Pony) are attracting many younger readers. The placement of our children's racks at the front of the shop seems to be a very smart way for children to influence parents, grandparents and others to buy comics for them. On the teenage side, this audience continues to grow with key issues from the last 25 years being the most requested.

Pop Culture.

Think about that term for a moment. A culture of popular trends, ideas, and images within the global mainstream. A phenomena of 20th-21st century ideas and perceptions that can guide and shape, not only the American landscape of popularity, but all over the world. The thinking that Pop Culture is still a finite, cult representation of hipsters and introverts, only have to look at one date on the calendar...December 18, 2015.

Star Wars: The Force Awakens.

Never, and I mean NEVER have I seen such a collective mass force (no pun intended) of interest, nostalgia, and excitement for any movie in my lifetime. As I write this, we are 10 days away from the movie that 90% of the fans are looking forward to. The movie stands to make $200 million OPENING WEEKEND! Tickets have been SOLD OUT for opening day (unlike baseball) MONTHS in advance. I can type, with total GUARANTEE that the workforce in America will be slowed down to a crawl on 12/18. More sick/personal days will be used on this day more than any other during the year.

So, what does this have to do with the Overstreet COMIC BOOK Market report? It's the big picture that everyone seems to forget. As long as Pop Culture is alive, so too will this industry flourish. It's all connected from Star Wars to Star Trek, to Serenity to The Avengers, to Batman to The Walking Dead.

Long story short? Comic Books are not going away anytime soon. On with the market report...

Marvel: The new Secret Wars mini-series did well with the 1st issue...and then plummeted. Why? Because of the horrific changing schedule. An 8 issue mini series, suddenly turned into 9, and about 2 months in between issues (from #3-9) changed this mini-series from a "must read" into a "meh, I'll wait for a trade or $1 boxes." Many of the crossovers, which were waste of stories named after popular mini series (ie: Civil War, Planet Hulk), were just as much wastes of paper. The whole Secret Wars mini was just a debacle that wasted not only fans' money, but the retailers as well.

Marvel did however have a few saving graces. One was Spider-Gwen. A great selling title based on a throwaway character that Marvel had no real plans for. We did an exclusive cover by Jenny Frison for us, and it was a HUGE seller ($19.99). Over 1000 copies were sold within the first month! Right now, we sell regular #1 at $10, with #2 at $6

Although Spider-Gwen was huge, Star Wars dwarfed it 10-1! All back issues of the new Star Wars title are well above cover price for us. We were the cheapest at SDCC for 1st print #2 at $10! We did an exclusive cover for #1 by Alex Maleev (an homage cover to Tales of Suspense #39 with Boba Fett). $20 for the color exclusive and $25 for the black and white. The sales on those were nothing short of spectacular!

Any hint of a Marvel movie tie-in broke our inventory. A good example was A-Next #7 with the 1st appearance of Hope Pym. Normally a $1 book at best...not so fast...she's in the new Ant-Man movie...$20 for a NM/MT copy!

Right before NYCC, Marvel came out with three huge #1 titles... Iron Man #1, Doctor Strange #1 and Amazing Spider-Man #1. All three comics dominated the week with large sales. Doctor Strange was especially impressive as not even a publicity still was available for the upcoming movie, but people wanted to get in on the ground floor of this new series for preperation.

And it's not just the movies. Netflix's exclusive TV deal with Marvel is also keeping everyone on their toes. Jessica Jones has back issue prices of Alias moving. A set of #1-28 went for $230 and a single issue of #1 sold for $75...20 minutes after we had purchased it. Crazy!

DC Comics: Convergence was just awful. DC's big event of 2015 made NO sense to readers and very little profit for retailers, except to those who took full advantage of the full returnability of the mini-series and profited from the variant covers. The Adam Hughes 1:100 variant for #0 was a big seller for us in the beginning at $100 (now down to $50). DC HAD to have taken a bath on this (well, there's really no wondering... they DID).

Now their newest project The Dark Knight III: The Master Race, shows a little bit more promise, but the problem is the sequel from over 10 years ago left such a bad taste in readers' mouths (mine included), this third story has more of an uphill climb than the first mini-series ever had. We did an exclusive Matt Wagner cover to this, and the response has been just OK.

Batman/TMNT #1 just came out, and it seems to be a hit. The 1:50 variant has sold as high as $75 for us. Such an odd pairing with two popular genre characters...how could this title NOT make money?

Image Comics: Saga and The Walking Dead. Those two titles are the flagship for Image right now. Everything else is a distant "done in one"(meaning the 1st issue sells great, but then by the 2nd issue, no one cares). Even titles that have been optioned for movies/TV are generating nothing past issue #1 (ie: Outcast, Descender). The two new Brian K. Vaughn series We Stand On Guard and Paper Girls did well out of the gate. Everything else is stagnant.

Dark Horse Comics: Star Wars is gone. How is Dark Horse surviving? It's certainly NOT by reviving Barb Wire. Even the gorgeous Adam Hughes covers couldn't help sell this series. Some things should just remain in the past. Not the case with Fight Club though! The new series (a sequel of sorts) has been doing exceptionally well! Having the series being written by series creator Chuck Palahniuk was a step in the right direction.

Independents: Black Mask titles have been on fire due to the low print runs, but the prices are based on speculation more so than story telling. This could actually hurt the company later on as people are purchasing due to quick price increases rather than compelling storylines (ie: 1990 Valiant titles).

Invader Zim is one of Oni's popular sellers with #1 selling at the $10 mark. I wish I would have ordered heavier on Rick and Morty #1. I finally sat down to watch this on Adult Swim, and have now decreed this to be my new favorite animated series! Why has there never been a block of Adult Swim titles? The boat was missed on titles like Aqua Teen Hunger Force and Venture Bros. Both would have generated series interest AND money.

CGC Sales: A few years ago, I purchased a long box of Bloodshot #1 from the '90s (exceedingly cheap) and decided to get them graded, as there were rumblings of a movie. I was laughed at by dealers. A lot. I explained that since Marvel was cornering the action movie market, how long until some of the other publishers were going to be scouted by Hollywood? To me, the Valiant comics made sense. Just sold my 9th copy of Bloodshot #1 CGC 9.8 at $100. Who's laughing now?

Other CGC sales include...

Incredible Hulk #181 (6.0) $1400
Incredible Hulk #181 (8.5) $2200
Major Victory #1 (3.0) $400
Daredevil #1 (UK Edition 2.5) $750

Jim Berry
Collector/Dealer

As I indicated I'm a small-time, long-time collector/dealer living in Portland, Oregon. I don't have a brick and mortar shop but I do maintain a network of family, friends, and patrons ferreting out collections for me all over the country. I also run ads in local newspapers and troll Craigslist and various auction websites, most notably, eBay.

I maintain an eBay store at JB233 where I do a fair amount of selling. No matter what I sell, I start my auctions at $3.99 with no reserve. Part of my interest is just to see how things sell in various grades. In general, I find that books sell for 10-60% of Guide unless it's a key or rare or movie-related. Depending on the title and grade, whether it's certified, and the timing and quality of the listing, key and rare comics often sell for multiples of Guide.

I collect comics from all eras but am most drawn to pre-Code Horror and World War II era comics with Schomburg war covers, the more weird and disturbing, the better. I also enjoy current comics and try to keep abreast of the trends and the new shows and movies.

But time is precious. And, these days, the options are nearly endless. I'm a big fan of Warren Ellis and, lately, I've been catching up on the "Everything Dies" run-up to Secret Wars. Good on ya, Jonathan Hickman. My daughter and I have also enjoyed reading IDW's My Little Pony comics as well as Mouse Guard by David Peterson – great stuff.

Speaking of creators, I haven't been as busy a collector this year, mainly because I've found a life as a creator. Of Dust And Blood, A Story From Custer's Fight At The Greasy Grass will appear in mid-late 2016. Val Mayerik is the artist and he really knocked it out of the park. Very limited first run thanks to a successful Kickstarter from 2013 - but snag a copy or two if you can. It's going to be a beauty.

Here's my favorite collection find from 2015: It was a Craigslist garage sale in Vancouver, Washington. The owner was a former postal worker in his late 60s who collected in the '80s/'90s. About 500 books. All hand-picked independents and undergrounds from the '80s-'90s. Comics of no particular value. Comics that (mostly) aren't even listed in our guide. Frankly, some really bad comics that no one has ever heard of but also some that were great reads. I'm still making my way through this curated collection of weird, indy comics - Black and white art, gritty stories. So many of these indy books were produced with little cash but, clearly, pure comic passion. Try to track down a copy of R.A.K. Graphics, Stephen Darklord #1 or Ripper #6 by Aircel in 1990. Ever heard of Cosmos #1 by MicMac Comics from 1986? How about Renegades #3 by Age Of Heroes Comics – or, my personal fave, The Protectors #2, published by New York Comics in 1986. What makes The Protectors #2 so great is that it has a chronicle of events published in the bottom gutter of the book that goes through the entire issue and tells the sordid story of how the creators (some of whom were still high school students) battled to get their books to print and to find distribution. A rough ride in the time before computers and cellphones. (Give them another 10 years and they'll be smokin' hot.)

Also, there are the undergrounds from the late '60s and early '70s that don't get a whole lot of attention in the mainstream. I came across 2 collections of '60s and '70s undergrounds this year and snagged them both. Some really incredible stuff from Crumb, Shelton, Wilson, Corben and others. Cool stuff. Is it time to integrate those books into the Guide?

The movies continue to dictate interest in old comics. I get it - but some characters generate more interest in their 1st appearance/origin issues than others. Clearly, this has a lot to do with the movie characters, how well they're fleshed out onscreen, and how people respond to them. There's no rhyme or reason really but it's fun to watch who breaks out and who appears on the scene with little change to their books value. One book that has always baffled me is the enormous spike in Tales To Astonish #13, now $700 in VG! Groot was cool in the Guardians movie but geez! I imagine it has something to do with the fact that those lovely pre-hero Marvels from the late '50s/early '60s are so hard to find in high grade . . . and hard to find period.

Another crazy book I watched on eBay – maybe the strangest auction all year – was for a copy of Cindy #37, a Timely GGA title from the late '40s. It was in a ragged GD that ended for $889. That book guides for $14 in GD. I would love it if someone could clue me in on why that book went for 63.5 times Guide. (it was a great headlights cover – but that multiple is, by far, greater than any other I watched this year) I'd also call your attention to the pair of Archie #50s I have listed below in my Significant Sales. It just goes to show that, on eBay (and all auction sites), there are bargains to be had . . . and fortunes to lose.

A shout out to Aaron Meyers on Twitter who posts his "One Dollar Pick Ups" – always cool. Another shout out to John Hill of Hills Of Comics. He's about to move into a 7200 square foot shop that will house 100+ long boxes in Auburn, Washington. (#LivingTheDream) – And, to my good pal, Aaron McConnell and his book, The Comic Book History Of Beer which, as I'm writing, is on the New York Times Best Seller List for graphic novels.

And, a final comment, a thanks to Mr. Overstreet, as always, and his hearty crew at Gemstone. Without you all, we'd have no compass to steer by.

Good luck to you in 2016.

Tim Bildhauser
CBCS Comics - Foreign Comic Specialist

Hello and welcome to, probably, the most unusual market report you'll read this year. There's so much for me to cover that I almost don't know where to start. To understand the market for foreign editions you have to, first, have a little bit of an idea of what and why collectors are buying them.

During the last seven years, there's been a whole new breed of collectors increasing in numbers within the hobby. They're far less focused on the grade or value of a book than they are with the uniqueness of their collection. The way they've chosen to go about establishing that is through collecting foreign editions. The majority of the collectors pursuing these books will work on building what we refer to as sets, meaning they will select a book, whether it be a key issue or just a personal favorite, and track it down from as many countries as they can find where it was published. Others are building runs from specific countries be it Mexico, Germany etc. Then there are those building what is referred to as a global run, a story line or, usually, short series that they seek out from every corner of the globe.

One of the more interesting facets of these international gems is that what may be a key issue here in the States may be of little to no interest of the collectors in other countries. That works the other way around as well, a book that isn't in much demand here may be highly valued overseas for altogether different reasons. Sometimes there no rhyme or reason to it.

Many people out there might wonder why anyone would want to collect comics printed in a language they may or may not be able to read. Think about it though, these books were never meant to share space within the confines of a single collection and when you see 5, 10, 20 or more copies of the same book from as many different countries it give you a whole new perspective on collecting.

This is such a new and growing market that it's virtually impossible to give any indication on what one would expect to pay for most books. The newness of it has pricing in complete chaos. There doesn't seem to be a week that goes by without at least one foreign edition being brought to my desk in the grading room to be entered into our system.

That being said, here's some of what I've observed in the last year:

Mexico: Some of the most sought after books on the market right now appear to be the La Prensa editions of Marvel Silver Age keys. The majority of them don't show up on the open market very often and when they do they don't last very long. These are among the most prized books in a foreign collection as they're contemporary with their American counterparts. In most cases they hit the newsstands in Mexico within 3 to 6 months of the U.S. editions.

Right alongside them are the Editorial Novaro editions of DC material. These go back a bit further (into the 1950s) and there aren't very many Silver Age key issues that Novaro didn't publish. There are some you'll see available regularly but there are many that, again, don't turn up for sale very often.

Europe: This is a whole different market, the majority of collectors buying foreign books here in the States are hunting for the Silver and Bronze Age books. There is, however, a strong market for the country specific exclusive variants that sport original covers not published in the U.S. These are generally done in limited runs and seem to garner a good amount of interest.

Australia: These tend to be difficult to track down, particularly the Newton (Marvel) & K.G. Murray (DC) issues. There are many keys that were printed by both publishers and in more instances than I can count only a few copies of some have surfaced. Print runs were low and from all reports, copies that were returned to the publishers were destroyed.

South Africa: The Supercomix issues are among some the most difficult foreign books to find. They're so elusive that some of them may as well be ghosts. On the rare occasions that they hit the market they're gone almost instantly.

Brazil: These are a favorite amongst collectors. If you've never held a Brazilian Ebal book in your hands you can't understand the amazing production quality that was adhered to from the 1960s through the 1970s. They really knew how to produce beautiful books, unfortunately because of the humidity in the country there is almost always some amount of rust on the staples of these books when you find them.

Canada: The Editions Heritage books from Quebec have become quite popular with the collectors here in the U.S. Again, print runs on these weren't very high as they were printed and distributed within the province.

I've also started to see more activity on the U.K. Pence copies. There doesn't seem to be the same resistance to price on them and there are even those who prefer to have a Pence price copy of a book than the U.S. price.

Among the top books on foreign collectors' want lists, in no particular order, are:

Relatos Fabulosos #160 (Editorial Novaro, Mexico) which prints House of Secrets #92. This is an incredibly tough book to find and we've only seen about 7 copies surface in as many years.

Los 4 Fantasticos #1 (La Prensa, Mexico) it prints Fantastic Four #1 and was published within a few month of the U.S. release of FF #1.

New Mutants #98 (Marvel, Australia) this AUS price variant is elusive and sells almost instantly anytime one is listed for sale.

Enaintep Man #483 (Kabanas Hellas, Greece) is the Greek edition of Amazing Spider-Man #300 and thus far only a few collectors in the States have managed to locate copies, even with contacts in Greece looking for it.

Mighty World of Marvel #198 & Super Spider-Man #178 (Marvel U.K., United Kingdom) are, respectively, the British editions of Incredible Hulk #181 & Amazing Spider-Man #129. These two are always in demand and although easier to find seem to sell steadily.

All in all it's been very interesting to watch the market on a global scale. I'd like nothing more than to go into more detail in this report, as this is just the tip of the iceberg, but in order to do that I'd need at least a few pages. If you're interested in learning more about these books and seeing some examples you can get more information at the FCC site (foreigncomiccollector.webs.com) where you'll find links to the FCC forum, several collectors' gallery sites and even a few foreign databases. You can always contact me directly as well at the FCC forum (username lscomics) or at tbildhauser@cbcscomics.com

Before I get to my Market Report, like every year, I would like to thank Bob Overstreet for keeping our hobby going for 46 years! I was just a kid when I picked up my first Guide and still can't live without it! I would be remiss if I did not mention J.C. Vaughn and Mark Huesman and their team for all the hard work they also put into this amazing book! Also a big "Thank-you!" to Steve Geppi and his family for keeping this going.

Being one of the owners of CBCS, as well as the Primary Grader, I have to stay impartial and stay away from pricing. This market report will just give you a glance of what we have seen being submitted to CBCS, so that you can see where the market is heavy.

Just like last year, movies and TV shows are making certain comics, that were once cheap, or even hard to sell, the most submitted. This could be speculation, or just that the character(s) is super hot once the movie or TV show proves to be great. I believe that this is not only great for our hobby's prices, but brings even more new collectors in.

And, just like last year, key issues (blue chip) are coming in like crazy. For Golden Age, Silver Age and Bronze Age, it's all the most popular characters. What is still very popular is classic covers and World War II covers from the G.A. Heck, a CBCS-certified Suspense #3 (great cover!) sold for just over $173,000, the highest price ever paid for a non-super hero comic! Crazy!

Amazing Fantasy #15 is the key for the S.A. (Even though I feel that Fantastic Four #1 should be the key as it started the Marvel Age). Incredible Hulk #181 is the key for the B.A. generation and it seems that New Mutants #98 and Batman Adventures #12 are keys for the next generation.

Restored and conserved comics seem to be finding their place as it is easier to afford a key issue for much cheaper than an un-restored copy. I also believe it has helped that restoration/conservation has moved to a point that the books look great.

As always, I want to give a shout out to our hobby's greatest charity, The Hero Initiative. Hero gives back to those in need who created the wonderful characters we all enjoy. Please check them out at www.HeroInitiative.org. This marks the seventh consecutive year that there is a Hero Initiative exclusive limited edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, I hope that is the one you are reading right now, as all the proceeds go to this wonderful charity.

Another thing I would love to talk about, as always, is Geppi's Entertainment Museum. A wonderful place! The history of our hobby, combined with special rotating exhibits, makes a trip there one of the most exciting experiences a comic book fan can have. Truly an amazing and magical place to visit!

I hope more of you can join us for the comic collector dinners held at various conventions, particularly the one in Chicago. It's a fantastic opportunity for veterans and novices alike get together with creators such as Neal Adams, Don Rosa, Joe Jusko, Stuart Sayger, and our hobbyist legends like Maggie Thompson, Gary Colabuono, Michele Nolan, among others. We gather together, share stories about our great hobby, talk about life, and enjoy a great meal. If you haven't attended before, join us this year and in the years to come!

I will end this report the way I have done for years. This is for the newer collectors in our hobby, as I hope that the more seasoned collectors already know this. Even though I believe in this market and its future, and have been in it since I was a kid, there is no such thing as a "free lunch." If you are going to invest in comic books, you had better love what you buy. If the economy ever gets really bad, just like if you own stocks, precious metals, real estate, or anything else considered an "investment," you will not be able to sell them for a really high price very quickly and you can certainly not use comics to house or feed you and your family in times of need. The best advice I can give, and been doing so for as long as I remember, is this: "Buy what you love and can afford." It's really that simple.

Just enjoy collecting and reading comic books, enjoy the friendships we make in this amazing hobby, look around and enjoy all the cool stuff our hobby has to offer from original comic art, to movies and TV shows based on the characters we hold dear, to comic memorabilia, and it will all seem worthwhile in the end.

I hope to see and talk to many of you reading this at the conventions that I and CBCS will attend! Thank you for taking the time to read this and, as always, happy collecting!

As I indicated the last two years - buy Iron Man #55. Last year I said, "Buy it." It went up 41%. People overthink this stuff. Brave and the Bold #25 with the 1st Suicide Squad, I feel will move up. "Women Power" is finally happening. Supergirl is a wonderful show, and Black Widow appearances are hot.

Marvel is going to "redo" Spider-Man again, so does Gwen Stacy have to die again. Guardians of the Galaxy movies and comics have less history binding the plots. Guardians could lead to a meeting of Howard the Duck meeting Donald Duck.

DC has conquered the TV medium. Supergirl and The Flash are light Silver Age-style TV.

Diversity reigns in comic books. A recent study alleged that 47% of comic fans are female. Supergirl and new versions of Betty and Veronica will enhance this (and aren't we happy about this.)

Prices on the Rise: I'm feeling Brave and the Bold as a real sleeper! Issues #28-30 lead right to Justice League of America #1. First Suicide Squad in issue #25 has merit. This title has been like a "kid sister" to Showcase, and that should change. Speaking of Showcase, early Atom issues should be watched. Tales to Astonish #13 (1st Groot) is considered scarce. Journey Into Mystery #85 & #112 have key Loki appearances. More Fun Comics #73 with the 1st Green Arrow and Aquaman is terrific. Flash Comics #1 with the debuts of 3 JSA members: Flash, Hawkman, and Johnny Thunder.

Prices on the Decline: My reticence continues with Green Lantern and Spider-Man "lost in the movies." This could be seen as a good buying opportunity. I always like to buy Hulk when the market is grey. The confusion over the original Ant-Man (Dr. Pym) continues to hurt that character.

Brave and the Bold #25, the first app. of Suicide Squad, is bound to move up in price.

It's hard to imagine that we're closing in on the end of 2015. What an incredible ride it's been once again. If I had to choose one word to describe the market this year more than any other it would be "speculation." This sector of the marketplace was in overdrive more than I can recall in recent memory. Collectors and people new or reacquainting themselves to the hobby were constantly trying to get their hands on the latest hot and trending books faster than their fellow collectors. As I've stated in past reports, if you didn't already have the book in your collection, then you were already paying a premium no matter which point of the frenzy you jumped in. What we are beginning to notice is the market becoming diluted with so many new shows, movies and rumors that the books that become hot have a much shorter time period of holding that hot status as collectors are bombarded with information overload and quickly switch to the next hot book. We also saw more people specifically looking for first appearances and key books and not so interested in completing runs or filling holes in their collections. This new hybrid buyer was the fastest growing and most visible segment of the market as they searched for books like a day trader wanting the next hot stock tip.

As we approach the end of 2015 we are pleased to have completed our 3rd full year of operations and find ourselves extremely busy with many projects entering the 1st quarter of year four. We thought that it would be difficult to maintain sales results from 2014 due to the strong US dollar keeping many global collectors on the sideline, and although we did notice a dip in sales from certain geographic areas heavily affected by the currency exchange, the difference was made up by the exchange premiums and it was another banner year for PNJ Comics.

We may sound like a broken record but some things are important and deserve to be repeated. The two strategies we incorporate best are being "first to market" with some of the highest graded copies of upward trending comic books and magazines and/or "having the only available copy for sale at certain times throughout the year."

Taking risks on books and being willing to spend more than the competition or collecting public has given us an opportunity to land some incredible books. We continue to focus attention on books that aren't showing up on others' radar providing us a competitive advantage. I can't stress enough how important research is. Knowledge and research are keys in this industry and being able to forecast what can likely be the new hot books has assisted tremendously. Research often allowed us to be 6 to 12 months ahead of the curve of upward trending books. The big change we made this year was retaining our best copies and not selling before the books realize their true potential once our hunch is validated. Patience is a virtue and holding out to realize fair market value on hot books served us well.

To ensure that cash is flowing for other projects we can't sit and think "what could be". It is important to be satisfied knowing a sale has been made and the bills are paid. Holding a book too long can have the opposite effect and not selling earlier could mean the book is no longer on people's want lists and there is no sale at all. This is particularly risky with "hot" comics as that window of opportunity is often short.

A comic dealer not using eBay to complement their own website or brick and mortar store is hindering their ability to increase sales and gain awareness of their own store or site. No matter how big a dealer thinks they are, eBay remains the undisputed champion for people shopping for comics in one place and helps drive traffic to our own website.

In 2015 we rolled the dice and held some eBay auctions and found that they were not as successful as leaving the books as Buy it Now in our eBay store. It helped validate our opinion that timing can be everything when selling a book(s). Oh well, you can't win them all and it's not stopping us from holding an upcoming auction with a near complete run of high grade CGC Star Wars books in early December. We'll let the chips fall where they may and remain optimistic about the timing of that auction.

Many factors could be attributed to a poor sale: an eBay seller with poor feedback, poorly described auction listing and running an auction during a particular time period that could be missing potential customers not aware of the auction. Listing a book and willing to listen to offers will often yield better results. Auctions are only truly great if the book is rarely offered for sale or is the "hot book of the month".

As we mentioned earlier, Hollywood is heavily diluting television and big screens with far more superhero themed material than one person can follow and that has created a sense of "quantity over quality" and I'm not even following 25% of what is coming out. There just isn't enough time. Shows I enjoyed watching such as The Flash are starting to feel like teenage soap operas and I've lost interest and find it makes me gloss past other superhero shows without giving them a chance. I haven't even watched an episode of Supergirl yet and the way things are going, I probably won't. Movies and shows don't have that WOW factor that they received in 2012 to 2014 when movies like Avengers and Guardians of the Galaxy first hit the big screen. This increased publicity is making it more mainstream and bringing new blood to the hobby but it's not the same collector that it was many years ago and comic dealers have to adapt their strategy. Books such as Batman Adventures #12 which has just exploded due to Harley Quinn climbed above $2,000 and are starting to come down a little but will certainly drop further after the release of the Suicide Squad movie. Does anyone remember the big bucks being shelled out for Rocket Raccoon and his 1st appearance in Marvel Premiere #7? That book now sits on shelves collecting dust as people aren't able to attain the same price prior to the movie being released. It'll probably do well again when Guardians of the Galaxy 2 is released.

High grade, raw books were not bringing the same premiums we saw as in years past on higher priced books. For instance, if a book was a true NM+ (9.6) it would bring 200% of NM- (9.2) prices. This still holds true for lower priced books but collectors are hesitant as the books become more expensive. People are 9.8 crazy! Price spreads between certified 9.8 and 9.6 became significant. For example, DC Comics Presents #47 in CGC 9.6 would bring approximately $200 but 9.8 copies would bring $500. Special Marvel Edition #15 in 9.8 brings $1,000 but collectors aren't willing to pay $400 for a 9.6.

We saw a significant upward trend with collectors scrambling to pick up the 1st appearances of female super heroes and villains along with ethnic superheroes and villains. Popular requests are Batman Adventures #12, Power Man #24, Hero For Hire #1, Marvel Premiere #19 & #21, Black Lightning #1 and Ultimate Fallout #4. Characters such as Misty Knight and Colleen Wing are coming into their own. There's still a lot of untapped semi-keys, so do your research folks!

Earlier I mentioned that comic dealers need to adapt strategies with the changing market. We saw people searching only for key books and 1st appearances. This resulted in us not buying collections in volume as we once did in the past because we didn't want to be stuck with the daunting task of processing books that just don't sell. We were much happier paying higher prices for sellable books and buying smaller collections as it allowed us to utilize our time more efficiently. There's only so much time in a day and we found this has helped streamline the day to day operations and concentrate efforts much more effectively.

Canadian Price Variants & Newsstand Editions: This section is always worth discussing and we've advocated it for years and seeing a continued increase in interest and premiums paid for Canadian Price Variants so we thought it was worth noting again in this year's report with some new information.

With lower print runs and distribution of the Canadian Price Variants circulated to the general public through venues such as grocery and convenience stores on spinner racks, many were abused as they were enjoyed for their intended audience and not die hard collectors buying at specialty shops with direct editions. This has made it very difficult to find the books in high grade. Most copies are in lower condition than Very Fine (8.0).

We sell high grade Canadian Price Variants at consistent premiums over the regular print run. As a side note, we did have strong sales with Canadian Price Variants. In general, the spread on the premiums paid was slightly down from 2014 but there were still some record breaking results. We sold a copy of Star Wars #101 Canadian Price Variant in CGC (9.8) for over $400. These are tough books to find in high grade. I'm sure as interest continues to grow we will see an increase of these books coming out from collections and have already noticed other sellers listing Canadian Price Variants. This year, non-keys sold for 10%-20% above Guide and keys continued to bring 100% to 1000% above Guide price. PNJ Comics is proud to have hundreds, even thousands of these books in high grade. Although mainstream titles naturally perform better, when it comes to Canadian Price Variants, all titles sell well. Make no mistake, it's a niche market but has created scarcity amongst an age in books that many people thought were mass produced. It is very important to note that these books should not be mistaken as Canadian Editions or reprints! These are U.S produced books that were distributed to the Canadian market only. We want to make that distinction clear as grading companies are simply listing "Canadian Edition" on the label when it fact it should be correctly labeled with the notation of "75¢ Canadian Price Variant" for example.

Just as difficult to find in high grade are newsstand editions particularly from the late '80s to present date. Today, newsstand editions are still being produced and represent about 1% of the entire marketplace. Talk about scarce! If people wanted something to speculate on they would be looking for and purchasing today's newsstand books as they will be nearly impossible to locate even 5 years from now. They are often in lower grade than their direct edition counterparts as mentioned above in the sources of distribution. Although not as scarce as Canadian newsstand editions they are scarce in Very Fine+ or better and once again bring consistent premium over the direct editions. These types of niche books on today's newsstands would be a great long term investment in 10 years from now as they are low risk and very affordable at cover price.

Notable Sales - Uncertified copies (Prices in USD): Archie Comics #78 VF- $300, Archie Comics #271 VF $120, Archie's Joke Book #44 VF- $370, Venus #12 – Canadian Ed. GD/VG $320, Strange Adventures #180 VG $125, Marvel Chillers #3 NM $70, Daredevil #105 NM $170, Brave and the Bold #54 VG $200, Incredible Hulk Annual #1 VF+ $210, The Tick #1 & #2 NM- set $200, Batman #232 VF- $400, Giant-Size Defenders #3 NM+ $160.

Notable Sales - Certified (CGC) copies (Prices in USD): Star Wars #1 CGC 9.8 $2,000, Batman Adventures #12 CGC 9.8 $1,500, Daredevil #1 CGC 1.5 $480, Scalped #1 CGC 9.8 $370, Hawkman #4 CGC 7.0 $650, Strange Tales #89 in both CGC 2.0 $415 and 3.0 $465, Archie's Madhouse #22 CGC 6.0 $630, Spectacular Spider-Man #64 CGC 9.8 $800, X-Factor #19 CGC 9.8 $270, Batman #251 CGC 8.0 $385, Batman #357 CGC 9.8 $680, Batman #635 CGC 9.8 $265, X-Men #101 CGC 9.8 $1,500, Jungle Action #6 CGC 9.2 $195, Star Wars #1 CGC 9.4 $400, Alias #1 CGC 9.6 $210, Star Wars #42 CGC 9.8 $700, Captain Britain #8 CGC 9.8 $1,215, Uncanny X-Men #266 CGC 9.8 $370, Marvel Premiere #15 CGC 9.2 $538, Avengers #57 CGC 9.0 $1,200, Moon Knight #1 CGC 9.8 $210, Marvel Tales #137 CGC 9.8 $145, New Mutants #98 CGC 9.8 $880, Marvel Super Action #18 CGC 9.4 $165, All Star Comics #58 CGC 9.8 $815, Uncanny X-Men #164 CGC 9.8 $170, Astonishing Tales #24 CGC 9.8 $330, DC Comics Presents #26 CGC 9.8 $580, Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 6.0 $1,230, and Super Friends #7 CGC 9.8 $450.

Silver Age: This genre continues to be undervalued in the Guide and overshadowed, at times, by the speculation market. All grades sell above Overstreet Price Guide price levels as it's tougher and tougher to find these quality books. One thing we can't stress enough is to look through these books closely as we started to find many coupons cut out of interior pages and even missing ad pages as these books were enjoyed by its intended audience during the late '50s and '60s. In our local market it is nearly impossible to find DC Silver Age and when we do we don't pass up the opportunity to purchase them in any grade.

The most common grades seem to be VG to FN and it's becoming scarce to find them in higher grades above FN. Titles that did pick up were Hero issues of Tales to Astonish, Tales of Suspense and Flash. Titles that continue to sell consistently are Batman and Detective Comics and a slight gain in interest to World's Finest and Action Comics. If examined closely, these titles are chocked full of little keys and are undervalued.

Tryout books like DC's Showcase are picking up more interest as well. Strange Adventures and My Greatest Adventure are also catching notice with collectors with fun Sci-Fi stories of the time. What we are never asked if we have in stock are Pedigree books from this genre. It seems collectors don't care as much as they once did with these niche books say 10 years ago. Archie books from the Silver Age are catching fire and are extremely tough to find in nicer condition than Fine (6.0) There are some very popular books such as Archie's Girls, Betty and Veronica #75 with the infamous story where Betty and Veronica sell their souls to the Devil. This book has a notorious urban legend style story about a pastor asking his congregation to seek out and destroy all the copies so that the youth weren't influenced. This book brings high prices whenever it's available and we even sold a VG/FN for $175. We also sold a CGC 6.0 copy of Archie's Madhouse #22 for $630 and have seen other higher grade copies dwarf our sales result. These sales complimented our sale of Josie #1 in VG for $500 in 2014. There are also even rarer price variants of these Archie books with 15¢ cover prices instead of 12¢. Also, many of the Archie Giants have a 35¢ Canadian Price Variant instead of the 25¢ price. These books are extremely difficult to find and some advisors believe them to be 100 times more scarce compared to the regular priced editions.

Bronze Age: Our favorite era of books! There are so many obscure titles that were released in the early '70s. Last year we mentioned how there are many reprint books of keys that weren't printed too much later than the original keys themselves. For instance, we sold a few copies of Marvel Tales #106 reprinting the Punisher's 1st appearance in CGC 9.8 for $250 each. These books are often tougher to find in high grade compared to the original key as no one gave them any thought to being desirable when they were released and scoffed at as being unwanted. For the most part, they were but it's difficult finding them now if you're trying to put high grade runs together of Marvel Tales, Marvel Super Action, Marvel Triple Action and various other reprint titles, especially the 20¢ horror reprint titles like Chamber of Chills and Fear. We were happy to see that Astonishing Tales #24 with Fin Fang Foom received some attention as it features his 2nd appearance. Yes, he appears in issue #23 but that's in memory and not in present story with a great battle cover that #24 has. We sold a copy in CGC 9.8 for a record $300 USD.

We sold so many high grade Star Wars books throughout 2015 as the buzz for the movies continues. We sold copies of Star Wars #1 in CGC 9.8 for $2,000 USD and all issue numbers are bringing record prices. There was a lull for a few months after the summer but things are picking up as the movie is merely weeks away at this point.

There appears to be some interest revolved around Frank Miller's run of Daredevil due mainly to the hit Netflix show which is a gritty match for Miller's storylines. CGC 9.8 copies of #171, 174, 176 and 178 bring strong record numbers. Punisher has made a late surge this year with talk of the character appearing in the Netflix show. Copies of Amazing Spider-Man #129 jumped with the first announcements and have settled slightly but it'll cement the book as one of the most important Bronze Age books for years to come. Other climbers in this era were DC Comics Presents #26, Marvel Premiere #15 to #25 and Firestorm #1.

The one character that is white hot at the moment is Moon Knight. We aren't certain what is causing his 1st appearance to increase so rapidly and believe it's collectors speculating that his time is finally due. Copies of Werewolf by Night #32 are bringing record prices in any grade. Books such as Moon Knight #1, Marvel Spotlight #28, #29 and Marvel Preview #21 are sought after but not nearly as hot as his 1st appearance. Some of Moon Knight's earliest appearances are in Rampaging Hulk magazine but they don't seem to catch on as much at this point because Moon Knight doesn't appear on the covers.

Copper Age: After a strong two year increase in prices, Copper Age back issues are adjusting to the increase in availability of high grade issues coming out of collections as we saw dealers focused mainly on Gold, Silver and Bronze begin to scramble to find these books as well. We still continue to set record prices for both third party graded and raw books from this era by incorporating the strategies we mentioned above. Chocked full of overlooked keys, this era is causing a feeding frenzy as collectors and mostly speculators scramble to scoop the latest undervalued key.

As of this writing we sold a CGC 9.8 copy of Suicide Squad #1 boasting a tough black cover that shows off even the most minute flaws for a record price of nearly $500. As mentioned last year, I think the most underrated series of this era are still The New Teen Titans/Tales of the Teen Titans and Legion of Super-Heroes. Both titles are filled with keys galore. Add to the mix that there are the scarce Canadian Price Variants in these titles and you have a potential powerhouse. DC Comics Presents #26 is seeing steady growth with the first appearance of the New Teen Titans so it's just a matter of time that the rest of the title explodes.

Batman keys in this genre are beginning to peak lately. We sold a CGC 9.8 copy of Batman #357 featuring the 1st full appearance of Killer Croc, for $650 USD and other keys such as Detective Comics #608 with Anarky's 1st appearance are garnering attention and still have potential to become big. It's not well known to a lot of collectors but Batman and Detective Comics books of this genre were some of the lowest print runs in the history of the titles and it's not too easy to find them in high grade. Other hot issues are Batman #358, #386 and Detective Comics #523 and 524. These books are extremely undervalued in the Overstreet Price Guide and should be adjusted by at least 25% to 50%.

There was a threshold or price ceiling on certain books that collectors are willing to spend. For example, Cheryl Blossom is extremely popular and collectors are looking for her 1st appearance all the time but once copies reach a certain price barrier they don't sell as quickly. If a VF- (7.5) raw copy is available for under $200 it is likely to move quicker than a certified copy in 9.2 that someone is asking $900. It would be tough to even sell a 9.2 certified copy for $500.

Modern Age: Well, we didn't listen to our own advice on this genre. We decided to give the variant issue market a tryout for a few titles and found the experience exhausting.

It's far too much of a weekly grind to put so much time and effort into getting these books in stock to only see them drop significantly in price. Sure, there are a few books that stick but it's just a gamble. We found our time and efforts are better served elsewhere and will let the speculators grind it out. But you have to experiment and now that we tried it we can certainly say it wasn't worth it. The only shops that are making money with this material, and rightfully so, are the ones that step up each week with the subscription orders and can then ask the strong prices these variants bring at the date of release. They have to order so much inventory that it helps them recoup their expenses for ordering so many copies.

Image continued to pump out first issues of new titles trying to see what would stick while DC and Marvel missed the mark with the event series of Convergence and Secret Wars leaving those publishers to head back to the drawing board to come up with ways to hold the public's interest. It was disappointing to see an extremely well done series such as Afterlife With Archie stall at issue #8. We hope this book continues soon as it was the most well-written Modern book.

Alias is starting to garner attention and prices are zooming to the moon as Jessica Jones premieres on Netflix. Put it on your "To read list." In fact, anything Bendis wrote is well received and collectors are starting to pay attention to the titles he has touched. Other hot books we have a tough time keeping in stock are Runaways #1, Captain Marvel #14 and Captain Marvel #17 - 2nd Print. We also sold out consistently on Edge of Spider-Verse #2.

Well, there you have it! That wraps up another year in comics from our perspective. We look forward to 2016 and are excited with the overall health of the industry. As always, I need to send my love, gratitude and appreciation to my wife and son, Nicole and Jack. Without them there is no PNJ COMICS. Of course, to my father, without you there would have never been weekly trips to the comic shop each Saturday morning to fill our brown paper bags with treasures. Thank you for letting me do something I'm passionate about and feeling like a kid in a comic store each day.

December 2014 seems like so very long ago now since I wrote my last market report and as the 2015 Christmas season bears down upon us that means another year is rapidly coming to an end. That means it's time for my next Overstreet report. So with once again some 35 comic, art and toy shows attended as a baseline, what can be said about the year that has gone by so quickly? For those seeking to buy comics for investment purposes (which really is not the only reason to ever buy a comic but most certainly is an important one and the reason we are here) there are many areas to explore.

So where are those investment areas? Well to begin, and acknowledging that I am starting to sound like a broken record, one trend that continues to show no sign of ending anytime soon is that superhero movies continue to be winners at the box office and those movies are impacting the books of many of the characters that have appeared in them or that will appear in the near future. DC's Harley Quinn's appearance in the Suicide Squad movie is sending her key appearances up rapidly and is one area of investment growth to look at. One key Marvel standout for investment appreciation and that perhaps already can be considered a horse that has already long since escaped the barn is Strange Tales #110, the first appearance of Doctor Strange. In 2015, the book flat out exploded in value and does not seem to be losing steam now that the good Doctor will be getting his own movie soon. Logically even without his future movie appearance this book has long been undervalued so it's as much as a market correction as it is interest in his future movie appearance. Another hot and long time undervalued book is Action Comics #252 the first appearance of Supergirl. With the success of the TV show, this is quickly becoming a key book with the value it deserves as prices are rapidly rising for it.

Last year I said that the success of Arrow, Gotham and The Flash TV shows make the comics their characters appeared in an enticing opportunity for collectors, and in the case of The Flash this is true with many of his key issues such as Showcase #4 and Flash #105 on the radar of many collectors. This media influenced effect on comic prices though has not been seen across the board yet. For example to date there has not been a noticeable increase in demand for Green Arrow books but it seems, especially for his Bronze and later appearances, this is an area to consider for the future.

For those seeking new areas of investment, look to Bronze Age books. For a long time this has been said about those long neglected '70s early '80s books with not a great deal of movement in price and interest to support it, but now I think it can be said with results to support it. There are many key Bronze books such as Amazing Spider-Man #121 and #129 that are rising in price and that make good investments. Neal Adams '70s covers featuring such key characters as the Joker continue to hold and indeed rise in value. Books that feature characters who have been or will be in a movie, TV show or cartoon should be considered as well.

At NYCC this year a new trend was reported by several dealers. Golden Age sales were up across many areas. This is a trend that might well continue in 2016 and 2017, at least with the DC books as Batman v Superman, Suicide Squad, Justice League and Wonder Woman are being rolled out. Also as with last year there are those companies whose stable of characters have been bought out by other companies and whose characters may soon be back in the spotlight and should be watched.

As has been the case for a while now, Silver Age interest by collectors continues but not across the board. Marvels with Spider-Man in particular continue selling in all grades and usually at the top of the Guide for low to mid-grade copies and above for high grade books. Ant-Man early appearances are on the rise as well. Iron Man however beyond his introduction in Tales of Suspense #39 and Iron Man #1 along with issue #55 has not seen a great increase in sales or price through his Tales of Suspense and Iron Man titles. DC is catching up now as its TV and movie production efforts continue to ramp up and key books begin to be sought out by collectors for investment purposes. Beyond the usual suspects of Detective #359 and early Barry Allen Flash appearances, keep an eye on World's Finest where early Silver Age 1950s issues are difficult to find in any grade let alone higher ones as the World's Finest team hits the big screen in 2016. For longer term investments, the first Justice League run and the first series Wonder Woman title given their soon-to-be appearances in the movies are books that might appreciate in value. On the other hand, Green Lantern has not benefited from his movie appearance and sales of his book reflect that and can be picked up at affordable prices. Also I have not seen any increased interest in Silver Age Aquaman, Atom and Hawkman comics despite their appearances on TV and for Aquaman in the Batman v Superman movie which will have come out by the time this report sees print but the possibility is there.

Of course as I noted last year, collectors who want to find vintage comics they can afford do have other areas to look to. There are genres of both Silver and Golden Age books that can offer both affordability and high enough grades to attract collectors who otherwise feel locked out of the vintage market. Westerns, Romance, Horror and Science Fiction titles offer opportunities to collect books with well known artists and characters at reasonable prices. That has not changed overall, however there has been some inching up in both price and interest so you might have to look a bit harder to find something affordable even in these areas.

Finally, for those new to the hobby, I am going to state here what is well known for those of us who have been in it for a long time by saying that differences in interest, sales and genres sold and bought does vary, sometimes greatly, in different parts of the U.S. and between the major shows and the smaller regional ones and also between the more national dealers and the more local ones. The same can be said for those who sell and buy overseas and what sells well or is hot in one area does not necessarily apply in another. Indeed that has been seen over the years in comparing the different market reports in the Guide. Also there is a difference between those who buy comics only for investment purposes and those who read every page of every book they buy. In the smaller regional shows one will see more of the readers as opposed to the investors and those readers tend to buy different types of books and they care less about grade and condition. In the national shows, sales and interest are of course more uniform. All of this of course applies to eBay sales as well. Having said all that, there are of course the constants which sell everywhere and all the time no matter what the location, but the point is they are not the only ones that sell across the collecting and reading landscape and nothing I have said should be taken as absolute in regard to this but the trends are definitely there.

Reported prices for 2015 are as follows: Amazing Spider-Man #29 VF $390, #52 VF $105, #12 (7.5) $550, #17 FN/VF $399, #16 (6.5) $350, Strange Adventures #132 FN/VF $49, Brave and the Bold #41 (5.5) $40, #37 VF $80, #61 (6.5) $50, All Star Comics #21 (3.5) $299, #50 (5.0) $300, #47 (6.5) $550, Fantastic Four #31 FN $45, #29 (9.0) $435, Amazing Spider-Man Annual #1 (5.0) $435, #3 (6.0) $68, Tales of Suspense #55 (7.5) $130, #56 (8.5) $220, #85 (5.0) $17, All-American Comics #18 (6.5) $4,500, Strange Tales #110 (5.5) $2,500, Daredevil #7 (7.5) $540, Hawkman #27 (5.5) $17, #26 (6.5) $30, #25 (6.0) $19, #15 (9.0) $60, Atom #30 (6.0) $20, #21 FN- $16, Silver Surfer #9 (6.5) $50, and #14 (5.5) $45.

It will be interesting to see what surprises 2016 brings to the hobby. See you next year!

We saw in 2015 a new fan emerge into the comic book ranks. The Comic Book Movie and TV Show fan has come strong and they are not leaving anytime soon. The way we buy and merchandise our product is more important than ever before.

With the announcement of the movie titles, years ahead of schedule, this new group of die hards, wants everything and anything they can get their hands on. This has been overwhelming for even the seasoned store owner. Choosing between more shirts versus more comics has stretched budgets beyond what we could ever imagine as a store owner.

What does this mean though for the collector? Well, we have seen some HUGE price hikes on comics that have been "Drek" for decades. Long boxes of comics that have been sitting in warehouses for 30+ years, now, might be the next treasure box for a LCS. Flippers are hitting $1.00 and .50 cents boxes almost everyday. Secondary outlets are selling tons of long boxes of slow merchandise, that the night before were worthless.

The Golden Age, Silver, and Bronze seller now finds themselves battling a new group of sellers that are more computer savvy and working around the clock to pick up collections around the world. Last year, I was able to buy 16 collections without even seeing them first. Having the right software and visual aides to see the collection from my desktop, states away, has made my buying easier and almost 24/7.

We have seen Variants and Exclusives take center stage. In 2015, we saw huge spike in print runs due to artificial % requirements. This has caused a vast amount of stores dropping variants and on the flip side we have seen stores capitalize on their competitors telling their customers "NO".

In the end, this is a huge area that needs to be controlled and evolved accordingly.

Though, media still seems days behind trends and values, especially at conventions, it's exposing enough to the new breed of sellers and the prices of books are selling for prices that stump us at the store level. We have seen sites like Bleeding Cool take Black Mask to a high level, virtually on every issue they print. However, we have also seen publishers drop the ball because of the pressures of the fans and their need of product "now and not later" due to social media trends.

Publishers like Boom, Oni Press and Dark Horse have maximized their lines with TV shows like Rick and Morty, Bob's Burgers and movies like Fight Club to a fan base that lives and dreams of having more product from these properties daily.

Overall, the industry is very strong. However, our culture is quite diffrent and our tradition is in jeopardy of losing the most basic concept. We have lost the fun of reading a comic book for the value of just that, enjoyment. If it's nothing that's negative or not P/C, new fans aren't interested in the comic. Our goal in 2016, is to teach the fans to enjoy your comics and have fun. Because that's why we have done this for years and decades. The happiest comic book fan has a bag full of comics to read.

Another year has passed, and what a wild ride it's been. As always, my report focuses on the late Bronze Age through to current comics – and this has been a year that has seen huge gains in certain segments of this market. While the final months of 2015 settled into a typical year-end lull, there were many, many substantial increases and hotspots in the earlier parts of the year worth reflecting on.

2015 was perhaps the year that late Bronze Age and Copper Age issues really began to come into their own. While 2014 saw some surprising gains, there was activity across the board in 2015. First appearances, key issues and first issues were particularly hot. On the DC side, books like Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #134 (first Darkseid), Firestorm #1, DC Comics Presents #26 (first New Teen Titans), Action Comics #521 (first Vixen), New Teen Titans #2 (first Deathstroke), Green Lantern #141 (first Omega Men), Omega Men #3 (first Lobo), and Booster Gold #1 were all strong movers. However, their Marvel counterparts showed even more movement, led by titles like Marvel Spotlight #32 (first Spider-Woman), Ms. Marvel #1, Nova #1, Savage She-Hulk #1, Captain Britain #8 (first Psylocke), Marvel Team-Up #95 (first Mockingbird), and early issues of X-Factor including #'s 5, 6, 15, 24 and 25 (Apocalypse stories).

Basically, any Bronze and Copper first character appearance showed signs of life. Key storylines also began to pick up steam, with movie trailers driving particular interest in the Death of Superman storyline from 1992. In particular, Superman: Man of Steel #17 and #18 (first Doomsday appearances) showed big year end gains.

The Copper Age market in particular seems to be showing real signs of maturing, and in last year's Overstreet Comic Book Marketplace Yearbook, I launched a new "crowd-sourced" list of the Top 50 Copper Age Keys. This was developed with input from the many knowledgeable collectors who populate the CGC Collector's Society message boards, though I provide some "editorial guidance" to whittle things down to a final list. Based on this year's discussions, the Top 50 Copper Keys for 2015 includes the following books:

- Albedo #2
- Amazing Spider-Man #238, #252, #298, #300, #301, #361
- Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #320

- Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #1
- Batman: The Killing Joke
- Bone #1
- Caliber Presents #1
- Comico Primer #2
- Crisis in Infinite Earths #1
- The Crow #1
- Daredevil #181
- DC Comics Presents #47
- Evil Ernie #1
- G.I. Joe: A Real American Hero #1
- Harbinger #1
- Incredible Hulk #271, #340
- Legends #3
- Marvel Graphic Novel #4
- Marvel Super Heroes Secret Wars #8
- Miracleman #15
- New Mutants #87, #98
- Sandman #1, #8
- Spectacular Spider-Man #64
- Suicide Squad #1
- Superman #75
- Swamp Thing #21, #37
- Tales of the New Teen Titans #44
- Thor #337
- Transformers #1
- Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1
- Uncanny X-men #221, #248, #266
- Warrior (UK Magazine) #1
- Watchmen #1
- Wolverine (limited series) #1
- X-Factor #6, #24

New entries this year include Amazing Spider-Man #301, driven by its popular McFarlane cover, and early appearances of the new Suicide Squad in Legends #3 and Suicide Squad #1. Pushed off the list were Vampirella #113, Iron Man #282 and Starslayer #2. While these books remain important, they just didn't have as much "heat" this year as in the past.

Certain characters remained hot in 2015. Amazing Spider-Man and Batman are both perennial sellers with huge fan bases that just seem to keep growing. Amazing Spider-Man issues rising in price included Todd McFarlane and J. Scott Campbell covers, and Black Cat appearances. Amazing Spider-Man #194, featuring the first appearance of the Black Cat, has become one of the most significant late Bronze Age books, and commands substantial premiums. On the Batman side, first appearances of villains and supporting characters continued to rise, with big jumps for Batman #357 (first Killer Croc) and Batman #369 (early Deadshot appearance). Interestingly, while Spider-Man's hot appearances were largely limited to his core title, Batman interest is more widely spread. Many issues of Detective Comics also saw significant jumps, such as Detective Comics #474, with the first modern appearance of Deadshot. The 1986 miniseries Batman: The Dark Knight Returns was also hot, particularly issues #1 and #4, the latter with a Batman vs. Superman battle that seems to be an influence on the upcoming Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice movie.

Of course, Batman and Spider-Man are old standbys, but the stars of the current generation of comic book characters are DC's Harley Quinn and Marvel's Deadpool. It's hard to put a rational explanation around these sales of these characters, as demand sometimes seems completely unfettered by supply. Copies of Batman Adventures #12 (first Harley Quinn) and New Mutants #98 (first Deadpool) sell almost instantly, and CGC 9.8 copies of each have sailed well past the $1,000 mark. Early appearances of each – and especially of Harley Quinn, whose print runs were generally lower – are quick sellers in the $25 to $50 range. Interestingly, while sales are often stable in comic shops, sales at comic shows and cons – where cosplayers and more casual collectors abound – are often much stronger. In a retail setting, common 1990s Harleys and Deadpools are $5 to $10 books – but these prices can often be doubled at shows, without hampering demand. Both Harley and Deadpool are scheduled to feature in movies in 2016, so it's entirely likely that prices will continue to rise.

This year, however, there were some other characters attracting high levels of attention. The oddly-named Spider-Gwen debuted in 2014's Edge of Spider-Verse #2, and has quickly become a fan favourite. That first appearance now commands $60 to $75, while a 1 in 25 variant goes for double or triple that amount. The new Ms. Marvel enjoys similar popularity, and her first appearance – a cover image on the 2nd print of Captain Marvel (2012 series) #17 – sells for $250. Over at DC, the Suicide Squad has been rising in popularity. The group's first appearance in Legends #3 routinely sells for $40, while 1987's Suicide Squad #1 commands $50. Even 2012's Suicide Squad #6, featuring a crossover with Harley Quinn, sees prices between $25 and $35.

Suicide Squad prices are being driven in part by the upcoming Suicide Squad movie, and movies and television shows continue to play a major role in the marketplace. The Walking Dead continues to roll along like the juggernaut it has become. The early issues seem to have stabilized in price, but later issues continue to spike as characters from the comics are introduced to TV audiences, who then begin to seek out their first appearances. Other character appearances benefiting from the movie push this year included Alias (Jessica Jones), Aquaman, Ant-Man, Dr. Strange, Firestorm, Flash, Power Man (Luke Cage), Shazam (Captain Marvel), Supergirl, Ultron, and the mystical characters of the Justice League Dark series. On this same front, many titles from DC's Vertigo imprint began to heat up in reaction to movie/TV speculation, with particularly dramatic rises on Y: The Last Man and Preacher. First issues of other key Vertigo titles, including 100 Bullets, Scalped, and Lucifer, also jumped substantially.

Perhaps the year's biggest movie story, however, was Star Wars. Without question, the December release of Star Wars: The Force Awakens was a cultural phenomenon, and one that drove a portion of the comic book marketplace. In some months, Marvel's successful relaunch of Star Wars comics provides almost half of the company's sales. The back issue market is also being affected. Star Wars #1, despite being printed in significant numbers, now brings more than $200, while other issues are also hot, including #42 (first Boba Fett), #68 (first solo Boba Fett), and #107 (scarce final issue).

A few emerging trends continue to be worth commenting on as well. Characters form the Justice Society saw some interesting movement this year. The first appearance of Mr. Terrific in 1997's Spectre #54 came out of left field on the strength of TV rumours, and jumped overnight to $50. The Huntress also became a back issue star, perhaps in part because of her appearances on TV's Arrow show. She appeared in two books in her first month of existence… All-Star Comics #69 now sells for $125 or more, while DC Super Stars #17 can reach $150. However, the biggest breakout Justice Society character this year was definitely Power Girl. Her first appearance in All-Star Comics #58 is a $200 to $250 book, but other early appearances are also skyrocketing. Her first solo story in Showcase Comics #97 has blasted past the $50 mark, with CGC 9.8 copies nearing $500.

A few other more obscure characters also seem to be gaining ground. Zatanna issues are rising in demand, as well as appearances of Deathstroke and Lobo, all from DC. Over at Marvel, one of the year's biggest surprises has been ROM, Spaceknight. ROM was a semi-successful toy spin-off, launched by Marvel in 1979 and running for 75 issues. It laid the ground work for Marvel's more successful toy tie-ins like Transformers and GI Joe a few years later, but ROM was always more closely integrated into the Marvel Universe than those titles. Issue #1 has begun to command much higher prices, often passing $40 or $50, while #31 and #32 with early appearances of the X-Men character Rogue are also generating interest. In late 2015, publisher IDW announced that after years of negotiations, it had finally secured the rights from toymaker Hasbro to publish new ROM comics. Even a modest success with this title will likely drive interest in the original Marvel series.

Another emerging trend this year is the re-emergence of the publisher Valiant on the back issue market. In mid-2015, Valiant announced a movie production deal with Chinese film giant DMG Entertainment. While details are scarce, the deal has sparked interest in Valiant keys, and particularly in the first appearances of characters which may potentially be featured in upcoming films. The top 10 titles benefiting from this attention include:

- Archer & Armstrong #0
- Eternal Warrior #4 (first Bloodshot)

- Harbinger #1
- Magnus, Robot Fighter #5 (first Rai)
- Rai #0
- Shadowman #1
- Solar, Man of the Atom #3 (first Toyo Harada), #10 (first Eternal Warrior)
- X-O Manowar #1, #4 (first Shadowman)

I also continue to see a trend towards collecting covers by specific artists gaining ground. This was once a key feature of the hobby, and seems to be re-emerging with the rise of third-party grading services like CGC and CBCS. Graded books are encased, and therefore unreadable – the key feature of a book thus becomes its cover. This has already prompted a preference for covers that are well-centred, and not "miswrapped" so that (for example) parts of the back cover can be seen on the front cover side of a book's staples. More and more, though, it seems to be rekindling interest in certain artists. Bronze Age covers by Neal Adams have gone through the roof – particularly his Batman and horror-themed covers. Bernie Wrightson covers are following suit. A copy of 1975's Weird Mystery Tales #21 in CGC 9.8 recently sold for more than $1,200 (versus a 2015 Overstreet price of $35). In the more modern context, there is strong interest in artists including Brian Bolland, J. Scott Campbell, Phil Noto and Dave Stevens, among others – but the king of this trend remains Adam Hughes. His variant cover for Supergirl and the Legion of Super-Heroes #23 often fetches $400 or more, and can near $1,000 in CGC 9.8. His Harley Quinn #1 and Spider-Gwen #1 covers also command $200 or $300 raw, and more if "slabbed". At shows, almost any Adam Hughes cover can fetch $10 to $20, and some will go for far more. Standard issues of Wonder Woman, Catwoman, Tomb Raider and Zatanna with Hughes covers can achieve silly prices, and some are routinely selling for north of $40, including Catwoman #51 and #70 and Wonder Woman #184.

Reprints – once the poster child for uncollectable comics – have also been rising in popularity. This year saw particular demand for the 1970s and 1980s reprints of Action Comics #1, and – to a lesser extent – Detective Comics #27. As interest in Spider-Man's girlfriend Gwen Stacy rose, driven by the new Spider-Gwen comic, many collectors found Amazing Spider-Man #121 and #122 (key Gwen issues) too pricy, and turned to their reprints in Marvel Tales #98 and #99, driving both to the $25 level. The many printings of the Death of Superman titles from 1992 also generated significant interest, with some of the later printings proving genuinely scarce, and thus particularly sought after. While technically not considered reprints, the Whitman variants of DC titles were the subject of similar growing interest. Key titles in this arena now routinely command hundreds of dollars in high grade, particularly Sgt. Rock #329, Warlord #22 and DC Comics Presents #22. This latter title has been particularly scarce, but a few new copies emerged this year, bringing the number of known copies to ten.

Interestingly, a couple of "dormant" formats also began to generate some interest this year. After languishing for many years, interest seems to be growing in the oversize "treasury editions" widely published in the 1970s. At the same time, the squarebound, magazine-size graphic novel format pioneered by Marvel in the early 1980s also seems to be attracting interest. This year, Marvel Graphic Novel #1 (The Death of Captain Marvel) and #4 (The New Mutants) both began to attract interest. There are a lot of hidden gems in this material, including Frank Miller Daredevil work, Alan Moore stories, early Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles collections, appearances of Doctor Who and GI Joe characters, and much more. It will be interesting to see if either of these trends picks up more steam in the coming year.

As always, it's a genuine pleasure to contribute to the content of the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide. I hope my modest contribution is of value, and I continue to be blown away by the rich and detailed knowledge of our hobby that the other advisors bring to the table. If my take on these issues interest you at all, I write regularly on these and other trends on the great Nerdgoblin.com website – feel free to stop by and check it out.

Hello all!

I'm so pleased that younger folks, increasingly are enjoying our cool comics field, in seemingly increasing numbers. I noticed this, for instance, at the Boston Comic Book Show this year - throngs of happy, comics-enjoying people, thronging around the show some looking at back issues, and a number of folks, just in costume, grooving on the whole comics thing.

I always say that the future of our industry depends, a large part, on the younger folk, and I'm pleased to say, that (in a large part because of the comic book movies) there is a growing realization in general society of the greatness of our comic book characters. There is also a growing realization of older comics, particularly Silver Age/1960s – the same enduring era that brought us the forever-lasting Beatles, amongst other icons; it also brought us the forever-relevant Silver Age Marvel characters, who were just coming into their own at that point, balancing their soul-searching private lives and their epic superhero battles. The DCs of that era, too, are forever remembered by those of us who grew up with all this, and increasingly enjoyed – and collected – by subsequent generations. For those of us who were growing up then, we loved the "ultimate icon" characters (Superman, Batman) and especially the "imaginary" Superman stories of that time, plus those wacky Bizarros, and so on. Those, plus the Justice League stories, as well as the Legion of Super-Heroes tales, to many of us, were ultimately imaginative.

Folks are, increasingly, turning on to those wacky and interesting 1970s Bronze Age comics. Many of them have everything from cult followings (Man-Thing, Swamp Thing, etc.) to increased collecting in general. People have, in greater numbers, been discovering the cosmic capers of Warlock, and of Captain Marvel as well. And of course, the 1970s stories of the mainline characters – Spider-Man, Iron Man, Batman, Flash, Hulk, X-Men, and so on – are popular.

So, I remain confident that our sport of comics collecting and re-selling should remain viable for the foreseeable future.

As I am confident of the market, I slowly have been increasing my able and capable staff, so that I can hammer out more of my 800,000+ comics, plus whatever I get in each year. This year, in addition to getting in some great Silver and Bronze Age collections and dealers' stocks, I bought some nice groups of Golden Age! And as always, I've also been picking up 5,000 to 50,000 book groups of 1980s through the 2000s sets/runs of comics, plus some original art, which I always love buying.

Some of the Collections I Have Bought This Year

1950s Horror and Crime Collection: The guy knew me from the old days. When I approached him and asked him if he has oldies at home that he might consider selling, he told me, to my delight, that he had stacks of old Horror and Crime comics, some of which he bought from me back in the day!

So I went to his place and was pleased that he had almost every '50s Horror comic made, plus many runs of Crime comics from that era.

I was ready to delve into the books, right then and there, but he simply said, "I have ready for you right now, the oldies, whose titles begin with letters anywhere from 'A' to 'L', so take them to your place and let me know what you can pay. I'm quite willing to sell them to you, but if I'm not happy with your price, then I won't sell you the comics that begin with the letters 'M' through 'Z.'"

Well, to make a long story a little shorter, he did like my offer on his first half of comics, and so I got the privilege of buying the entire collection in two parts!

And, I must add, I had such enjoyment looking at all of those crazy, sometimes gory, wild pre-Code '50s Horror comics, that I ended up (through a lot of willpower, amongst other things) keeping only a few dozen Horrors for myself, out of all of this extensive collection.

Early, etc. - Golden Age Part I (Misc): I visited the fella (about 85 years young) and looked at the '40s books that he was offering me, never dreaming that he had a part two, a much better group of oldies, lying in wait! He had me make offers on groups of Wings Comics (which went way back to #1), Jungle Comics (also going back to a low-grade #1), and also a cool-cover early '40s Air Fighters Comics, plus groups of Fight Comics, Crime Does Not Pay, True, plus other oldies. I paid him a fair price for those books, though some of these titles do move somewhat slow. Which leads me to...

Early, etc. - Golden Age Part II (Misc): (Early to mid-1940s, with Detective, Captain America(!), early Whiz and Captain Marvel Adventures, etc.)

The fellow who had sold me that Part I collection called me almost a year later and said to me that he liked selling to me; he invited me over the next day for some more old comics to offer me, like the Fawcett Captain Marvel.

I thought to myself, "Okay - CM's, generally aren't as exciting as some '40s books, but what the hey - I like buying old comics, so I'll go see him."

I get there, and lo and behold, the first comic I see is the second issue of Whiz (the second appearance of Captain Marvel) from 1940 – that iconic, early-burly cover with a very primitive early '40s Captain Marvel defeating the bad guys.

Yes, I was excited – even though the front and back covers were separated from each other, earning the book a 1.0 from CGC. Early '40s superhero comics are always exciting for me to obtain, in any condition.

As I continued to carefully paw through the pile of oldies, it just kept on going – Whiz #3, 4, 6, 9, 10, and so on – most of the issues from #20-29, and some others. The conditions ranged from some Fair/Poors, mainly because of split spines, plus other flaws, to Very Goods on some of the later issues. I priced and graded them all, and gave him around 60% of Guide for those babies – a fair-offer price, it was. He also had a solid run of Golden Age Captain Marvel Adventures, starting with #2 – with those, there were a lot of Good/Very Good to Very Good-ish, though the #2 was only a Fair.

And then, lo and behold, the fella had a near-complete run of the Mac Raboy Master Comics - #21 through #37, and only missing two issues. Unfortunately, the first Mac Raboy Captain Marvel Junior (#21) was missing the centerfold – he was bummed about that, and I was a bit as well, but what the hey, it's still the book.

I kept about two-thirds or more of them, and offered the others for sale, for over-Guide.

The guy also had a real obscure title – Nickel Comics, 1940, a few issues. They didn't cost "but a nickel," as they were only 36 pages, just like newer comics from the later '50s onwards. They were pretty low grade, but they moved out pretty well, as they are kind of scarce.

Anyways, as I was going through all of these cool early Fawcetts, I saw up higher on a shelf one pile with a Detective #38 on the top, and another one, with some early/mid-'40s Golden Age Captain America issues! I must admit, inside my mind, I was practically drooling, as these comics are not only very good, super-solid sellers, but I love 'em!!

So, the Detective #38 had split covers, o/w solid, for which I paid him a bit above Guide, and after that came a wonderful cascade of oldies *Detective*s – some in the #40s, and most issues from #51 through the #70s, including the first appearance of The Penguin (#58) in Good/Very Good! I paid him nicely for those, but the crescendo of excitement, to me, was when I started checking out the Golden Age Captain *America*s, 11 of them in all.

Issue #13, a great WWII cover, and #15, both drawn by then-imaginative and underrated Al Avison (the effect of characters in the story stepping out of the panel, and the art in general, was totally great), unfortunately were both missing the centerfold. But that's okay – they still have those great covers, and so are kept. I even pay well for coverless *Cap*s, though I admit, I don't keep them.

He also had a few complete, solid-shaped issues for which I paid Guide and over, buying them to keep.

All in all, a fun and worthwhile comic book purchasing day, and the fella (who had bought many of these in the news-stands) was also completely pleased with how the day went. I too was satisfied – both as a re-seller, and as a collector, and as just an oldies comics fan!

$60,000 'Out West' Oldies Deal: A combo of some, mostly miscellaneous oldies, such as another, better-condition run of Nickel Comics; some early Barks Walt Disney's Comics & Stories (#31 through 34, 36), plus several restored, early Golden Age (such as Exciting #1, National #1, etc.); it also included a stack of pretty sharp 1960s Marvels, especially Amazing Spider-Man comics (which I call pre-sold by their nature).

It was a somewhat eclectic collection, in some ways – he had a few bound volumes including one of Master #7-10, wherein the trimming went a bit into some panels, plus two mid-'40s bound volumes of Planet Comics, and a bound volume of Brave and the Bold #28 through #30, plus Justice League of America #1-16. I usually get anywhere from Guide Good to Guide GD/VG for bound volumes, as long as the title is a fairly popular one. There were also some great books, coverless o/w complete – Detective #38 (first Robin) and Amazing Fantasy #15 (first Spider-Man) – great in ANY condition!

I also picked up from him a couple boxes of 1940s CGC comics. I kept the 5.5 Silver Streak #7 (great cover of the 1940s DD battling The Claw). Some I had to mark down, way under Guide, such as Shield-Wizard #1 (CGC 7.5, Guide is $2,800, I have it listed as of this writing at around 55% of that). Some are less under Guide, like Wings #1 in CGC 8.0, and others that I got right around Guide-price for, such as Haunt of Fear #10 in CGC 8.5, and Blue Beetle #2 CGC 5.5, I got double-Guide for.

It was nice to see a couple boxes of 1960s Marvels in nice shape – they are the bread and butter of selling, in my experience.

I was quite pleased with both the deal and doing the transaction with someone I know from the old days, and it was nice to see an old-timer who collected them in nice shape – but make no mistake about it, I like them in "beater" conditions as well.

I bought a deal in Virginia Beach. The fella had, basically, close to 10,000 Silver Age comics, with some restored ECs, plus a few early '40s World's Finest in there for good measure. I made a deal with him on those, and then he showed me about 150 boxes of 1980s and 1990s comics with smaller batches of 1970s, and here and there smatterings of just a few 1960s comics.

As it was, both he and I had no idea what was in those boxes, as he hadn't looked at them in over 15 years. I offered to look through them then and there, but he just said, "No, that's okay – just ship them back to your warehouse and look through them then."

I was gratified and appreciative that he knew he could trust me to look through them, take into account the better stuff (or highlight books as I like to call them), and make him a decent, representative offer on the five-plus pallets.

So I went through the 150+ boxes – many of them were non-special, later '80s and '90s books – but mixed in with those were things like: five copies of Amazing Spider-Man #300 (worth $150-250 each, roughly), a number of other great-selling McFarlane Amazing Spider-Man issues, and a lot of okay, garden-variety '70s comics, some being sets. After I made my offer to him, he accepted it, and everybody was satisfied.

In general, I bought a number of other deals this year, ranging from early Marvels in Fair to Very Fine and better, and paying extra well on the 1960s #1s, no matter what the condition. In fact, I paid thousands for a collection of Golden Age which was purely coverless – many of them incomplete. In it, I got a first wrap of Superman #1, and even without the cover, or any other pages, it was cool to get – plus it retells Superman's origin from Krypton.

Golden Age: Timely issues sell like hotcakes, in any shape – though when I get them, I more often than not keep them, unless the issue is one I already own, and I especially collect 1940s *Cap*s and USA Comics. I often get well over Guide for them, and so must pay accordingly.

DCs sell well, and some choice early Batman and Superman issues sell for way over Guide – I sold a CGC 3.5 Action #13 for more than five times Guide! More Fun Comics with The Spectre (#52-101) remain very hard to get. Many of the early '40s Spectre, as well as Dr. Fate covers, are some of my favorites!

I notice that there seems to be more and more 1940s big logo Detective Comics collectors, and some of the special issues (such as #58, first Penguin appearance, and #140, first Riddler appearance), go for double Guide, or more. Many of the pre-Code Wonder Woman comics, I get 120% or more of Guide. #7, featuring Wonder Woman for President, I got around five times Guide for a CGC 3.5. Most other mid-to-late DCs sell for around Guide.

Fawcett Comics, which is mainly various Captain Marvel titles, have been picking up in sales lately. Especially the early '40s issues, in general, go pretty well in all grades across the board – especially good-selling, early '40s Master Comics with Mac Raboy covers, I get over Guide for most of them, and in fact have kept a number of them from a recent collection.

Disney – Much to my amusement, some of them have been significantly picking up in sales, at last! Walt Disney's Comics & Stories from #1 through 100 have been selling okay, with #1 of course being a great seller, and #31-40 (the early Carl Barks issues) always in demand. The earlier Donald Duck issues are quite popular (#'s 4, 9, 62, 108, 147, and especially #178, the first Uncle Scrooge). In general, though, Disneys are doing better, and I find myself being into getting collections of them more and more.

Centaur comics are very sought after, and in general quite scarce and exotic. Many of them go for over Guide. Quality Comics (Smash, Crack, Hit, Police, etc.), if they are from the early '40s, go for Guide or more; later '40s sell kind of slow (except for Doll Man comics – I put up a run of them, and almost all of them went for Guide right away, especially the later issues that had cool Horror covers).

MLJ comics – Hangman issues sell well, and mostly for over Guide. Other titles are mostly Guide or more, with some notable exceptions, and Pep #22 (first appearance of Archie) sells for multiples of Guide, in all grades.

Early '50s Horror Comics - With the near-complete collection of them I got in this year, I can definitely say that they mostly sell very well for Guide, but often, over Guide. One of the most extreme issues I sold was a Weird Mysteries #4 in CGC 4.0 for a bit over $2,000.

ECs – Horror (Tales from the Crypt, Vault of Horror and Haunt of Fear) routinely sell for 20% over Guide, and so too do most issues of Crime SuspenStories (#22, with the bloody decapitated head, is worth many times Guide); ShockSuspense and the sci-fi ECs sell for Guide or slightly over. Two-Fisted Tales and Frontline Combat sell more slowly, in general; later issues of these two titles sell for 80%-100% of Guide.

Silver Age: Marvels are our bread-and-butter sellers. I really enjoy that they are around, for the most part, because they were enjoyed so much back in the day – so they are not rare to get, as long as you're willing to pay a satisfactory price for a given Marvel collection. In general, the early 1960s Marvel #1s command various amounts over Guide. Consequently, I find myself paying 80-120% of Guide and more for such goodies as Amazing Spider-Man #1, Amazing Fantasy #15, Avengers #1, Daredevil #1, Fantastic Four #1, Incredible Hulk #1, X-Men #1 – in ANY condition. Poor to mint, it's all good to have. Also, 1968 #1s, such as Iron Man, also fetch over Guide.

On the non-#1 and non-first-appearances: Amazing Spider-Man is far and away the best-seller here – I routinely sell out of them at 100-120% of Guide – same with Silver Age Avengers, X-Men and Iron Man.

Fantastic Four issues, though still solid sellers, don't quite command the buying vigor that the above titles do – perhaps because the FF movies haven't been as well-received, I am loathe to admit. The exception to that is high-grade books – Very Fine and better.

Non-superhero Marvels: Sgt. Fury comics, in my experience, the issues past #13 only sell for me at 70% of Guide or less. The same goes for most 12- and 15-cent cover Marvel Western comics.

DC Comics - The earlier '60s #1s and first appearances have gotten much better in value, sales, and value in relation to Guide. I myself paid over Guide for investment (and keepsies) on an 8.0 Showcase #4 (first appearance of Silver Age Flash) and Brave and the Bold #28, plus Showcase #22. Even lower grade copies have been selling, in most cases, for various amounts over grade – same with Justice League of America #1.

As for non-#1s and non-first appearances, Flash has picked up, ever since the TV series, selling for 80-100% of Guide. In general, Green Lantern comics have also been selling pretty well, especially the Neal Adams issues. Batman remains, by far, the top Silver Age DC seller; I think of Bats as an "honorary mainline Marvel title" in regards to sales. They regularly get Guide, with special issues fetching various premiums, especially #181 (1st Poison Ivy) – when the often missing centerfold is present, it fetches well over Guide in any condition.

Unfortunately, the post-code Superman titles (Action, Superman, Lois Lane, Jimmy Olsen, World's Finest) – I have to sell them for 80% of Guide or less to move them at all, unless they are sharp – then I get Guide or more quite easily.

Bronze Age: Comics from this era, in general, are on fire. It's funny – I have over 100,000 comics from this era (some I've owned for decades), and finally, at long last, the books are seeing the light of day, and a number of them are being scooped up with appreciation. Plus, I'm always buying more! I don't use a want-list; instead, I consume whatever collections or dealers' stock comes my way!

A number of Bronze books that are known as movie tie-ins have been getting, in some cases, what I think of as amazing prices, especially in high grades. Shazam! #1 CGC 9.6 $175, Nova #1 CGC 9.6 $150 and up, Ms. Marvel #1 CGC 9.6 $150 and up, and the list goes on. But one thing that I must caution those who own these comics and aspire to get great values for their collections, is that the values of most copies of these comics are worth a fraction of these sums. If they are truly a worthy 9.4 and better, then that's fine and dandy, but as soon as they have a couple flaws, they are not uniquely sharp – how many times does one hear a hopeful seller say, "I saw it online for…"?

Marvel Comics - When I can get a collection of Bronze comics, especially with a healthy helping of Marvels, I know it's a good thing! Amazing Spider-Man, especially #101-150, and X-Men up to #143, sell great for me – at Guide for the non-special issues, over Guide for the special ones. Incredible Hulk #181 (1st Wolverine) continues to soar in value, even though they are not especially rare. Amazing Spider-Man #129 (1st Punisher) is continuing its upward trend. I've kept several nicer copies for myself, as investment. Also, some of the other first appearances have been getting great prices in high grade.

Hero for Hire (Luke Cage) #1 sells for hundreds of dollars or more in CGC 7.5 and above, and I sold X-Men #101 (1st Phoenix) in CGC 9.8 for $1,500! Yes, you read that right – 1,500 bucks!

Most of the titles that began in the '70s (Ms. Marvel, Man-Thing, Nova, Peter Parker: Spectacular Spider-Man, etc.) sell moderately well, with the #1s of those titles selling real well. What I like doing best, when possible, is selling these 1970s series as sets for sale, as they are mostly shorter-run sets and affordable for a wide range of potential buyers.

DC Comics - As with the '60s, the best DC sellers by far are the Batman comics, especially the issues from #251 and earlier. By the way, that #251, with the splendid and crazy Neal Adams Joker cover, goes for way over Guide, as does #227, which has the cover swipe of the iconic Detective #31 cover. But any Batman up to #400 can easily command Guide in sales.

A few Bronze DCs command premium prices over Guide, such as Shazam! #1, but even more so Shazam! #28 (1st '70s appearance of Black Adam). Most Bronze DCs don't sell nearly as well as their Marvel brethren, but they do okay. The first 10 issues of Swamp Thing do well, as do Bronze Age Detective Comics.

Modern Comics: I have more appreciation for comics from this era than I used to. We sell sets/runs of Modern era comics (mostly at 55 to 90 cents each, some more), with varying success. I of course charge more – and pay more – for better comics from this era, such as Amazing Spider-Man (especially the McFarlane issues, #298-328), and for stuff such as earlier Wolverine comics, Suicide Squad, Swamp Thing #20-40, Dark Knight #1-3, better X-Men of the period, etc.

I like to buy boxes of runs, including from the Modern era, because of our sets for sale, which we do quite a bit. And there are quite a few enhanced value comics from this era, especially if they're in sharp shape! Some of the primary examples are Batman Adventures #12 (1st Harley Quinn, this book just keeps getting better and better), New Mutants #98 (1st Deadpool, a CGC 9.8 can sell for $750 and up), Amazing Spider-Man #300, (sells from $100 to many hundreds in most shapes), Swamp Thing #37 (1st Hellblazer), Secret Wars #8 (1st black Spidey costume), and much more…

Original Art: I buy it whenever I'm offered collections of it, or even individual pieces) for anything resembling an okay price. Art is truly the "Wild West" of our industry, price-wise – some stuff goes up all the time, some doesn't.

So, to all, keep on enjoying our hobby, and to all a good night (and day)!

Big B Comics - Hamilton, Ontario

The 46th Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide is here at last. Big B Comics is a strong back issue store and we move a lot of Overstreet Price Guides. It is a lot easier to sell a product when you believe in it and we continue to support and champion this fantastic comic book collecting resource. The whole Overstreet team should be applauded, as these people do great work and it's to the collecting community's benefit. As always I want to thank all the advisors that have shared their observations over the past 12 months in these Market Reports.

Things could not be busier at Big B Comics, and our www.bigbcomics.com website remains the best place to learn more about our shops. Our Hamilton and Niagara Falls Ontario stores continue to grow while Marc Sims is setting new standards at Big B Barrie. We held meetings back in January and decided we would make 2016 the year of the Brick and Mortar, we've filled the calendar with creator signings, kids programs, product launches and more, all to enhance and add value to the local comic book shop experience.

Big B Comics proudly launched the International Comic Exchange or ICE as it has become known, icomicexchange.com launched in late 2015 and we got off to an amazing start with sales that included Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.6 for $5,238 and Amazing Spider-Man #129 CGC 9.6 for $2,862. We post new listings on ICE every Wednesday so visit icomicexchange.com often to see what's new.

Big B Comics projects 2016 as another great year for the comic book community. There have never been more comic book based blockbuster movies lined up in one year than there are this year and comic book themed TV shows are everywhere. The great news it that for the most part these releases are successful. There is a huge demand for shows, movies, games etc. based on comics. All this only helps the local comic book shop as we are seen as a natural place to visit to see what all the excitement is about.

I would say the biggest buckets in our shops are new comics, graphic novels, related toys and back issues and collectibles. Surprisingly the largest growth last year came from comic book back issues and collectibles. As I said earlier, Big B Comics is a destination store for quality comic book back issues. We'd like to thank all our customers for supporting us and we are committed to improving our selection even more.

Our comic acquisitions were dominated by a large collection I bought in the spring of 2015. I had to drive down to Nebraska to pick these books up but it was worth the trek. The collection had tons of Marvels and DCs from the early 1960s and on. The highlights included many of the Marvel keys including mid-grade raw copies of Journey into Mystery #83, Tales of Suspense #39, Strange Tales #110, X-Men #1, Tales to Astonish #27, Sgt. Fury #1 and more. I sold most of these raw, the only prices I can remember for the raw books were $4,500 for the Journey into Mystery #83 and $3,000 for the Tales of Suspense #39.

Here are some CGC graded books we sold in the shop over 2015 (USD$): Incredible Hulk #1, CGC 4.0 $9,500; Amazing Spider-Man #1 CGC 5.0 $5,000; Sgt. Fury #1 CGC 5.5 $1,100; Star Wars #1 CGC 9.6 $400; New Mutants #87 CGC 9.6 $250; and Nova #1 CGC 9.8 - $475.

The long painful slide of Marvel and DC run books continues. At Toronto's Fan Expo con in September of 2015, Big B Comics debuts our $5 bins. I found myself filling these bins with books that, in the past, I would have put $10 or $15 on. The simple fact is these comics were not moving at the $10 price point but they moved well enough at $5.

While the run books continue to suffer the keys continue to gain value and it seems there are more and more keys to consider every year. Though I will say there seems to be a levelling off on the more commonly traded key issues. Very high grade copies continue to set records but it looks like the low grade entry level copies have hit some sort of ceiling. I'll come out and say that there are some mid-grade bargains out there for the key issues. Mid grades have been flat for so long that some of the lower grade sales are similar in price. I have noticed that the pricing is clumping around 2 of the market segments. Prices realized of 1.5, 1.8, 2.0 and 2.5 are almost interchangeable, the same pattern can be found in many results in the 4.0, 4.5, 5.0, 5.5 range. So the people that just want a copy don't seem to be as price scale conscious as before and those that want a half decent copy are creating a similar pattern.

I for one am not afraid of corrections to over-speculated comic books. This is needed, surely all comics can't be winners and surely all can't double their value year over year. The back issue comic book market, like most speculative markets is full of pitfalls. Stick to some fundamental principles like character durability, issue scarcity and grade scarcity, improve your chances of not getting stuck with an over-speculated comic that is falling in value.

I continue to support and promote the Canadian Golden Age of Comics. Comics from the WWII era, known as "Canadian Whites" have proved stubbornly illusive. We're happily working towards a rudimentary price guide for these comics. Perhaps by next year? I'm hoping to report some major finds in next year's report.

Our site comicbookdaily.com continues to be the main source for "Canadian Whites" articles and supports a healthy community of contributors and commenters. Comicbookdaily.com also continues to be the place where I post my weekly "Undervalued Spotlight" column. The "Undervalued Spotlight" has a loyal fan base and I'd like to thank everyone for supporting the posts. Thanks to all the comicbookdaily writers and special thanks to our long suffering EiC Scott VanderPloeg.

Finally, I'd like to acknowledge and thank the entire Big B Comics team for their dedication and hard work. We are as good as the people we have so we must be pretty darn good because we have some fantastic people.

Ken Dyber
Cloud 9 Comics

Greetings, and welcome to another of my market reports. I'm co-owner of Cloud 9 Comics (with Jeff Itkin, whose market report appears in a few pages), a company that specializes in selling key issues, and Golden Age-Copper Age comic back issues, as well as the occasional slab or two (although we aren't big fans of this process). 2015 saw many changes for Cloud 9 Comics, with a few highlights including, Jeff joining me as a partner in the company, the two of us opening a comic book store in Portland, OR (come by and visit us at 2621 SE Clinton St. Portland, OR 97202), a new eBay ID: cloudninecomics, Facebook account: cloudninecomics, & Twitter account: cloud9_comics. You can also contact me directly at: ken@cloudninecomics.com, as well as shop for over 10,000 vintage comics on our website, which features a search engine, zoom feature, and most importantly, grading notes for our more expensive books! We also started selling original artwork on our site's "Artwork" page. Lastly, we stepped up and increased the amount of conventions we did, so many of you saw us at San Diego, Portland (Wizard & Rose City), Emerald City, Denver, Sacramento, Chicago, NY, Tacoma, and Baltimore. Yes, a busy year indeed for team Cloud 9! Speaking of which, I'd like to officially welcome Moises Rios, and Scott Roller to the team, our two staff members who help us at our retail store, thank you gentlemen!

With all this said, for those of you that have read my market reports over the past years, you've come to realize I often have quite a bit to say in these reports, often increasing my word count annually. This year unfortunately (or fortunately, depending on your opinion!), I haven't had the time of previous years, due to the above, to log and report all of my findings regarding trends, sales, blogs, etc… So, this will be shorter, but, hopefully, still of value to Overstreet, and all of you reader/collectors out there.

Conventions... more and more appear every year, however, I feel this isn't sustaining (the same can be said about superhero movies, but more on that later). As many of us have stated in the past (at least those of us selling comic books), conventions continue to move more and more into pop culture events (especially the Wizard shows). I'm actually seeing more customers wanting, looking for, and BUYING back issues over the last few years, however, with increasing costs of setting up at conventions, and convention promoters directly looking to just continue to put their focus on celebrities for photos and signatures, there are less and less comic book sellers at cons. So, this makes customers frustrated, as their costs to attend have significantly increased, and there are less options for them to shop for comics at cons, which is obviously ironic due to these events being called "Comic Cons". There's nothing wrong with "Pop-Culture Events", but I think if that is the intent of the promoter, then they should market their event as such with name change. I realize this won't happen, as the promoters are riding "a perfect wave" of movie/TV/comic book interest, but one can only hope I guess! What I find most interesting, is that the promoters need comic book dealers/stores for their cons, as they do need people selling comic books, however, I do not see any con promoters offering discounts on booths to comic book dealers. This is just a suggestion I have, as we don't want to become a "dying-breed" so to speak at cons.

Interestingly enough, our city of Portland actually has not only 2 successful weekend cons by different promoters, both of which are growing rapidly, but we also now have a 1/4ly small "old-school" comic event called the "Frankenstein Comic Book Swap" that is almost exclusively back issue comics! I've heard that other than NYC, Portland has the largest per-capita of writers and artists working in the industry. We possibly also have the most comic books stores in the country for a city our size. So... if you ever come to Portland, we have quite a few great stores here to check out.

As for movies and TV shows, this market is already too saturated. As much as I love seeing our heroes and villains, there are simply too many TV shows currently happening and movies being made for a person to follow. I would like to see Marvel and DC do a better job of having their shows/films tie-in to one another. I understand cost is one of the main things here, as some of the actors/actresses in the movies are too expensive to appear also on a TV show. Yes, it would be great to have Black Widow appearing in a season of Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D., but Scarlett Johansson is just too expensive for the TV shows, and probably also too busy with movies. Thus, we're left with either little opportunity, or no possibility to the same actors/characters to appear both on TV and in film.

One trend to watch, is to see if more non-superhero characters begin to make their way into TV and film (like Rocket & Groot), as these can be played by non "A-List" celebrities, and not even by a real person by just being green-screened in. Swamp Thing is one of our best-selling characters and could be played by anyone. Another Marvel comic book character I think could be used on a pretty large scale is Mighty Mouse, as I believe the TV/film rights have now been acquired. Another great all-ages character, that's been around forever, Archie and his crew are waiting for a TV/film break through. They are some of the most well-known comic characters of all time, so I wonder if Archie Publications is just waiting for the "right time", or simply not getting on-board a billion dollar gold mine waiting to happen. It really is quite odd to me that this isn't happening yet, although I have heard some rumors about Sabrina being "green lit".

Just as we had American Splendor, Ghost World, Watchmen, Sin City, etc... all about a decade ago, I believe we'll be embracing another ride of non-superhero properties very soon in TV and film. Y: The Last Man I hear is being worked on for an FX show at present, but Brian Vaughn's Saga series is a gigantic "Tent-Pole" franchise waiting to explode into a galaxy near us any year now.

OK, with all that said, having opened an actual comic book store, and not just being an online and convention dealer, I've experienced a whole new side of comics that I've come to realize I knew nothing about... NEW COMICS AND TRADES! Holy crap, there is a ton to digest out there. So many great titles being published, it really is a great time to be reading comics. For our store, Image outsells all other publishers probably three to one. Dynamite, and Oni are doing well too, DC & Marvel sure a little, but I have to say, I was expecting better sales from them. Dark Horse sales are surprisingly very slow, considering their offices are about 4 miles from our shop!

A majority of people coming into our shop are buying trades, cheap $1 comics, kids comics, underground/indie stuff, and of course, key issues/Golden Age books, which is our bread & butter. Currently we have 16 boxes of Golden Age available for sale at our store, far more than almost any other shop in America. Our best-selling trade is Saga, which outsells anything else maybe 5 to 1... it's pretty crazy. A trend which I think we should pay attention to is I have more and more customers asking for 1st prints of trades. I can easily see Saga trade #1 in 1st print selling for more than other printings, as this is a whole new market that isn't fully developed. I'm not talking about Batman: Killing Joke type trades here that are unique one offs, more so trades that reprint the original comic stories. More and more people are collecting trades with "investment" in mind. Hardcovers are also selling well, often with the same mentality, especially, if they are limited run ones. Moebius stuff for example is VERY in demand in our store.

Lastly, I'm stating it here again, but I feel free strongly that we are now officially done with the Modern Age of comics, well, either that, or we're now in the Modern Age, and the age after the Copper Age needs to be called something different. I feel we are now in what should start being referred to as the "Renaissance Age", as by definition means "Back again + Birth". Comics now not only seem to have come back again, but are also in a new birth period, which is being lead for the most part by Image comics with their fantastic original, non-superhero stories. I feel that the end of the Modern Age occurred with the publishing of Walking Dead #1, arguably the most successful comic book of all time, and the front runner of the renaissance of new comic books ideas and stories. I'm sure many people will not agree with me, but this is certainly worth a healthy discussion, as the Modern Age can't go on forever. Now for some brief thoughts on specific time periods....

Golden Age: A-list key issues, and classic covers are selling for even crazier money than we once thought possible. More Fun #73 selling in CGC 8.0 for $99K & CGC 5.5 for $74,500, Captain America Comics #1 in CGC 5.5 for $77,675 (seems like quite a bargain to me already!). We sold a Batman #1 CGC 0.5 (no back cover) for $19K and a CBCS 2.5 with White Pages for $56K! Yes, jaw dropping. I noticed Punch Comics #12 selling for something like $30K!! This one I'm just not sure about. Yes, it's a very cool skull cover, and yes, a tough book with low census numbers, but I think people have gotten caught up in this one, and are over-paying for it, as there are other classic covers, that aren't selling for even close to that. Knowing where to put ones hard earned dollars in this market can be tricky on some classic covers and B-list 1st appearances, as many of these do not have proven sales history in multiple grade ranges. This means that just because of one very strong sale, or even two for that matter, does it really mean that's the true market for that book, as you could have only a couple people looking for those books, then once they've both acquired their copies, the other people willing to pay money for said book, could be drastically lower. I'm not saying don't buy classic covers, as yes, they most certainly are the backbone of the Golden Age, however, just be very careful as to how much you pay.

Silver Age: One record sale I noticed this year, for a year where there really didn't seem to be that many, was Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.6 selling for $300,000 in July on ComicLink. 9.4's of this book have been flat for years around the $120K mark give or take, so this seems like a very strong sale for only .2 points higher. Strange Tales #111 needs a major jump upwards in Guide price as it's a trifecta of sorts, being the 2nd appearance of Doctor Strange, and the 1st appearance of the Asbestos Man, as well as the 1st appearance of Mordo. That's two 1st appearances and the 2nd appearance of a major Marvel character. Line listings need to be added to note the 1st appearances of both these characters with a doubling of Guide in all grades as a conservative starting point for new pricing. Silver Age back issue sales of both Marvel and DC have been quite strong at cons for us this past year. With new comics being $3-$5 an issue, and with very little "story" due to the advances in artwork, old comics in VG that are $6-$8 in Guide, and usually discounted to boot, seem like a better buy for the joy of reading. DC sales have picked up significantly in the last few years here in the northwest.

Bronze Age: Healthy sales as always here (we probably sell more key issues from this period than any others). Werewolf By Night #32 has probably been the most requested book from this period by far with it tripling in value over the last few years. I remember I passed on a CGC 9.6 for $1500 at the Chicago Comicon in 2012… what a dummy I am, huh! Amazing Spider-Man #129 has gotten hot again, and finally, showing some nice gains, as this one's always been in demand, but hasn't shown much upward appreciation for some time now. This is mostly due to the Punisher appearing on season 2 of Daredevil, and rumors about the character getting his own Netflix show. This is still a great period to put your money into, as there are so many key issues, that you're bound to get a nice bump on a few. Tomb of Dracula #10's are also heating up again after cooling off for 4/5 years.

Copper/Modern/Renaissance Age: I could go on and on here, as I've learned so much in the last year running a shop about this time period. I'll try and point out a few key issues I've noticed, but there are a ton so… Batman #1 New 52 is king of the New 52 books, although Harley Quinn #1 is selling very strong too. Image has Walking Dead #1 & Saga #1, so many others, like East of West, Morning Glories, Peter Panzerfaust, Invincible, Black Science, Rat Queens, Sex Criminals, Bitch Planet, Deadly Class, etc… Vertigo's Y: The Last Man is selling quite well with the TV in the works, as are Hellblazer #1, and Sandman #1 and #8.

A sleeper book to keep your eye on is Dark Horse Presents Annual 1998 which is the 1st appearance of Buffy The Vampire Slayer in comics, the current line listing of $8 in NM- just sounds dirt cheap for a TV show that was on for 7 seasons, and has already had 3 additional seasons in print via Dark Horse, as well as a movie (although, not a very good one... but still). At 64 pages, it's also tough to find in high grade, and features a very cool Mignola Hellboy cover. Batman Adventures #12 (1st Harley Quinn) seems to have finally cooled off and stabilized in price at around $2000 for slabbed 9.8's, and $650 for raw NM- copies. Still very in demand, but, at least for now, stable in those price ranges.

Batman #655 and #656, the 1st brief & full appearances of Damian Wayne (Bruce Wayne & Talia Al Ghul's son) have been sleeper books for too long. They seem to be selling for around $10 & $15 respectively for NM- raw copies, with graded 9.8's going for around $100. Giving the popularity of Batman, Damian is a character that could become a major player in the DC universe as the years go on. These would affordable purchases that could pay off well down the road. Also from a few years earlier, Batman #570 is a Joker cover with a Harley Quinn appearance, and is selling quite well around $25 in NM- & $100 in slabbed 9.8.

The Flash and Arrow TV shows both continue to be very well received, and both also have been integrating quite a few characters into their universes. Fury of Firestorm #23 is the 1st appearance of Felicity Smoak (Arrow's love interest on the show) and seems to consistently be missing from store/dealer boxes, with a CGC 9.8 selling for $305! Supergirl's show seems to be doing well, with issue #8 being the 1st Reactron.

Silver Surfer (vol. 2) #44 has been a very hot book, which is the 1st appearance of the Infinity Gauntlet, and a pretty killer Thanos cover. Raw copies of this one have been selling briskly for us around $40-$50, with the entire story arc in the title selling quite well. As with previous versions of the Guide, I've been pushing for a Top 25 of Copper/Modern Age books, as we presently only have a Copper Age 10, which is ridiculous as I consider the Copper Age to have ended in the early 1990's, which means we're not looking at any books in the last 25 years or so. Here's my updated version with suggested prices for this year's Guide. I've only included variants/other printings of things that have very proven sales history as there are so many of them. If I've neglected any obvious books for this list, please contact me directly so I may make the needed changes. Hopefully Overstreet will begin publishing this section in the front of the Guide sooner than later.

CBCS - Modern Grader

As a modern grader for CBCS, I am afforded somewhat of a unique perspective and insight when it comes to our hobby. With that said, I would like to use that insight to discuss some trends that I have begun to notice and others that continue to be true in the collecting of Modern comics. And when I say "Modern Comics" I am specifically referring to CBCS's designation which includes any books from 1975 to present.

Movies, events and number 1 issues continue to be something that really boosts the popularity of books in 2015. This has been going on for a while and it shows no sign of slowing down at all. The really big winner when it comes to these three important factors belongs to Star Wars comic books. This status is true across publishers and publication years, although for the non-current series, Marvel's Star Wars books are vastly more popular than the Dark Horse era of books. This popularity continued for the new Star Wars comics published in 2015. Now for every one comic from the original series that would hit my desk, it seems twice as many of those from the new run are being submitted for grading. A major contributing factor to this was the number of variants published for Star Wars #1 as well as the sheer number of books sold.

Another title that got a boost from the release of its big screen counterpart is Marvel Premiere #47 when the Ant-Man movie was released. And this is a book with some staying power; even in the months after the movie premiere this title is consistently in modern submission.

Another publisher that saw its popularity increase due to film was Valiant, specifically the original incarnation. An announcement was made that the rights to Valiant characters had been sold and movies will be coming out in the not so distant future. Surprisingly enough, it isn't just first appearances that are popular in this case as people are submitting many issues of the original Valiant books for grading. The most popular book however seems to be Rai #0 with there being a possibility of the book being one of the "glossy variants."

Not only movies are boosting popularity but TV shows are proving to be a boon to certain books as well. And I would be doing you a disservice if I didn't say that The Walking Dead appears to be the clear winner when it comes to television increasing the popularity of a book. The Walking Dead #19, #27, & #100 seem to be the most popular of them all. Other notable increases in submissions include Preacher & the Preacher preview since the announcement of the TV show as well as Daredevil books with the wildly successful Netflix series. Books that enjoyed a brief flash in the pan due to television shows were Outcast and Descender. These two books were very popular for a month or two but didn't seem to have the staying power of the books that I mentioned above.

When it comes to number 1 issues there were a few books that seemed very popular in 2015. Star Wars being one of them, but I covered that earlier. The most popular came towards the end of the year and continues to be popular into 2016, that being DC's The Dark Knight III: The Master Race. This is another one that had many, many variants with plenty of them being exclusives or ultra-rare copies. The grail of the series being the Jim Lee 5K edition that came with an original sketch by the man himself. There are a few others that seem to have benefited from being a new series or a #1. These books include Spider-Gwen, Howard the Duck, Convergence, Chrononauts, We Can Never Go Home, Space Riders and Paper Girls to name but a few. As far as events go, Secret Wars was the most popular one submitted in 2015. Spider-Verse spilled over a little in the beginning of the year which was fairly popular and surprisingly the Zenescope event Age of Darkness saw a steady popularity through the year.

It would be impossible of me not to talk about moderns without talking about the two characters whose popularity seemed to reach new levels in 2015. This of course being Marvel's Deadpool and DC's Harley Quinn, who appear to be somewhat analogs of each other.

We often joke in the grading room that not a day goes by for us that we do not see a New Mutants #98. But it's not just Deadpool's first appearance that is popular. Rather any book, team or team-up that he is in gets submitted to us and this doesn't seem to be slowing down in the early months of 2016. This has culminated for us at CBCS when we had the original preliminaries for the cover to New Mutants #98 sent to us under our original art tier.

Harley Quinn truly deserves to be mentioned in the same breath as Deadpool due to the amount of Batman Adventures #12 that hit my desk every day. She also parallels the "merc with a mouth" in that her other appearances are submitted in large numbers, even the once much sought after Scooby-Doo Team-Up #12. The current series seems to be a huge hit as well with the Amanda Conner, Jimmy Palmiotti, and Chad Hardin team really bringing the character into the limelight.

Lastly, I would like to mention a variant that we have started designating in 2015. I believe it is novel and adds another layer to collecting an already collectible issue. On some copies of Marvel Super Heroes Secret Wars #1 (not to be confused with 2015's Secret Wars) there was a manufacturing error in the color on the first page and at the centerfold. This has led the image of Galactus at the centerfold to appear in a blue and white costume. This has led us at CBCS to designate these with the "Blue Galactus Variant."

As I reflect on 2015, I think that it was a good year for comics. The quality of stories and the amount of new readers joining the hobby is reassuring and I look forward to continue collecting, reading, and grading through another successful year for comics in 2016.

D'Arcy Farrell
Pendragon Comics

Marvel Comics: 2015 brought a major crossover Secret Wars. Secret Wars had two purposes. First was to end the unsuccessful MARVEL NOW (Marvel's bad attempt to compete with DC's N52). Second was to create a way to bring the many Marvel universes together (similar to DC's Crisis). It had some okay stories (Old Man Logan), though mostly bad but the one good thing about it was it ended the MARVEL NOW and assured in the new relaunch of Marvel in November 2015. Most of the relaunches had been met with decent favor. For example All-New, All-Different Avengers introduces a younger team different from former Avengers line-up such as Miles Morales from Ultimate Spider-Man. Maybe this will save the X-titles which plummeted in sales during MARVEL NOW. Jessica Jones and Daredevil Netflix TV series were surprisingly well done. Deadpool obviously is getting more and more attention as the movie gets closer to the opening.

DC Comics: 2015 The major event was Convergence which the end purpose was the updating and ending of old "Earth" characters and parallel "Earths" for future events to come. The biggest DC sales of all 2015 were Dark Knight III and Batman: Europa. DC's New52 continues to shine with mostly successful well written stories such as Wonder Woman, and all the Batman titles. Harley Quinn sells through the roof in any format. Expect the new DC movies Suicide Squad and Batman v Superman to be a breath of fresh air. The new Supergirl TV series is well done and decent. Expect major attention given to DC's other TV projects such as Preacher.

Indies: 2015 Garth Ennis' war stories and tales sell well with any publisher. Walking Dead is sagging slightly (no surprise). Saga sells awesome in trade form (highly recommended). Anything by Jeff Lemire sells extremely well. Biggest disappointment on the Indie scene is anything done by Alan Moore, especially at Avatar (sells poorly, disliked). All Avatar sales are slipping except for Garth Ennis' War titles. Mark Millar's (Jupiter) books are well written and illustrated although come out slowly, but worth the wait. Also We Stand on Guard by Image sold extremely well. Other big disappointment in sales is the company Valiant. I say this because even though they have decent stories,art and characters, sales lack! Something is missing unlike the '90s (Barry W. Smith and Jim Shooter, the driving force behind those great '90s books).

All-Ages: Many, many, companies are finally publishing decent material for the younger age. Titles like Invader Zim, My Little Pony, various Disney, Peanuts, and various titles from Marvel and DCs. The only problem I have is past juvenile ages 9-12 you can't sell them any Marvel (very not appropriate) You can't sell them any All-Ages (too juvenile) You can sell some adult DC (mature, intelligent, responsible comics), but other than that there is no other comics. I would hope DC makes a 'tween Supergirl version based on the TV series.

Modern Back Issue Sales (1984-2015): Many keys from this age are extremely hot. X-Factor #6 & #24, Swamp Thing #37, Amazing Spider-Man #361, Tales of the Teen Titans #44, Wolverine limited mini. Anything Vertigo especially Preacher, anything Harley Quinn or Deadpool and Batman: Dark Knight Returns. This is the new age of collecting hot bed so many high desirable keys are low valued unlike the Silver and Bronze Age. For normal back issues the 1980s DCs (low print runs such as WW, GL, Flash, anything Batman, JLA and so on) Amazing Spider-Man and Peter Parker are in demand. For Indies, TMNT is the hottest of them all.

Copper-Late Bronze Age Back Issues (1976-1984): The early 1980s low print DCs are a great investment and are going on 40 years old! As said in Modern, it is still a DC period to buy with the exception of Star Wars. For DC, the hottest would have anything to do with Teen Titans and JLA. Coinciding with Disney's new movies, everyone wants the original Star Wars run especially issues #1-4, 42-44, 68, 81 107.

Early Bronze Age Back Issues (1970-1975): Lots of good stuff in this period and is probably my biggest selling group. This is where Neal Adams shined, DC War was supreme, Swamp Thing, DC Horror, Marvel Westerns and so much great stuff was available on the stand. Many are still undervalued but are going up fast.

1960s Marvel Back Issues: I had a banner year, selling many many keys, especially near December 2015. I sold 2 runs of Daredevil, a run of FF, many single Amazing Spideys like #14,15. Tales of Suspense was a big seller too. Many single *FF*s sold like 45-52.

1960s DC Back Issues: This was their year! Everything sold! In December 2015, I had a run of high grade Green Lantern (#1-99) and Showcase (#25-92) and Brave and the Bold (#31-200) and nothing lasted a day. The rest of the year had 2 runs of JLA (#1-end) and even the Brave and the Bold (#28-30) sell. Showcase of all kinds sold though I had no Flash. Batman and Detective as usually led the pack in total sales. Throughout the rest of the year, nothing was a real highlight as it all sold, key or not. The one to watch for, I feel, is Wonder Woman. She is poised to take her place as a prima investment already. Her run is notoriously low print in all ages, except maybe DC New52 later issues.

1960s Other Back Issues: Ditko was my only high point. All others seemed to slack in sales year-to-year. Archie had a spurt, Tower a bit, but except for Ditko stuff, it wasn't great.

Golden Age Back Issues: Without a doubt, DC and Timely sold best. Timelys are very scarce and sales are low, but any that come in sell immediately. DCs though are in highest demand and are also available. I had a few gems come in from Adventure, Batman, and Detective. Action was scarce. Superman did come around, but sales are slower than Batman. Anything non-superhero really sold slow.

Collector

Overall, the comic book back issue market seemed to be quite key-centric in 2015. It seems that collectors who are run collectors are becoming the minority in the hobby and buyers are consistently chasing a comic due to speculation of a new movie or a first issue or first appearance of a main character. I see more people ask for Defenders #28 (1st full Starhawk app. and an early Guardians of the Galaxy app.) or Marvel Team-Up #95 (1st Mockingbird) whereas a few short years ago, people only asked about these books to fill in holes in their run of the title. It is truly astonishing to see what were once dollar books soar in value. I have mixed feelings on this. While I would be happy to sell a copy of Defenders #28 at a premium, I worry that true collectors who love the hobby are becoming scarce. On the contrary, the magazine back issue market seems to be a different. What is unique about most magazine titles is that they are small in issue number and while collectors do chase after key magazines, there are still essentially run collectors of titles.

The magazine back issue market was very active in 2015 with Marvel/Curtis leading sales. I was surprised to see that many issues that essentially are non-key books go for multiples of Guide solely due to the fact that they were the highest on the census or 9.8s in white pages. It seems that magazine collectors want the best attainable copies of each issue in a given run - whether it is a key book or not. Like comics, condition matters when it comes to magazines, but I think high prices are realized on these high grade magazines due to the fact that they are truly scarcer in high grade than comic books due to size and difficulty of storage.

While I still understand dealers that say magazines are slow sellers even in high grade, I think this is due to the fact that magazine collectors are still a small niche of the hobby. Many high grade magazines will sit in boxes at a show due to the fact that it reaches a small audience. However, I have seen the highest prices for high grade magazines realized on auction sites or dealer websites due to the fact that they reach a larger audience and have more exposure. Bottom line is that if the magazine is truly high grade (9.6-9.8)—slabbing it is worth the investment.

Top Key Magazines for 2015: While the order may be debatable, these issues were hot all year:

1. Marvel Preview #7
2. Marvel Preview #4
3. Vampirella #1
4. Savage Tales #1
5. Tales of the Zombie #1

Treasury Edition Books: When will CGC start to grade these? Size can't be too big of a factor if CGC can grade concert posters. If these ever are able to be graded by a third party grading company—prices will go through the roof. High grade copies of these books are so tough to find and 9.2-9.8 graded copies would go for multiples of Guide. These books are beloved by collectors and are such a cool artifact of the Bronze Age.

CBCS - Quality Control Specialist

The last couple of years I spoke of brotherhood and comradery. How we, as retailers needed to band together and promote our hobby so future generations can appreciate the history of this industry, and move things forward. This is still not a big issue to some. There are still those who build walls to "protect" what is theirs, forgetting the smaller guys, or the smaller venues and the newly interested. Disowning those that leave their fold and burn those bridges. Ask any old comic retailer, if you dig deep enough they all have colorful stories of various characters from their past. From dingy little comic stores, to dealing at flea markets. Oh! and all the unforgettable deals they made! Who among them will have the new colorful stories? If burning bridges is now a standard, who will inspire the Neal Adams or the Joss Whedons of the future?

Sadly I have no answers. In my own experience we had a small group of like minded individuals, not always in agreement, but the respect was there. We offered each other deals, or gave information that would benefit another person, and if need be, watched each others back and took care of them. As a retailer in the current age of comic dealing, I guess that is the best you could hope for. There is one retailer, Dennis Barger, co-owner of Wonderworld Comics, that has stepped up in Michigan. Dennis started getting comic book store owners to band together, forming the Comic Book Retailers Alliance. Member stores of CBRA can be found across the country. An article written from the News-Herald dated Tuesday January 12, 2016 quoted Dennis as saying, "There (are) a lot of things going on in comics right now. Basically, I feel that we have to band together as retailers to explain our side of the story."

CBRA was formed to combat the push to purely digital comics that has been going on for the last several years by both Marvel and DC Comics. However it goes, it is nice seeing retailers banding together. This is something I believe this industry has needed for a long time, just how much influence it will have on the industry, and the response of the DC and Marvel remains to be seen.

All this leads us into my last year of conventions, and the last few that I attended, for reasons that will become obvious.

We spent a few months getting ready for our last big show, scrambling to make lists of what will and what will not sell, getting our ideas together and comparing notes. Checking for last minute deals on eBay and around various cities and talking to other dealers, formulating a plan of action for the show. Trying to make this our best show ever. I did curse, missing on some great books on eBay, but other plans fell into place that proved to be worth the risk. There were more than a few late night meetings over what and how we were going to pull this off, and honestly, this year it proved to be worth it. We did it right. There were more than a few eyes raised within our group of friends when we started unloading and setting up. We brought the usual "movie flavored" comics, those first appearances that just about every other vendor brings, as well as the runs of various soon-to-be major motion picture characters. This year, just like the past few years proved to be a good sales year for those seeking the movie tie-in books. Things we took a chance on this year were more industry related "pop culture" items. Items such as neon signs, the smaller bar type lighting. Glassware and comic book related artwork, as well as comic art itself. The deals we made on comics throughout the year and any of those I took a chance on through eBay, as well as books from my own personal collection made the final cut to bring to the show. The results? It was our best three day show ever! Deals started on day one and continued to happen throughout the weekend. They slowed when the final gun went off, and the convention was closed to the public. The retailers were allowed that final big sigh and collapsed for a moments breath. Just so they could run and make those final few deals that they had cultivated throughout the entire weekend. The tear down was the next step to began. As I said this was our best show ever, so tearing down an almost completely empty booth was fairly simple. The reasons for all this is to follow up on my report that began two years ago and started "So You Want to be a Comic Book Retailer." For anyone considering this, it has been my pleasure to share these stories and information. Just showing you that a bit of insight, a bit more planning than usual, and taking more than a few chances on some items can prove to be fruitful and make your own personal comic book retailing experience, a lot more enjoyable.

Now for the big reveal that I teased about earlier. I have traded all my conventions, all my time in the stores for a new start in the hobby I love so much. I packed up my bags and headed south and have taken the title of Quality Control Specialist for CBCS (Comic Book Certification Service)! Who would have thought, that the youngster from the midwest who loved comics way before he could read would be sitting here, among our hobby's elite, compiling lists of books that are shooting up the charts. First and foremost, CBCS and the people I work with now are the best in the business, I was so honored that they considered me, and took me into the fold. Next, just seeing all these amazing books! Some books I have only heard about, are now in my hands, waiting my approval to be sent back to their homes.

Working here at CBCS in their vast facility and seeing all these amazing books one can see the coming trends, just like you can at the conventions. It seems here as well as there, movie-related books reign supreme. Not all books however have a movie tie-in, some are just speculated to be good sellers and books that will be wanted by the collecting populace. The newer books will undoubtedly have numerous variant covers. Counted among those new speculated books would be both releases of Spider-Gwen. Gwen Stacy has been a sweetheart of the Marvel Universe for countless years, having her first appearance in Amazing Spider-Man #31. Given her recent rebirth into the "Spider-verse" she will almost certainly re-flourish as the darling of the Marvel Universe again.

Turning our attention to the movie-related treasures, I see Batman Adventures #12, the first appearance of Harley Quinn daily. Not as frequent, but still among the top books, we see Harley's second appearance in The Batman Adventures: Mad Love, the same holds true for the prestige format, Batman: Harley Quinn, which welcomed the character into the DC Universe continuity. I was rather surprised at the next couple of books I see on a semi-regular basis, DC Super-Stars #17 which heralds the first appearance of The Huntress, and All Star Comics # 58, the first All Star Comics since 1951. On a lesser note there is only an occasional All Star Comics #69, which by the way came out the same day as DC Super-Stars #17, the issue that revealed The Huntress to the Justice Society of America.

Big names on the Marvel side are the ever popular New Mutants #98 and X-Force #2, the first two appearances of Deadpool. Following that up with the two first appearances of Gambit, Gambit's first appearance was in the Uncanny X-Men Annual #14, 1990. His first appearance in actual X-Men continuity was in Uncanny X-Men #266, August, 1990. Not far behind those we see Werewolf By Night #32 the first appearance of Moon Knight, Marvel Premiere #15, the first appearance of Iron Fist, which follows up with Iron Fist #14, the first appearance of Sabertooth. Where is Spider-Man on this list? Well let me see, Amazing Spider-Man #252, Marvel Team-Up #141, and Marvel Super-Heroes Secret Wars #8 all credited with the first appearance of the black costume, are frequent visitors upon my desk. Amazing Spider-Man #129 trumps that list with the first appearance of The Punisher. The first appearance of Felicia Hardy as The Black Cat in Amazing Spider-Man #194 should also be counted among the collector favorites. Did I forget anyone? YES! Amazing Spider-Man #14 the very first appearance of Spidey's leading nemesis, The Green Goblin! With independent titles, Spawn #1 is still a staple for Image Comics, and you could not go wrong picking up any of the early first appearances of the Valiant universe titles. With the return of Valiant to the comic publishing world, those early issues are often requested at conventions contributing to their collectability.

For Golden Age books, you might not think of them as having any modern movie tie-ins. There are two that come to mind. Batman #59, June/July 1950 with the first appearance of Floyd Lawton, better known to the comic world as Deadshot. The original version of Deadshot might not be as recognizable as the current one, he was a tuxedo-wearing, gun belt toting debutant. His next appearance would be in the Bronze Age, Detective #474, with a complete makeover into the villain/anti-hero we have come to enjoy now. A second Golden Age comic that has a movie tie-in would be Marvel Family #1, December 1945, the first appearance of Black Adam. Black Adam was created to be a one-shot villain for the first issue of Marvel Family. His second appearance, another Bronze Age release, would be Shazam! #28 April 1976. There has been some discussions and disagreements about his actual second appearance. Shazam! #8 reprints Marvel Family #1, which leads to the argument of his actual second appearance. In my opinion his second appearance would be Shazam! #28. As a sidebar to appearances, I do see a few issues of Batman #357, the first appearance of Killer Croc, and as a bonus, Jason Todd. This of course was all in the old DC Universe before any crisis.

Recently the television has given a boost to comic sales as well, with Arrow, The Flash, and Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D doing so well. One of the most popular books related to television is New Teen Titans #2, December 1980, the first appearance of Deathstroke, who for the first two seasons of Arrow hounded Oliver Queen. Originally brought in as a Teen Titans villain, Deathstroke rose through the ranks in the DC Universe to challenge some of their toughest heroes. Next up is Tales of the Teen Titans #44, July, 1984, Dick Grayson's first appearance as Nightwing. This book rose in popularity due to the proposed Teen Titans live action television show, which as of this writing, has been scrapped for the time being. The Flash #139, September 1963, was the first appearance of Eobard Thawne, Professor Zoom, or more commonly known as the Reverse Flash. Where is S.H.I.E.L.D you ask? Well Nick Fury as our now eye patch-wearing secret agent first appeared in Strange Tales #135, August 1965. Which brought about Nick Fury, Agent of S.H.I.E.L.D #1, June 1968. In that series issue #4 seems to be the most popular though, with that striking Jim Steranko cover art. My last mention here will be of a more recent show, Supergirl. We saw the very first live action appearance of Livewire there. Her comic appearances started with Superman Adventures #5, March 1997, and then she crossed over into the DC Universe's continuity with Action Comics #835, March 2006. Surprisingly I have not seen as many Action Comics #252, May 1959. The very first appearance of Supergirl, and Metallo! That comic has a two big first appearances, and a welcome addition to any collection.

To no one's surprise, 2015 will go down as the year of Star Wars*. (*Star Wars #1 shown)

The movies, the television shows, all help promote our hobby. The aforementioned books are ones I see on a more frequent basis and in my humble opinion are a welcome addition to anyone's collection. More treasures are being dug up everyday, more new and exciting copies crossing my path. With every daily mail delivery we see thousands of books coming in here at CBCS, and I can't wait to see what rare and exciting treasures cross my desk. I honestly have to say, does life get any better than this? We'll see! Until then, thanks for reading, may you find all that you are looking for and enjoy every second of the hunt, I know I will!!

A year in review of what took place in the comic hobby couldn't possibly be complete without looking back at the movies that kept fan excitement at theaters, and comic shops alive and strong. 2015 will go down as the year of Star Wars, and Marvel's flagship title fit familiar characters, and ones from an "expanded universe" together so seamlessly, we instantly found ourselves loving the covers and stories as much as the comics we read and the toy figures we played with as kids.

Marvel's relaunched series, like the movie, was what fans had been wanting for years, and played an integral part in what felt like a year long galactic celebration in anticipation of the film's December release date.

The build-up to what would become a memorable year for me however began sometime around March when first Star Wars marketer Charles Lippincott began retelling on Facebook how the Marvel deal to produce the original comic series in 1977 really went down. For those who don't know, Charles Lippincott was directly involved with marketing and merchandising of Star Wars, and was the person who first pitched a deal to Marvel to produce the comic series.

From Lippincott's retelling, we can understand the strong interest in using the comic book medium and fan culture as a way to promote the film. Lippincott writes "besides the typical publicity route, I would arrange for us to get put on San Diego's 1976 Comic-Con schedule, and even bring Roy [Thomas] and Howard [Chaykin] out for a presentation. We would do a Chaykin poster that would be sold for a minimal fee to give the fans something they could take away with them until the comic book came out." Marvel's financial troubles at the time are well-documented, and to this point Lippincott continues: "we would not only give them the first 5 issues free, they wouldn't have to spend a nickel promoting it. We would foot the bill, from Comic-Con to ads. This was an offer Marvel couldn't refuse." For more on this fantastic retelling, make sure to visit: http://therealcharleslippincott.blogspot.ca/

To read about the early beginnings of Star Wars being inextricably linked to Marvel's comic book deal in and of itself is a testament to the historic and ongoing contribution and influence of comics in film, art and culture. Whether it was A-list artists like Howard Chaykin in 1976, or John Cassaday in the 2015 relaunch of the series, the magic happened with the artwork in the comics, as much as it did in the film. We now know that the Star Wars series went on to become a huge success and helped Marvel avert bankruptcy. When the series launched in 1977, it sold over a million copies, becoming the top-selling single-issue comic book of the last twenty years. Star Wars became the first-ever million selling comic book sold through direct market channels without the aid of newsstands.

From January onward, it wasn't as much about a repeating storyline or retelling of history, but how history would be made once again. Earlier this year, Marvel Comics confirmed they had moved more than 5 million units in the direct market, which included second prints and overprints. The anticipation trickled into Star Wars merchandise sales, a feverish and sustained uptick in vintage toy line sales, as well as new price records on variants, which included a record price on a modern comic variant with Star Wars: Vader Down #1 selling on eBay for $4000 in November. In the same month, Metropolis Comics held a John Cassaday exhibit, which was the first time some of the comic art appeared publicly for sale, and based on how briskly Star Wars art has been moving, it's probably the last we will see of them. By the time I had contacted Metropolis, Marvel's John Cassaday cover to Star Wars #1 was spoken for, although I was fortunate to have picked-up an unpublished cover featuring my favourite bounty hunter, Boba Fett.

Again in November, and in the city where it all started, the San Diego Comic Art Gallery held an exhibit featuring 30 pieces of rare Star Wars original art, which leaves some hope that in the future exhibits featuring these one of a kind pieces might still allow fans to see them up close and appreciate them even if the tendency is for such rare artwork to get locked-up in collections.

The highly anticipated movie created an uptick in all things Star Wars, and it's expected to continue with the first film in the Star Wars Anthology series, Rogue One. Apart from the first Marvel Star Wars issue selling strongly, the first appearance of Boba Fett in Marvel Star Wars #42 has been the one issue I can never seem to have enough copies on hand to fill want lists, and is anticipated to only get harder to track down when an official release date for the Anthology series Boba Fett film is announced. It should be noted that a fan favourite (and slightly more popular) issue continues to be Star Wars #68, featuring an iconic Boba Fett cover pose fans go nuts over. Star Wars #68 also represents a highlight sale of mine this past year, involving a raw VF copy of the 75¢ cover price variant which sold for $150.

On the topic of original comic art, one of the highlights had to be seeing Neal Adams' original cover art to Green Lantern #76 appear on the market, and selling for $442,150 through Heritage Auctions. Interestingly, this was the first time a major art piece appearing for sale came with a "complete approval and blessing" from the artist. I'll reserve judgment on such endorsements should it become a recurring theme, but suffice it to say that if someone agreed to share with Neal Adams, with proceeds being donated to Hero Initiative, it's a feel good moment for the hobby, but I see it as a benevolent act, without indicating or creating any duty on any bonafide purchaser currently holding vintage artwork to do the same.

Looking ahead with 2016 ushering in two more highly anticipated superhero films in Batman v Superman and Captain America: Civil War, I have no doubt tie-in issues and comics relating to character appearances in upcoming films will continue to result in key appearances rising in value. Reserving some judgment that with the former film, there has been an online sentiment of fatigue towards the industries "variant" push, it's uncertain whether DC's upcoming March line-up of Batman v Superman variant covers will be able to continue on the success Marvel established earlier in the year with its Star Wars variant covers. As much as I look forward to seeing two films pitting hero against hero, I am slightly more interested in seeing the spin-off potential of the Black Panther's appearance in Civil War, as his set photos and physical presence in the trailers thus far have really captured my interest. So much so that if Kirby's awesome cover art from his first appearance in Fantastic Four #52 wasn't reason enough to own a copy, then the thought we might be seeing more of Black Panther in future films gives pause to hunt down a high grade copy soon.

One trend I'm happy to report on, and which carries over from a talking point expressed in my previous years report, is the success CBCS has been having. The amount of listings appearing may still represent a fraction of how many CGC slabs are available for purchase through eBay, however the premiums collectors are paying for CBCS slabbed comics of equal title, issue and grade have been on par with CGC's, and this is the best evidence to indicate the market was ready for a competitor. Facebook groups have been buzzing with chatter on CBCS, with the majority of positive sentiment being expressed toward their signature verification program. My only hope is that at some point CBCS starts grading underground comix as I'd like to commence submitting books from my collection, as well as cracking out those I've had graded by CGC to be encapsulated in CBCS' superior product, both from a slab design and presentation aspect.

There are still a few Canadian Price Variants (CPVs) that continue to elude me, though I was able to track down a Transformers #1, and a few multipacks, which included some Bronze Age DC horror, a few giant sized issues (which are quite scarce due to discovering after their production that their weight could breach polybags) and a Harvey Richie Rich/ Casper comic pack that came with a 45 rpm record - I'd really like to find more of these! A large part of the reason I had to hibernate my acquisitions and sales this year was due to the need to transition a loved one in a care facility.

The months of March through July were spent handling the estate downsizing aspects of the transition process, and I found myself realizing this could be a mega trend in years to come with others caring for aging loved ones. I had been doing estate appraisals for many years, but in November, I became a CPPA accredited appraiser, which has opened doors to handling more estate downsizing projects, as well as providing me with networking opportunities through other personal property appraisers from across the county who need someone with valuation experience and knowledge in the areas of vintage comics, toys and original comic art.

Moving ahead, I'd like to keep my goals simple. I have been working as hard as possible to establish new channels to buy the stuff I collect. This applies to selling as well, and while this years annual outdoor summer show was a bust due to a storm that ripped through our area, I hope to continue to develop this selling venue further along with emerging retailing opportunities, both online and in the physical world. Becoming an accredited appraiser required some encouragement as it's been awhile since I found myself in a classroom setting, much less needing to write an exam. However, I immediately recognized the value in having an added credibility checkpoint when working within certain industries, especially with insurers for pre- or post-loss valuations.

To the point of striving to develop new channels to acquire pieces, one of my best finds from advertising locally came in the way of a John Romita Sr. Spider-Man cover (pencils by Gil Kane) that was featured over the summer on Albert Bryan Bigley's blog. The cover was found 10 minutes from where I live - just the kind of find that validates the need to keep doing all the tedious leg work, even if 9 out of 10 times the results might not justify the hassle. All in all, it's been a great year for building on my collection, networking and furthering my collecting pursuits, and I look forward to another exciting year in the comic hobby!

Hippy Comix

Now that we're over a decade & a half into the 21st Century, I would say that we've entered a kind of new Golden Age for comic books and related pop-culture fandom! Never before have we seen so many easily available reprints for reader/collectors of newspaper strips and pulps, as well as trade paperback and hardcover collected comic book content stretching from the 1930s to present. The number of current comics-inspired and adapted movies and TV/Internet shows, many of them financially and/or critically successful, is truly mind-blowing, as are the DVD and streaming availability of older shows. There's a bankrupting volume of collectibles available in the mainstream and specialty markets, from t-shirts to statues and prop replicas to plastic and plush figures that many of us only dreamed of as younger fans in a world that hadn't yet caught up to us.

These phenomena, while generally helpful to the big companies' intellectual property bottom lines (and detrimental to our bank accounts), don't always translate to actual new comic book sales for retailers. While characters have crossed over into the mainstream, the comic book medium itself is likely to continue with smaller print runs and the higher cover prices necessary thereby. The big publishers beholden to corporate masters have mainly been slow to capitalize on mass-media interest, or have been forced by those higher-ups to ignore coordination with properties whose licenses are not directly controlled. And frankly, the ludicrous number of alternate covers for individual issues has cannibalized reader wallets and forced many erstwhile completists to quit buying titles, families of titles, and even entire company outputs. However, while most new comics' sales haven't effectively increased from the Mass Media boom in comic book content, certain back issue values and sales have seen healthy and in some cases phenomenal growth for first and early appearances of characters such as Rocket Raccoon, Star-Lord, Harley Quinn, the Joker, John Constantine/Hellblazer, Apocalypse, Elektra, and Wolverine.

There are of course generational variations across the positive/negative trends this century. While the first waves of extant comic book fandom are pushing 75-90 (the pre-hero to EC-era folks) and their collections being sold by themselves or survivors, the main beneficiaries are fans and retailers in their late 40s-late 60s who have an easier time accessing (if not affording) these earlier collectibles. The younger folks born in the 70s-80s are seeing their favorites (Star Wars, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Power Rangers, Transformers, the tiny GI Joes, My Little Pony) benefitting from the media and merchandising boom, and indeed it is this demographic which seems to have the related licensed comic books selling well. Look to the Nineties-born Nickelodeon/Disney Channel-raised youth to drive trends in the next decade, assuming they have any purchasing power... ;)

Per usual, I must thank Bob Overstreet, Steve Geppi, J.C. Vaughn, Mark Huesman, Amanda Sheriff, and all the fine folks at Gemstone Publishing for allowing me to contribute to The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, as well as for their ongoing support of my own modest effort Fogel's Underground Price & Grading Guide, which serves to supplement and expand our shared mission of spreading Funny Book Fandom!

South Philly Comics

Greetings, everyone, from sunny Philadelphia! I'm reporting from South Philly's friendly neighborhood comic shop, South Philly Comics! Now, we aren't the largest of Philly's 8 comic shops but we do offer one of the most extensive and varied comic selections our fair city has to offer. The core of our business is the monthly comics and trade paperbacks and everything else is gravy. We love the in-person comic shop experience and the influx of new customers and regulars shows that a lot of other people do too. Sure, you could go online and read a blog to figure out what comics you want to read and go out and get them, or just flat out read them online and that's fine, but it isn't nearly as fun as walking into a comic shop and exploring. We strive to put customer service first by listening to our clients' likes and dislikes to create personally tailored recommendations; no blog can do that.

It can be intimidating to walk into a comic shop for the first time. Seeing the massive number of comics available and not knowing where to start is overwhelming, and we get that. It is disheartening when we hear stories about how someone went to a comic shop and were treated rudely for not knowing anything about comics or were treated weirdly for being a woman. Those of us who operate brick and mortar shops are ambassadors of comic books. We shouldn't treat someone poorly because they discovered our awesome hobby later than we did. We should welcome them to our neat little community. You could definitely make more money that way! Anyway, let me step down from my soapbox and get on with the report.

Monthly comic sales are strong! Lots of old and new comic readers are attacking the racks every month, keeping up with their favorite stories and discovering new ones. Saga is currently our most popular comic, outselling even the Batman titles, which is quite a feat. Image comics as a whole have been doing exceptionally well for us, bringing in more new readers than either of the Big Two.

Since Marvel and DC pretty much only offer one genre of comics super-hero with the exceptions of their Icon and Vertigo imprints, Image comics offers the absolute widest variety of stories. You want a Lewis and Clark horror comic? Got it! Interested in an alternate history sci-fi western with Death as the protagonist? Got that too! Also it must be said that their cheap introductory trade paperbacks are fantastic and I wish other companies would start doing the same thing.

Our monthly DC comic sales have been good, outside of the Convergence hiccup, and continue to grow. Batman, Justice League, and Harley Quinn are on top, and despite TV's success with Arrow and The Flash, we have a hard time selling their monthly titles!

Over at Marvel, Amazing Spider-Man, Deadpool, Matt Fraction's Hawkeye, and everything Hickman were our best sellers. Secret Wars main series continues to sell well but the minis have suffered from the main book's constant release delays. This, paired with the All-New #1's being released during the event, has caused a lot of grumpy fans. IDW, Dark Horse, Boom, Avatar, and Valiant have mild success with the exception of Boom's Lumberjanes, which is a huge seller here in loose issues and trades.

Back Issues: This year has been our best year in back issue acquisitions and sales. We get about 2 to 10 calls everyday asking if we buy comics, so we haven't really had to travel much to find cool old stuff. This year, we didn't see much from the Golden Age come our way but we were able to buy and sell some nifty Captain Marvel paper toy gliders which, pardon me, flew right outta here! We also picked up some old copies of the Weird Tales pulp novels and those also sold extremely fast. I know neither of those are comic books, but thought it was worth mentioning.

Silver Age comics in any grade did very well for us this year, particularly "Key" issues, and those that just had a great cover. We have more people ask for Silver Age Marvel than DC, but both move well. Marvel definitely moves faster with Amazing Spider-Man, Fantastic Four, and Batman being the most asked for. We bought a Fantastic Four #46 1st Black Bolt cover and within an hour of posting it on social media, someone came in to buy it! That's a new record for us!

Everything Neal Adams also moves very fast as we have had great sales with his Batman and Brave and the Bold issues. This year our biggest Silver Age sale was Our Army at War #83, the 1st true appearance of Sgt. Rock, for $700 in about GD condition. That was a hard one to part with, but they had the cash. We also sold a pretty beaten up and water damaged Flash #105 for about $300 in about FR/GD condition.

Bronze Age comic sales were hot this year, making up the bulk of our back issue sales. It is definitely an era that has benefited from television and movie hype speculation. We went through at least 2 complete runs of Frank Miller's Daredevil and, needless to say, our D section severely decreased 2 months after the Netflix show released! Any Key issues we got in any condition sold from this era!

Copper Age comics sales were dominated by Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles! We often get calls asking if he have any old black and white TMNT issues and luckily our answer has always been yes. Even the reprints of issues #14 sold very well. We also saw much success with Alan Moore's run of Swamp Thing with people looking to complete their runs or looking for issues #37 & 25, John Constantine's 1st appearance and cameo. We also saw lots of people clamoring for Legends #3 and #1, 1st appearance the Modern Suicide Squad and Amanda Waller.

It's been a great year for comic books and we believe the next year will be even better! Thanks for listening to what I have to say and thank you J.C Vaughn and Mark Huesman for letting me say it.

Dan Gallo
Comic Art Con / Dealer

Everyone uses the Guide, (The Oversteet Comic Book Price Guide that is). It's just that most people don't realize it! As a full time dealer, the Guide is never more than an arm's length away from me as I refer to it multiple times a day. It doesn't mean that I price books at the exact number on the page. It doesn't mean that I don't refer to other sources such as market data or use my knowledge of the marketplace. I use every tool in the shed with the Guide being the tool as it is the foundation of what we do as buyers and sellers. As for prices, sometimes books are priced right around Guide if not exactly that. Other times prices are not even close. They may be half Guide, double Guide, or 20% +/- Guide but it is still based on Guide. So if someone dismisses you or looks at you funny for saying you use the Guide remember that they use it too, (but they just don't know it!).

In case you were wondering, yes, I still love this stuff! I mean really though, what's not to love? Whether we read the books, collect them, invest in them, go the movies, wear the t-shirts, attend conventions, play the video games, buy the toys or watch the TV shows, there is something for everyone and this genre has evolved to a point where it is now seamlessly woven into the fabric of society. It's everywhere and it's not going away.

Given the immense popularity of superheroes it is no wonder that more and more people continue to flock to the hobby that in turn drives the prices for key books. And that's where I come in. I specialize in graded key issues and original comic book art. I don't deal in bulk or miscellaneous issues; only the good stuff. I like to say I have the meat but no potatoes. Unfortunately that creates a particular challenge… acquisition. No matter how hard I try I just can't grow my inventory. I would love to be five deep in every super key but with buying being tough and selling being easy it's really not possible. I guess I am not the only one who loves this stuff!

Let's talk books. I don't want to bore you with pages of sales data, (which are already outdated by the way), or overstate the obvious, (AF #15s are hot, I can't keep Hulk #181s in stock, Action #1 & Detective #27 rule…wait, I just did!). I rather go in a different direction by offering some market insight and opinion of what may happen in the future and not the past. Here we go:

Golden Age: There is nothing quite like "Big Gold." The top 25 or so books listed in Overstreet's Top 100 GA Books fit the bill plus a few others that did not make it that high on last year's list, (Wonder Woman #1, More Fun #73). It would be splitting hairs to pick some over others but some books have higher demand than others and just because they Guide higher doesn't mean people want them more. For even a seasoned investor, "Big Gold" can be very pricey which is why we see low grade copies fetching huge prices. Even if you are not really a Golden Age person, if you have the opportunity to pull down one of these monsters, do so. Most Silver Age keys come up regularly but "Big Gold" is another story and when it does, it's like throwing a slab of beef into an infested pool of hungry piranha. When it comes time to sell you want to have a lot of beef!

More Fun Comics #73, with the 1st apps. of Aquaman and Green Arrow, could be considered "Big Gold."

Silver Age: This is my third year writing this report and for the third time I have to keep talking about the value I see in Fantastic Four #4 which contains the first SA appearance of Namor. He is the biggest Marvel character by far yet to have his day on the big screen. His time will come and when you first hear of it it will already be too late. It is undervalued and a low census book to boot. Get the highest grade you can afford and do it now. Another favorite of mine is Tales to Astonish #13, the first appearance of Groot. The book is super scarce but quiet right now making it a great time to buy. I believe this one has serious long term potential because I have little doubt that Disney will make the talking raccoon and walking tree into A-List characters for the next generation. Think about that.

Scarcity: I referenced that in my last two examples but I wanted to put that into better perspective. As of 11/30/15, below is the census for just a few super key issues graded by CGC with blue labels:
Daredevil #1 – 2271
Amazing Fantasy #15 – 1513
Tales of Suspense #39 – 1156
Incredible Hulk #1 – 833
Fantastic Four #4 – 606
Tales to Astonish #13 – 177
"Big Gold" – a lot less!

Bronze Age: I like Marvel Spotlight #32, the first appearance of Spider-Woman. If a 9.8 is not in your budget I would grab a few 9.6s. Often overlooked is Amazing Spider-Man #86, the re-into and origin of the Black Widow in her new costume, (essentially when the Black Widow becomes the Black Widow as we know her). I would be careful with some of the later Bronze Age books because they are very common and very volatile. When you see a book in 9.8 go from $350 to $1200 to $2000 it can just as easily go the other way. We have seen a bunch of that lately. It's a roller coaster I don't want to be on. How would you like to be the one who paid $2000 for a book only to see the last one barely break $1000 just a few months later? And I don't want to be the guy who sells it to you either! If something has gone up really quickly and you don't yet have it then just wait. It has already popped and it will either level off or slide back. If you still want it go in then. The chances of something exploding, then you buy one after the pop, then it exploding yet again is slim.

Modern Age: Punisher Limited Series #1. Big fan. Also, even though there hasn't been any movement in years I have always loved Amazing Spider-Man #252. With Modern books I would shoot for the 9.8s because they are just too common and I think over time we will see a widening of the gap between the 9.8s and the 9.6s. The few exceptions would be Amazing Spider-Man #300, Batman Adventures #12, and maybe New Mutants #98 since they are already pretty pricey.

Scarcity, or lack thereof: Just because something is common does not mean that it is not desirable. Modern keys are proof of that but being mindful of the numbers can't hurt. As of 11/30/15, below is the census for just a few Modern key issues graded by CGC with blue labels. The first number is the total number graded while the second number is the quantity in 9.8:
Amazing Spider-Man #300: 9083/610

Batman Adventures #12: 1796/368
New Mutants #98: 7367/1882
Punisher Limited Series #1: 871/160

As much as your budget allows, you want to have the 9.8s over any other grade. Even though there are 9000 ASM #300s, a whopping 8400 are NOT 9.8.

Original Comic Book Art: To put it simply, art is great! As co-promoter of Comic Art Con I have had a front row seat as I have watched the hobby continually expand. Usually people don't start out collecting original art but rather they end up collecting it. Often times they complete their comic book collection or just want something more challenging or more unique. Collecting original art is the final frontier of the hobby. The market is fragmented, nuanced, and there can be a huge learning curve, (but don't let that scare you). To minimize any risk talk to art collectors and find a dealer whom you trust to help guide you through the initial steps. And don't feel bad if you struggle with it because even some of the most savvy collectors will privately admit that they don't know anything!

Conclusion: Have you ever heard the expression, "You have to be in it to win it?" I have watched people throughout the years sit on the fence, paralyzed for one reason or the other, unable to pull the trigger as well as seeing people with little thought dive in head first and have wild success. Try to find a balance between the two. One thing is for certain, if you don't pony up this hobby will leave you in the dust and from my own experience the pride and joy of ownership will supersede any angst you had leading up to acquisition. We all go through periods of indecisiveness but don't let it get the better of you.

My report tilts toward investment over collecting and you can solicit opinions on how best to invest from anyone, but when it comes to collecting you need to follow your own intuition. The journey of a collector is never a straight path as there are always bumps and curves ahead and just when you find your focus you hit a fork and have to refocus. It never ends.

One More Thing: To the individual who sought me out at NYCC to tell me he liked my market report, (OCBPG #45), thank you and thanks for adding to the pressure of writing a worthy follow up.

Greetings! 2015 continues the strong interest and strength of our comic hobby! I just attended the Portland Rose City Con, and the enormous crowds of people there buying comics and "pop" culture related items was stunning! It was crowded to the point of a San Diego Con crowd, which for the Portland, Oregon area is really saying something. By "buying", I mean I personally watched sales hand over fist for graphic novels, raw and slabbed books, new and old…you name it. It is a testament to the buying power and popularity of Comic Cons that support a myriad of other goods, such as shirts, ornamental goods, toys, posters, original art: both comic related and not, non-comic book fiction, and even FEZES! On top of which, numerous extremely popular movie and television tie-ins make our hobby's characters come to life in a GOOD way, fueling interest and investment.

The "conventional" markets for investment, be it banking, bonds, stocks, CDs, Treasuries, or what have you….dim in the bright fertile returns of collectible comic material. My mantra of "tangible assets" for placing one's resources is justified in so many fields, such as fine art, exotic cars, firearms, real estate, …and comic books for their fine returns on investment. Original art also falls in this category. The many auctions running online through Heritage, ComicConnect, ComicLink, James Julia, eBay, and many others confirms all those investment areas' popularity and desirability. So the hobby is enjoying not only strong participation, but continued strength in comparison with impossibly low returns promulgated by the Federal Reserve.

Personally, I have been enjoying all the uproar and excitement surrounding comic collecting today! Seeing younger people stepping up and buying mainline upper level books, but especially knowing their history thrills me. When I was a kid, there were very few avenues to understand which books were which, or even that a given book even EXISTED! Golden Age books were a secret thing to a little kid in Portland, Oregon in 1961. I was awed by the few old books that survived my Father's childhood. But the size, smell, and content of Golden Age books against the Silver Age books off the stand enticed the hell out of me, not only in 1961, but NOW, too! Their raw flavor, and World War Two Allied and Axis propaganda themes to this day exemplifies the Golden Age to me. They hit you in the gut! They visually assault you! The danger in the world is splashed page after page into your mind…Thick necked Nazis, Coke-Bottle Glassed Japanese, and Thug Italians all crammed into the covers and stories then. The Silver Age heroes were much more refined and streamlined. Their plots were more cerebral and continuing in nature. Brash, self promoting bombast by Marvel, and classic, refined "thinking man" stories joined lovely art for National (DC).

In this light, and continuing to take my own advice, I have continued searching for, and snagging books I love and want to park money in. My only caveats to this process is to be sure you love the books you buy if it takes a hit, or if investment is your only criteria, avail yourself of our own Price Guide, GPA, completed sales, and Census figures before plunging. In my own situation, it has to do both things. What can I say …love and money!! I also for the first time have decided to slab up raw books of long standing in my collection. Both CBCS and CGC offer a great service quantifying and commodifying valuable books to our hobby and the market as a whole. It virtually removes all subjective negatives describing the condition and originality of comics and other ephemera. Without that worry, non-hobby investors can buy, track, sell, and re-buy books which brings so many more people into our field. WARNING! It also means you better make up your mind about books you want when you get the chance! If you dither, someone else will swoop, hobbyist or otherwise, and you will be S.O.L.! Here are some of my additions for this year. Our Guide, and the GPA pricing on graded books give or take is what I gave for all these: Strange Tales #89 (4.0), Strange Tales #110 (9.4), Strange Tales #107 (9.6), Tales to Astonish #35 (9.0), Tales to Astonish #13 (7.0), Action Comics #252 (6.5), Star Spangled Comics #1 (6.5), Star Spangled Comics #2 (9.4), Batman #2 (5.5), Batman #3 (6.0), Batman #4 (6.0), Batman #5 (8.5), Batman #6 (7.5), Batman #11 (6.5), Batman #66 (9.0), Crime Does Not Pay #46 (4.5), Showcase #13 (8.0), howcase #14 (7.0), Crime Reporter #2 (7.5), Adventure Comics #95 (8.5), America's Greatest Comics #1 (6.0), Amazing Adventures #1 (5.5), Betty and Veronica #75 (6.5), Superman #123 (9.4), and Fight Comics #35 (9.4).

Good luck in the coming year in all your collecting goals!

In the stores, two of our hottest characters are Deadpool and Harley Quinn. The typical pricing for a standard Deadpool comics is a minimum of six dollars in NM. It is a bit much as an across-the-board standard but just worth consideration possibly? Especially with the movie in February. It's a bit high on our end. I'm aware. Also, Harley Quinn is one of the fastest selling characters. Every series with her in it, we can't keep in stock despite how much we mark it up. Her popularity fails to fade away, especially with her upcoming appearance in the Suicide Squad movie. We can easily mark any comic that has her on the cover at twenty dollars and it never fails to sell within a couple days. One shots and mini series are even more difficult to keep in and have shot up in price at the stores. Her first appearance in Batman Adventures #12, is being sold in the $1000 range online and even more in most stores I visit.

As well as those two being hot characters, I think that prices of titles related to current pop culture should rise. With all of the film and television shows, more key issues have shot up in value. From what I've been observing, the day that news is announced about a character, the price surges and then within a week settles at a median price between the surge and where it originally stood. So off the top of my head I would personally consider increasing prices on the key issues and first appearances of Dr. Strange, Suicide Squad, Black Panther, Civil War, Wasp, Preacher, Lucifer, Inhumans, Thanos, Infinity Gauntlet, S.H.I.E.L.D., Iron Spider, Green Arrow, Batman, Death in the Family, Doomsday, Sandman, Outcast, Jessica Jones, Daredevil, Punisher, Luke Cage, Elektra, Captain Marvel, Killer Croc, Victor Zsasz, Gotham, Cyborg, Static Shock, Firestorm, Amanda Waller, Enchantress, Joker, Katana, Deadshot, El Diablo, Captain Boomerang, Rick Flag, Apocalypse, Age of Apocalypse, Gambit, The Killing Joke, Bloodshot, Wonder Woman, Thor Ragnarok, Scott Lang Ant-Man, The Flash, Aquaman, and Shazam!

This year we undertake to offer a somewhat more comprehensive view of the market for older comic books. Many factors are involved in setting the value of back issues, including the means of acquisition, methods of marketing and sales, the public perception of comic art in general and the availability of resources sufficient for fandom to invest in high dollar books.

The Never-Ending Treasure Hunt: Whether dealer or collector, we are all on the prowl for accumulations of older comics. It is not uncommon for the average middle-age collector to dispose of his books for a higher purpose, such as the education of a child or to meet unanticipated medical expenses. Sophisticated collectors understand that a dealer will pay only a percentage of the market value of books. It becomes simply a matter of supply and demand economics. This is typically true with Silver Age material, which is not all that hard to locate.

Finding and buying a Golden Age, or even Atomic Age, collection, is a different matter. A man who read and saved comics during the height of the Golden Age, that is, 1938 through 1946, is likely now to be in an age range of 75 to 85 years, depending on how one estimates the age of young readers back in the day. Most of the books we have turned up in recent years came from the estates of such ancient aficionados. However, given the widespread publicity generated by the big dollar sale of certified high grade comics, many families who fall heir to a chestful of Golden Age nuggets turn to auction houses, and other internet means of disposition, a phenomenon we discuss below. The ultimate hat trick in this quest is to find the comics and buy them before an auction firm makes its pitch. Difficult, but not impossible. Our closely guarded secret, revealed here for the first time: a comic-sniffing dog, walked in older neighborhoods where the houses have attics and basements.

The Auction Business: Just about everybody knows that the major competitors in selling slabbed comics are Heritage, in Dallas, and Comic Connect, in New York. They regularly acquire excellent collections and put them up, graded, for bid several times a year. There are others, such as Phillip Weiss, New York. Beyond that, there is a second tier of local auctions in other parts of the country. It can be challenging to buy books at bargain prices in this arena, chiefly because even the smaller houses hook up with AuctionZip, or other similar internet helpers. This process means international exposure of older, graded books. We should never underestimate the love for comics which abides in Japan, Italy, France, England and Scandinavia. Those fans can outbid you.

It is interesting to observe that the major auction houses tend to focus on offering the most sought after comics, mainly superhero books. Other genres are not as well represented, with the exception of very high grade books. Yet, we recently observed in a catalog a mid-grade copy of the original Casper the Friendly Ghost #1 (St. John, 1949). A beautiful book with a memorable cover. It brought a good price. Anyway, one of the most important things to remember if you choose to buy books in this way is: some auctioneers, by means of the contract to which a bidder must subscribe, are permitted to buy for their own account. This means a legalized shill. So some caution is indicated.

Conventions: Who among you can recall the joy and splendor of the San Diego Comic-Con back in the 1970s? Or the wonderful shows put on by the late Phil Seuling in New York during the same time frame? Tons of old comics, Big Little Books, pulps, vintage paperbacks, old movie material and the like overflowing the tables. Some of the luminaries who poked around in my bins in those days included Ray Bradbury, Joe Shuster, Al Williamson and many others. You could chat with Jack Kirby or Will Eisner without paying for the privilege. Serious dealers, serious collectors, all fans devoted to the comic art form.

Things have changed. San Diego has relegated comic dealers to a wee corner, charging a small fortune for a table. The con is now merely a scene, overcrowded and inaccessible to the average fan, dominated by the movie studios who, ironically, produce films inspired by comics. Wizard World conventions, in our experience, are not oriented toward comic book dealers and generally fail to attract serious buyers. Wizard has bought or started up cons in less populated venues, and reviews are mixed. "More swords in the room than comics", one dealer commented. A big trend is the sale of VIP packages allowing ardent fanboys to meet their artist idols in person, but....a signature on a book costs extra.

Our recommendation? Seek out a genuine comic convention not owned by a national corporation, but organized by local fans and dealers. There are several, but you are cordially invited to OAF Con here in the Oklahoma City metroplex. It is staged every fall by Co-Chairs Bart Bush and Robert Brown, two of the most successful and knowledgeable collectors in the field. Lots of old material at reasonable prices, offered by friendly fans in a relaxed atmosphere. OAF-the Oklahoma Alliance of Fandom-was founded back in 1968 and its tradition endures. No VIP packages, because we have no VIPs. Just folks.

The Books: We now offer our observations on the market this last year.

Golden Age comics still rule. Superhero books dominate, as usual. DC Comics are sought out by fans old and, thankfully, young alike. This is especially true for "generation-skipping" characters such as Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Flash and Green Arrow. Films and television play a role in this, not surprisingly. DC is doing a better job these days of exploiting its heroes. Who is not enchanted by Supergirl? It's a family show!

Interest in other imprints is not so intense, with the exception of Timelys, which still prevail, if you can afford them. Fawcetts are moderate sellers, with Master and Captain Marvel Jr. most popular (Mac Raboy endures). Quality comics are likewise of interest to highly specialized collectors, but any item with Eisner or Lou Fine will sell, such as Military. MLJs are in limited supply, so they sell. So do early Boy and Daredevil comics. Any book with a WWII cover, especially those featuring Hitler, Tojo or Mussolini will find a new home, particularly a cover with all three.

There are others. Any Archie number under say, #50, will go. The early issues are tough, not just #1. Offbeat titles like Cat-Man are also hard, and thus easy to sell. Early copies of Crime Does Not Pay, with their bloody covers, are in demand. Dells are of limited interest, but a high grade Four Color with art by the likes of Walt Kelly will sell.

We love the Atomic Age, chiefly because of the astonishing proliferation of titles after the war. Timely, and its successor, Atlas, lead the way. Pre-Code Horror comics are avidly sought, including titles which traditionally were of limited interest, such as Mysteries Weird and Strange, Mr. Mystery, Haunted Thrills, Worlds of Fear, Journey Into Fear and the like. E.C titles are as popular as ever. Atomic Age Crime comics are usually slow, but interest seems to have picked up. The same may be said of War and Romance titles. Of course, collectors are searching out particular artists whose early work appears in the comics of that era, including L.B. Cole, Basil Wolverton, Al Williamson, Joe Kubert, Frank Frazetta, Wally Wood, Simon and Kirby and others. Notably, some of these books are becoming harder to find.

Silver Age comics are, for the most part, in abundant supply but not necessarily in ultra high grade. (Frankly, they were not that well made in the first place). As a result, early Marvel keys graded 9.0 and above bring top dollar. Pre-superhero Marvels are especially desirable. The same may be said of early Silver Age DCs, in particular, Brave and the Bold and Showcase.

The Bottom Line: The state of the Comic Nation is strong. Golden, Atomic and early Silver Age books are in demand across most genres except Westerns, not so much. Books sell in all grades if the price is right. Buyers expect a discount off the Guide for lower grade comics and we usually comply. Buyers will pay a premium for an item in superlative condition. Half the fun of this hobby is the satisfaction of helping comics find a home where they will be appreciated. The other half is the challenge of finding the books in the first place. Keep looking. Maybe we will cross paths along the trail. I'll be the guy with the comic sniffing dog.

2015 was a volatile year for us. On the retail front the year could not have begun any better with the huge success of the Marvel Star Wars titles. Star Wars accounted for close to half of our Marvel sales through the spring. Add to that two breakout titles from Oni and things were definitely looking up. Fans have been waiting for anything new from Jhonen Vasquez for years now and were off the hook when Invader Zim was released as a comic. Of course, since many were not traditional comic readers they had no idea the comic existed for the first month, but once word got out, we couldn't keep issues in stock – check the multiple printings if you don't believe us. Ditto Rick and Morty which mimicked the exact trajectory of Invader Zim. Slow for a few months, then a stampede once non comic readers found out about it. Bravo to Oni for bringing these new readers into our store. Once they're in the store, of course, it's our job to show them other things that they may enjoy – and they are slowly bleeding into the Image universe. Best selling Image titles for us are Walking Dead (no shrimp), Paper Girls, Monstress, Nailbiter, Outcast, Huck, We Stand On Guard, and the omnipresent Saga.

Of course all good things must come to an end, and DC's dismal two month Convergence attempt coupled with underwhelming sales for the Marvel Secret Wars secondary titles brought things to a screeching halt. It might have been acceptable if either publisher had kept their better selling titles going through these two "events". But no, they just couldn't do it. So, no Deadpool, no Spider-Man, no Batman, no Harley – get the picture?

Our Marvel readers endured the drought and are enjoying the restarted titles. Unfortunately the same cannot be said for DC. Overall DC sales are drastically down, and it looks as if Image may overtake them as the number two publisher – Marvel is firmly ensconced at number one and we see no changes on the horizon for that.

2015 brought in more comic collections than any in recent memory. Seven of those containing 2000+ comics each! Golden Age collections ranged from Superhero to Funny Animal with everything in between. Silver Age collections were predominantly DC Superhero with a lot less Marvel, Charlton, Gold Key, and Dell. And unfortunately more often than not, the key issues were missing. The toughest two Keys are Showcase #4 and Tales of Suspense #39. The easiest Keys are Justice League of America #1 and X-Men #1. Oddly, in the past we were always able to pick up a few copies of Daredevil #1 during the year, but not so this year. This could be due to the interest generated by the Netflix series – it sure brought in collectors looking for Frank Miller issues of the title. Because we now have an outstanding stock of fine or better DC Silver it is outselling Marvel Silver for us which is a first. For example we scored five copies of Detective #359 this year, none of which lasted more than 48 hours.

Bronze Age collections are steadily rolling in month after month. Just like their Silver Age counterparts, the bigger keys like Incredible Hulk #181, Marvel Spotlight #5, ASM #129, and Iron Man #55 were usually missing. (The first Hulk #181 we got this year sold in less than 15 minutes – I kid you not.) We still love getting Bronze Age in and it makes up the largest part of our back issues, and accounts for the largest volume of back issue sales. Copper Age and Modern Age collections are brought to us on an almost daily basis. We will buy it all, but we have to educate the sellers on the high availability of comics from these periods. More often than not we acquire the collection on the spot. Sometimes the seller leaves feeling they can do better. At least 80% of those that leave come back within a month and are then happy to sell us their comics, having been turned down by everyone but Half Price Books!

On the convention front, we are almost exclusively focusing on the smaller one-day shows rather than the bigger multiple day extravaganzas and are happy for it. Real fans, and by that I mean those that love comics and are looking to fill holes in their collections, rather than those who are only interested in key issues and nice copies that they can have pressed to get better grades for encapsulation – are bypassing the large shows, and are flocking to the smaller ones. Makes sense to me, they will see more dealers with more comics, spend less time away from home, and pay far less admission prices to attend. The collector market is as strong as ever, but it appears to have moved to more cost effective and more comic-centric venues.

One last thought regarding pressing that we mentioned previously. Is there anyone out there who thinks that repeatedly exposing paper to heat and moisture is a good thing? I mean for the comic itself, not for the monetary considerations. Further, if a grading service provides pressing, shouldn't that be stated on the label since they know it has been done? I am curious to see how these pressed comics hold up structurally over time in relation to universal issues that were left alone. Something to think about.

The past year has been full of tremendous excitement in all eras of collecting. 2015 marked the year that Star Wars went back to Marvel and had a huge new wave of nostalgia and popularity leading to the new Force Awakens movie to become the #1 movie of all time at the box office.

For collectors, movie and TV show tie-ins to comic books reached new heights and 2016 marks some of the most anticipated superhero movies ever. This has caused super strong demand and growth in prices for comic books that tie in directly. The strong market for superheroes crossed over into TV and more video games, action figures and other merchandise. At this point, comic books are actually a very small percentage of sales in comic book shops. This has created a wave of excitement as collectors hunt out the next characters to be featured in a movie or TV show. Hundreds of vintage Silver/Bronze/Copper issues from DC and Marvel have overnight become hot books in the past year.

So many books became the next big thing. Here are just some of the popular characters driven in hype and demand in the past year based on movie/TV news and/or rumours. 1st appearances are all way up for all of these characters which include: Deadpool, Harley Quinn, Supergirl, Ant-Man, Jessica Jones, Black Panther, Nova, Inhumans, Suicide Squad, Carol Danvers, Firestorm, Felicity Smoak, Braniac, Doomsday, Gambit, Amanda Waller, Thanos, Black Mask, Boba Fett, Mockingbird, Big Hero 6, Speedball, Howard The Duck, Constantine, Hope Pym, Preacher, Sandman, I Zombie, any Walking Dead characters to appear in upcoming TV episodes.

My true love is for Golden Age and Silver Age comics and their amazing history. For over 20 years I have been researching and compiling data on the growth of comic books, and I self publish a series of books called "Investing In Comic Books". The purpose of this series is to help collectors/investors make smarter decisions about investing while learning the history of these books. My main resource is the annual Overstreet Price Guide which has documented the entire growth of this industry over the past 46 years. Record prices continue to be hit in all eras and genres.

Tips On Investing: Here are some of the things you need to know about before you start investing and spending big money on comic books. Bob Overstreet began publishing his Comic Book Price Guide annual in 1970 and now 46 years later has helped establish the comics collectible market as one of the most consistent, trustworthy and safe investments. Overstreet's pricing information from the past 46 years is used to analyze the growth of each book in all conditions in my book series "Investing In Comic Books".

To find out how strong the market is for a book you should do year to year price guide comparisons and then compare them to the highest dollar sales on Heritage or any other auction site to find out if people really are paying high prices to keep driving the price up on a particular comic book. Finally compare the book to other books of similar importance, year, genre and find out if the book is overpriced, under priced or on par with similar books.

Split Between Good And Mint Prices: Note that sometimes the NM copy might be going up in value but the lower grade copies might at the same time be dropping in value. Over the years the spread between low and high grade copies has been stretching. Back in 1970 a Mint comic was worth 4x that of a Good 2.0 copy. Now when it comes to key issues the split is usually around the 20x difference between NM 9.2 and GD 2.0. Also keep in mind that copies of key issues above 9.2 will sell for even more creating sometimes a spread of 100x difference - meaning a book that sells for $2000 in GD might sell for $100,000 in NM 9.6. Therefore its easy to see why most collectors prefer to go for the highest end copies as they drive the market and help push prices up each year. Beware that the majority of comic books graded FN 6.0 or less sell for less than the Guide price. Usually only rare or key issues sell above Guide in lower grades. eBay is the largest market for comic book sales and therefore due to shipping costs and bad grading most buyers seek out deals and do not want to pay guide prices.

Grading and Slabbing: CGC was established in 2000 as the leading professional comic book grading company. Once they grade the book they put it in a sealed protective unit. We call this slabbing a comic! Once the comic is sealed it includes a paper with information on the details of the comic giving us key information, a grade, comments on condition and whether it has been restored or not. If a book has been repaired in any manner it is called "restored" or has undergone "restoration". CGC gives this book a "Restored" grade. If the book has never been touched and is in its original condition it is given a "Universal" grade. Universal grades always sell for more money than a comparable Restored grade. Overstreet gives price guide values only for unrestored books. CGC published a census at their website of all books that have been graded by them. We include all this data for each individual comic book listed in this book. On the CGC chart you will see "Signature" which is autographed comics and "Qualified" which would be given to an overall grade not including its defect (such as coupon cut out or missing centerfold etc). One of the most important reasons it is useful to follow this census is to get a rough idea of how many copies are out there especially in a specific grade if you are thinking of getting a book graded primarily to resell. The rarer a book is in high grade usually will help establish a higher sales value for the book (in most cases it will sell for above Guide prices if you land up having one of the best copies in the census). This can potentially help you invest in books based on rarity. However the CGC points out some warnings on their site which read as: The CGC Census is a detailed report of all the comics certified by CGC, listing, for every issue, the total number of books in each grade. Whether you're researching a book's rarity, or simply curious about what's out there, the CGC Census provides a quick and easy way to browse the most comprehensive comic book database. Inexpensive comics, which are not generally submitted for certification, may appear scarce but are not. Comic certification services are predominantly utilized for higher-grade comics.

Therefore you can see any survey of data still needs to be closely analyzed to find out the full picture. Keep in mind the census only covers books graded by CGC and therefore is not a complete count of all existing copies. Only a small portion of comics have been graded. But it will give you a good idea of how scarce some comics in general are compared to others. The Census is more useful for expensive books as anyone trying to make a sale or profit will more likely use the service. Comics that are low grade or very low in value or not as likely to be sent in for grading.

Checklist For Investing: Ask yourself a few questions to determine how good a choice you are making. This checklist will help you make a smart confident choice on investing in any particular comic.

The more qualifications the book has the more likely it's a good pick.

1 - Is the title still published today and relevant?

2 - Is the character still published today - how popular are they now?

3 - Is the title or character still known by today's younger generation. This clearly will help keep the market strong in future years. Forgotten titles or characters may have smaller demand.

4 - Is this a first appearance of any particular character? How important is the character?

5 - How long did this series run?

6 - Is the comic book publisher still in business? What is the future marketing opportunities for this title/character

7 - Is this book common or hard to find? How does it compare to other books of its age?

8 - How many copies have been graded?

9 - How many copies have been graded higher than this copy?

10 - Has it been restored? What are the defects?

11 - How consistent has it been in yearly value increases in the Overstreet Price Guide?

12 - How consistent has it been in the exact grade you plan to buy/invest in?

13 - Is the character well known in other media such as TV, Movies, Newspapers

14 - Is it in a popular genre that is collected widely? Keeping in mind that only superhero genre comic books really drive the market for all eras. If it is NOT a superhero comic what is the market.

15 - Is this genre always popular - has it lost any popularity over the past few decades?

16 - How well does the title/character sell today?

17 - Is the title or character a household name? Could people on the street tell you/what it is?

18 - How long do you plan to keep this book? Is this a long term investment?

19 - How long do you need to keep it to profit?

20 - How do you plan to resell it to get the best dollar? Keep in mind that dealers only offer a percent of its value and auction sites take a cut of the sales price.

21 - How big is the demand for this item? How long would it realistically take to sell it? Does this comic have a line up of potential buyers or is it more of a specialty item for only a few that appreciate it?

22 - Have you looked recently on eBay or Heritage or other sites to see how well it is selling recently rather than relying on just price guide values? Do people really pay that much for this book? How often?

23 - Is the writer and/or artist of this book important to the history of comics? How much does the importance of this creator have on the overall value of the book? Are you paying just for their name? Is this a good thing?

Using these steps as a guideline should help you make the best choice. Knowledge is the key to succeed.

What genres are currently popular? Superheroes totally dominate comic book sales. There is a strong market for horror and sci-fi. Variant covers are up and down - a true roller coaster ride. Foreign comic editions are quickly growing in popularity especially for key issues. Western genre is still one of the weakest and not highly recommended to invest in at this time - though you might find many deals right now which could lead to wise long term choices. Funny animals and Disney books have a loyal following but in most cases were some of the best selling Golden/Silver Age books and therefore quite common so you can usually buy lots of random issues cheap in bulk lots.

Researching Comic Books: The internet has made comic book collecting and archiving an amazing tool with the world at your fingertips. Some absolutely amazing websites exist with more data than you can imagine. Some of the best include:

Grand Comics Database - over 500,000 comic book covers from around the world and writer/artist/index info for most http://www.comics.org/

Comic Book DB - Info, checklists and chronologies of superheroes for DC and Marvel comicbookdb.com

Mike's DC Index - amazing site with index of every comic ever from every major publisher - sort able by dates, titles, etc. http://www.dcindexes.com/

Hot New Comics: The current comic book industry is healthy but many are starting to worry that we are drifting back to the 1990s when gimmicks made retailers and collectors buy up comics for the wrong reasons. The major comic book publishers release at least 300% more variant covers each month than they do regular covers.

I write over 200 columns a year reporting on the state of current popular back issues, hot books, speculated books and print runs of new books. Some of the best online websites for articles on investing in modern new comics can be found at hoknescomics.com, comicsheatingup.net, investcomics.com, bleedingcool.com, comicbookspeculation.blogspot.com, comicbookscalping.com.

Investing in new comics is a different game than vintage comics. It's mostly about buying, flipping and selling at just the right time. It's all about supply and demand. Many books each year can jump 1000% in value in only a month but this isn't a guarantee that the prices are going up and up. In fact most modern books peak after their initial big jump, settle and then fall back down if demand is not continual.

Hot Back Issues and the Speculator Market of 2015: Some extraordinary record prices hit on Modern books that I have documented. Here are some of the fads that hit 2015:

Edge of Spider-Verse #2 - 1st app Spider-Gwen started the year as the biggest craze.

Star Wars #1 debuted at Marvel causing a new domination in comic book sales with 7 printings of #1 and multiple spin-off series which all sold out.

Action Figure variant covers - led by Star Wars and Secret Wars, Marvel had a new hit gimmick on their hands which drove sales up on any/all titles with the fake toy cover.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #44 - Death of Donatello came with no warning and prices skyrocketed and numerous printings.

Three recent Marvel characters came to the forefront of collecting: Kamala Khan as Ms. Marvel, Wolverine's clone/daughter X23, and Amadeus Cho as the New Hulk.

Oni Press' Rick and Morty was one of the biggest indie books of the year. (#1 shown)

The biggest indie books of the year were Rick and Morty (Oni Press) and We Can Never Go Home (Black Mask). Prices skyrocketed online for these titles continually through the year.

Thanks for letting me contribute to the Overstreet price guide and happy 46th anniversary to Bob!

Here we are again, another market report from Torpedo Comics, in Las Vegas. To begin, first I would like to state that no matter how many of these reports I compose, I am still extremely honored to be part of the price guide process and I'm always looking for ways to improve my own contribution method. With that said, I've completely revised the way in which I will report on the market this year, especially in terms of convention reports. I fully understand that other dealers are not really interested in the minutia of the 'Torpedo Comics experience', however, they may find our basic report on each show that we set up this year to be quite informative. Okay, with that said, let's get to it.

Torpedo Comics Convention Reports

Before I get to each report, I think it's important to give readers an idea of what kind of set-up we have, so that a dealer who is contemplating setting up at a given show can fully understand the differences of 'Torpedo Comics' setting up, opposed to their set-up. We currently use two methods of setting up, either the 'full-boat', which includes a trade paperback division and the vintage comics booth, or just the small set-up, which usually comprises of a small wall-display and the vintage back-issue boxes only. For the large shows, we use a ten-booth design, with eight booths designated for our trade paperback presence and two booths for the vintage set-up. Due to the size of our displays, we have to use a semi-truck to transport our product to each show, thus, even before the first sale of the day at a given show, we are thousands of dollars in the hole (booth space cost, hotel rooms and freight charges). Hopefully this information gives you – the reader, a better understanding of where we, as a company are coming from when we report on various shows. Finally, when we planned out our convention year, our hope was to take advantage of the huge audiences that were attending the various conventions, thus we added more booths, more inventory, more employees, more hotels rooms, technically we became a 'monster', however next year we will not be using the same method and we will be dropping some shows. In a nutshell, this means that we understand the nature of the attendees to current comic conventions and no matter how many of these 'new' fans attend the shows, there still seems to be a limit on the amount of money actually being spent on product.

Salt Lake 'Fan X' Convention (January 29-31): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. Going into this show, we knew this was a relatively new convention but John (Dolmayan) had confidence that if we showed our face, customers would come, as there apparently seems to be little or no major Silver/Bronze-age sellers in Salt Lake. We were also gambling that if the vintage booths did not perform, our trade paperback section would take up the slack. The show was indeed well attended, with thousands of 'fans' walking around in a multitude of costumes, but what exactly these fans were interested in seems to be a mystery as they ignored our vintage booths, often exclaiming, "Wow, is this your collection?". After three days of mind-numbing boredom, we licked our wounds and said goodbye to this show. Obviously 'Fan X' means costume party, not convention – consider it lesson learned.

Pasadena Comic & Toy Show (Febuary 8th): Booth allocation: 2 booths – vintage books only. For years we have been hearing about 'pure' comic conventions, shows designed for the comic book collector – a show devoid of thousands of cosplayers. Apparently, the Pasadena show was going to be a prime example of the 'pure' comic convention and as such, we were talked into attending. We had our doubts concerning the show, principally on the fact that the show was located in southern California, a dead zone for us in the past. We had a great location, right in front of the main entrance to the show, but after an hour of being open, we only had approximately two hundred people in the room. Now this would have been okay if some of those two hundred were hardcore collectors, however, we did not sell a single wall-book, only managing to sell a few $10 books from the back-issue boxes. We will not do something like this again – another lesson learned, not a great way to start the year.

WonderCon in Anaheim (April 3-5): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. Regarding our Silver/Bronze selection of vintage comics, sales were pretty mediocre on the first day, with a few sales from the boxes and a few questions about wall books. We had questions about Ultron's first appearance in Avengers #55, but noticed some price resistance. We had a VF copy of Avengers #67 on the wall, priced at $200 (current Guide price is $57) – the book sold right away! I have always thought this book was special, with its wonderful Sal Buscema cover, featuring interior penciled art by Barry Smith - seems that collectors are moving in my direction after all these years. On the last day of the show, an amateur comic dealer purchased a thousand of our Silver/Bronze books that featured the work of Stan Lee. We sold whole runs of Amazing Spider-Man, Avengers, Captain America, Daredevil, Fantastic Four and many others. Our boxes were dilapidated and would affect sales at our next few conventions. We purchased a CGC 4.0 Showcase #22 (1st Silver Age Green Lantern) and a CGC 7.0 Showcase #30 (1st Aquaman) at the show. The trades sold okay, but we were expecting more, especially with the huge crowds. Sales: Tales of Suspense #21 CGC 8.0 $700, X-Men #4 CGC 5.5 $1200, Incredible Hulk #6 CGC 6.5 $1000, Avengers #1 CGC 8.0 signature series, signed by Stan Lee, $12,000, X-Men #1 CGC 7.0 $7000 and Tales to Astonish #34 CGC 7.0 $300.

Big Wow Comic Fest: San Jose (April 18-19): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. This convention is turning out to be my favorite of the year, with a different feel to other shows, especially in terms of actual comic collectors. This show still produces fans that seem to be trying to fill in runs of books – a welcome sight indeed. Unfortunately, after the massive Marvel comics' sale we had in Anaheim, our boxes were a little light. Customers who come to our booth year after year were confused by our lack of inventory, but we promised to return with a replenished stock next year. We sold the Showcase #22 we picked up in Anaheim for $2000 as well as a few wall books, including some medium grade copies of Marvel Feature #1 (first Defenders) in VF for $150 as well as a VG/FN copy of Aquaman #1 for $350. Trades sold okay, with many cosplayers actually coming into the booth and purchasing trades – a welcome sight indeed. Update: this was the last Big Wow show as it has been announced that this show will now become the Silicon Valley Comic Con, the brainchild of Steve Wozniak! Sales: Fantastic Four #26 CGC 8.0 $650, Batman #253 CGC 9.4 $500, G.I. Joe Special Edition CGC 9.8 $300 and Showcase #22 CGC 4.0 $2000.

C2E2: Chicago (April 24-26): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. This show has always been tough for us, with competition high from other vintage comic dealers and extremely cost-conscious customers combining for less than average sales. Well, as most dealers already know, when a show is slow – buy, buy, buy. I did not find much Silver or Bronze to purchase, but I was able to pick up thousands of Modern books, covering most of the Modern titles that have been published by both Marvel and DC over the previous three years. All of this product will look very good in our new store, which is progressing at a pace, even as I write this report. While our vintage selection did not seem to excite collectors from the Chicago area, they did spend some cash on the trade paperback section – still at 50% off cover price, customers can't lose, although we did have a few 'customers' asking for bigger discounts!! We have had terrible luck with this show in terms of freight, with our truck getting there late, causing a huge amount of stress for all concerned, let's see what happens next year.

Denver Comic Con (May 23-25): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. This was one of the new shows we added this year, an experiment to see if we could expand our coverage of the various conventions. I must admit, for some reason, I was expecting great things of this show, but it turned out to be a disappointment, both with the vintage and trade paperback sections. The only highlight of the show was the purchase of an extremely high-grade collection of 1980s comics. The owner of the collection knew he had good books and observed with mild amusement as the various dealers offered him various sums. Seeing a good long-term deal, I offered the most and the deal was done, I spent a little too much, but with the opening of our store sometime in the future, this collection will make a wonderful addition to our inventory. As for the future of this show, it's 50/50 at this point in time.

Fan Expo Dallas (May 29-31): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. Another of the new shows added to our convention schedule and a decision that we came to regret. This show was plain awful. Sales were beyond bad, with 'customers' totally uninterested in purchasing anything over $5. I don't want to say anymore, the fact that we will NEVER go back speaks volumes. Sales: X-Men #4 CGC 6.5, Giant-Size X-Men #1 CGC 9.4 and Fantastic Four #1 CGC 1.8, all to the same customer for $6000. Apart from the sale of a New Mutants #98 CGC 9.6 for $500, this was the only major sale of the entire show.

Comic-Con International: San Diego (July 8-12): Booth allocation: 12 booths – 'full-boat plus'. The preparation for this show was the most chaotic in years, the reason: four new collections arriving in the space of three weeks, one month before the show. First we picked up two collections here in Las Vegas, one featuring a nice selection of 1970s DC War and Mystery issues, the other featuring a healthy selection of 1970s and 1980s Batman, amongst a large amount of miscellaneous DC titles from the 1980s. We then picked up a collection in Denver, which consisted of some nice Bronze Age keys, including Incredible Hulk #181, Iron Man #55 and Amazing Spider-Man #129, as well as a host of super-high grade 1980s titles. Finally, while in the midst of prepping the aforementioned comics, we got a call to go to Reno to pick up a store closeout, a collection of over 100 long boxes, consisting of issues from the 1960s through the 2000s. Both John and I toiled away, with me handling the grading and John finishing the preparation by bagging, boarding and taping the books – a task that consisted of fifteen continuous twelve hour days – ouch! The end result of this 'Herculean task' was the creation of over thirty boxes of new product for the show – a massive amount of books that had to be sorted on site, a task that was not completed until one hour before opening night on Wednesday (preview night). Both John and I were extremely satisfied when the first customers and dealers came around and began pulling the newly added issues, with stacks of books piled up from all manner of genres, including Superhero, Mystery, War as well as the usual wall books. One of our loyal customers pulled out a long-box of issues, pricing out in the thousands, while another dealer also pulled out over three hundred issues from the boxes. Our first big wall book sale was for a CGC 9.4 copy of Daredevil #1, selling for $13,500, quickly followed by a 7.0 copy of Strange Tales #110 (first Dr. Strange) for $5600. The odd thing about Wednesday night was the lack of new customers. Our booth is located in front of the B1 entry point, so we saw masses of people streaming in, but all heading away from the comic area. This was a foreshadowing of what was to come. Wednesday night came to an end and both John and I were pleased with the sales, although we were a little curious as to where the 'masses' of comic collectors were.

Thursday was the strangest day we (and many other dealers) have had in years, with a few customers coming by the booth, breaking up periods of time (sometimes up to an hour) when the booth was empty! Things were so bad that other dealers would come to the booth with quizzical looks on their faces, obviously attendees had other things on their minds on Thursday. The first few hours on Friday continued the 'missing customers' trend, until at about 4pm, when we began to get some action at the booth. From about 4pm through closing at 7pm, the booth was relatively busy, with box books being pulled in $30 to $100 clumps and the odd wall book selling here and there. Saturday was extremely busy within the hall, with countless numbers of attendees, many in costume surrounding almost every booth, notice I said 'almost', with the only walking room available being in the comic retailer section of the hall! The one thing I must admit I find very refreshing, is the fact that the Gold/Silver retail area of the convention is usually clear of non-collectors. There seems to be a sense from attendees that 'our' area is for serious collectors only and as such, the customers who do come to our booth have a respect for the product, knowing how to handle the actual comics, prompting less occasions when I have to say "Excuse me, can you please handle the books carefully, thank you."

Saturday brought in younger collectors, so I was very pleased when bunches of books from our high-grade 1980s titles began to sell. It takes a lot of work to grade every book, especially when you are differentiating the subtle differences between NM 9.2, 9.4 and 9.6. If I feel a book is 9.8, I send it into CGC, so the highest grade I will go to in our back-issue boxes is 9.6. I personally took a great deal of satisfaction when observing 1980s comic collectors looking over various books with an extremely discerning eye before placing the given book on the 'buy pile'. In terms of our best selling 1980s title, that's easy – New Teen Titans volume one. We had some beautiful 9.6 copies, in the #11-30 range, with bone-white pages (Guide price NM at $5-7) that we had marked at $15. Having been around a while, I fully understand that this series was very popular back in the day, resulting in HUGE print-runs, however, if the book is pristine, collectors seeking to either upgrade or possibly CGC the copies themselves will purchase these high-grade raw copies. We also sold some independent titles from this era, including the 'Eagle' run of Judge Dredd, copies of Megaton Man from Kitchen Sink, Dreadstar from First Comics and even titles like Femforce from AC Comics. One of the nice sales of the day was a run of Watchmen, averaging 9.6 condition from #2-12 for $175, we also sold a New Teen Titans #2 (first Deathstroke) in 9.0 (raw) condition for $150.

Sunday drew the usual key book hunters, customers who had been scoping out our selection along with all the other key books around the room until they made a decision. Box books sold okay, but Sunday was wall book day. Here is a list of the CGC books we sold at the con: Fantastic Four #1 CGC 6.5 $13,500, Strange Tales #110 CGC 7.0 $4800 (along with the 7.0 white page copy we sold at the beginning of the con), Amazing Spider-Man #17,18 both CGC 8.5 for $1900, House of Secrets #92 CGC 9.4 $2400, Avengers #4 CGC 1.8 $500, Avengers #1 CGC 1.8 $6000 (to the same customer), Daredevil #1 CGC 9.6 $35,000, Strange Tales #110 CGC 3.5 and Avengers #57 CGC 9.0 for $2800 to the same customer. Regarding Modern era sales, we sold Secret Wars #8 CGC 9.6 $100, Venom Lethal Protector #1 CGC 9.8 $100, New Mutants #87 CGC 9.6 $130, Batman Adventures #12 CGC 9.8 (3 copies to the same customer) $1600 (each), and Batman: Vengeance of Bane CGC 9.8 $250. As one can see a rather robust show with sales across the board, fulfilling our expectations and continuing the San Diego Comic Con endeavor as our premiere show of the year.

On a personal level, the San Diego con this year will always hold a special place in my heart, as I was finally able to meet and talk with, at length, Robert 'Bob' Overstreet. If anything, I wanted to tell him, first hand, about what the Overstreet Guide has meant to me over the years. Along with his wonderful wife Carol, we had a great conversation and I was able to hear about some of the origins of the Guide and the various notable legends of the comic book industry Bob has met over the years – a true highlight for me this year.

Wizard World Chicago (August 20-23): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. This is always a tough show for us, the main impediment to better sales being the lack of Golden Age material we have. We have discovered over the years that Chicago collectors still actively collect various Golden Age titles, from Timely to DC and other publishers, books we do not have in stock. We do not specialize in Golden Age material, so we have to make do with the customers who are looking for Silver/Bronze Age material. What I can tell you is that Chicago, both at C2E2 show and Wizard World are particularly hard to please, requiring the highest grades for the least amount of money. Interestingly enough, our trade paperback section also seems to suffer at the Wizard World show, having the least amount of sales of any large-scale con. We do get many buying contacts at the show and at this point, this is the only reason for us attending at this time.

Salt Lake "Comic Con" (September 24-26): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. WARNING – This is not a comic convention, this is a massive costume party, with the odd attendee willing to spend $5 on a book. If you have swords, trinkets, costumes or video-gaming merchandise, then this may be a show that is okay for you, however, if your goal is to sell comics – seller beware!

Comikaze Expo: Los Angeles (October 30-November 1): Booth allocation: 10 booths – 'full-boat'. Both John and I had a tinge of fear when we signed up for this show, as we know full well that Los Angeles shows are all rather disappointing regarding sales. We have debated all manner of reasons for this, but to this day, we cannot come up with a reason why no one purchases comics in Los Angeles. Armed with this knowledge, we signed on for show anyway, hoping against hope that maybe with the pull of Stan Lee at the show, things may be different. As it turns out, this show turned out to be a fascinating microcosm for California as a whole, with a few high-end customers with almost limitless funds, compared to the general populace, who were extremely cost-conscious. For example, the pull of Stan Lee allowed us to sell Fantastic Four Annual #1 CGC 7.0 $700, Captain America #100 CGC 7.0 $500, Amazing Spider-Man #1 CGC 4.5 (UK edition) $6000 and Journey into Mystery #83 CGC 4.0 for $4000 all to the same customer. His intent was to get key issues signed by Stan and if we had more keys, including Incredible Hulk #1 or Tales of Suspense #39, he would have bought those as well. Compare that with the sales from our regular back-issue boxes, or should I say 'lack of sales'. I have never had so many customers looking at our boxes without sales – astonishing. For example, we had countless attendees coming over to the booth asking for Stan Lee written material, however their budgets did not exceed $20. When I showed the type of material you can get for $20, the aforementioned 'customers' would look confused, asking for better quality books – for the same price! The trade paperback section did okay, but I have to admit, with the high costs associated with prepping, freighting and selling (employee costs) all the trades we bring to shows, a major rethink is needed. The other key sale of this show was a copy of X-Men #1 CGC 7.5 (the Nick Cage copy) for $10,500.

In Conclusion: 2015 was the biggest convention schedule we have ever attempted, with numerous new shows and different stock for sale. In the end, we incurred so many costs, mainly associated with booth space and freight, that we have come to a point of diminishing returns. We grew in size to take advantage of the massive convention audience figures being noted within the industry, however, as we found out this year, attendances may be 'through the roof' as they say, but the majority of this new audience happen to be interested in all things comic pop culture – except comics. We are still crunching the numbers at this time, but I already know that things will have to change for us next year.

eBay Sales via eBay User ID: torpedocomicshighgradecgc: Torpedo Comics does not sell raw comics online, we specialize in CGC only. We do not use the auction method, rather using the 'buy-it-now' style.

General Market Report: This report is being written after Thanksgiving and only a week after the full preview of Captain America: Civil War, an event that caused a market-wide sigh of relief from retailers everywhere, after five-months of falling sales of various former 'hot' books. In recent months we at Torpedo Comics have witnessed a notable slow down in sales related to the Avengers, Avengers Age of Ultron, Iron Man 3, Amazing Spider-Man 2, Guardians of the Galaxy and Ant-Man movies, mostly within the Bronze to Modern Age books. I'm specifically talking about Incredible Hulk #271 (1st Marvel Universe Rocket Raccoon), Strange Tales #180 (1st Gamora), Avengers #55 (1st Ultron), Avengers #181 (1st Scott Lang), Marvel Premiere #47 (1st Scott Lang as Ant-Man), Nova #1 and even Iron Man #55 (in the super-high grades). What is interesting to note are the books that have remained hot, such as Tales to Astonish #13 (1st Groot) a CGC 8.0 copy which recently sold for $7150, an incredible amount when one considers that the current Guide price for an 8.0 is $2100 with NM- currently listed at $3500! Avengers #57 (1st Vision) is still hot with multiple requests at every show, as is Captain America #117 (1st Falcon) and even Marvel Super-Heroes #18 (1st Guardians of the Galaxy) as long as it's in high grade. The key point here as most dealers have always understood, those Silver Age keys will always hold their value, while Bronze Age and especially Modern books can plummet in value, or demand when numerous collectors bring their own copies out of thousands of collections and send them into CGC, increasing census reports and leading to lower and lower eBay sales. The only Bronze Age keys from the 'movie-era' to hold in value as long as they are in CGC 9.8 NM/M condition are the two magazines – Marvel Preview #4 (1st Starlord) and issue #7 (1st Rocket Raccoon), obviously holding their value due to the fact that true 9.8 condition magazines are actually scarce, while multiple upon multiple magazines can be found in private collections and warehouses in VF 8.0 and below

Silver-Age Market: The big news right now is the ridiculous demand for Incredible Hulk #1 in any grade. We get asked at every show for Hulk #1, however, if we did have it, other dealers usually purchased any copies we had before the show opened. Amazing Fantasy #15 (1st Spider-Man) has been 'king of the castle' for two years now, but since last year, Incredible Hulk #1 has been on everyone's want list. Demand for Daredevil #1 is beginning to get some more exposure due to the character currently being featured in a rather successful Netflix television show. Still rather inexpensive for nice condition copies, this is really the LAST major Marvel key that the 'common' collector can purchase, with CGC 9.2 copies selling for just over $15,000 at this time. The other major Marvel keys are obviously in demand as always, with the next title most asked for after Incredible Hulk #1 and Amazing Fantasy #15, being Brave and the Bold #28 (1st JLA), Tales of Suspense #39 (1st Iron Man), followed by Tales to Astonish #27 (1st Ant-Man), Avengers #1, Strange Tales #110 (1st Doctor Strange), Journey into Mystery #83 (1st Thor), Fantastic Four #1, Tales to Astonish #35 (1st Ant-Man in costume), Showcase #4 (1st Silver Age Flash), Amazing Spider-Man #1, Daredevil #1, and last but not least X-Men #1, which could be considered in a bit of a mini-slump right now. From this list the most 'head-scratching' issue, must be Strange Tales #110, as high-grade CGC sales have apparently leveled off, with recent sales ranging from CGC 7.0 up through 9.4 selling for less than a year ago! Compare that information with sales of Doctor Strange #169 (1968), the doc's first solo title, which is hot as blazes right now. The current raw NM 9.2 Guide price is $425, with CGC 9.2 copies selling for as much as $800, while the 9.8 Western Penn copy sold in August of this year for an astounding $7768! We can't keep raw copies of this book is stock right now, as soon as we put one of the wall, it either sells to a dealer, or does not survive the first day of a given show. Current Guide VF price on this book is $124, I sold one copy for $200 and the other for $250.

Regarding other Silver Age keys that are evolving from minor to major keys are Fantastic Four #45 (1st Inhumans), #52 (1st Black Panther), #66 (1st cocoon of 'Him' - Adam Warlock) and #67 (1st brief appearance of 'Him' - Adam Warlock). The Inhumans have been heavily featured on the SHIELD television show, while the Black Panther is making his cinematic first appearance in Captain America: Civil War (previews out as I write this), giving some cause for the heat on these books, while Warlock's appearances as a cocoon in Fantastic Four #66,67 are seemingly rising out of pure speculation. Fandom seems to have come to the conclusion that Warlock will be appearing in the upcoming Avengers: Infinity War movies, or even in the sequel to the Guardians of the Galaxy movie, a belief based upon the cocoon being seen in a brief scene featuring the Collector in Thor: The Dark World from 2013. Both John and I saw evidence of this belief first-hand, at the Heritage Comics & Art Auction held in Los Angeles on November 19th through 21. There were a number of spectacular items going under the hammer at the auction, but John and I had decided to go for Fantastic Four #66 and #67 – two beautiful CGC 9.8 copies. First came issue #66, which came from the Boston collection, which had previously sold in July of 2012 for $2629. We bombed out after $10,000, but the book finally ended with a sale of $19,120 – an unprecedented amount, leaving both John and me totally flabbergasted. Next came issue #67, a beautiful white-page example that had originally sold for $4075 in September 2014. Once again we were outbid, this time with the final hammer price of $8365! Perhaps just as amazing was the $26,290 bid for the Twin Cities CGC 9.6 copy of Fantastic Four #45 (1st Inhumans). For some context here the Northland 9.6 copy sold in 2007 for $2850, while three 9.8 copies sold in 2012 for between $5501 and $7768. The industry-shaking sale of $26,290 represents a sea change in the world of Fantastic Four keys, blasting past the value of the first appearance of the Silver Surfer in issue #48, which sold at the same show in 9.8 for only $16,730. The other super-hot key within this Fantastic Four range is issue #52 (1st Black Panther) which was also represented at the auction with a beautiful CGC 9.6 copy which realized $23,900, over a thousand dollars more than the highest 9.8 price from 2012 (the Curator copy), thus its not hard for me to say that at this time, the hottest Silver Age keys (after Incredible Hulk #1) are related to the first Inhumans, the first Black Panther and the first Adam Warlock.

Okay, so far its been Marvel, Marvel and more Marvel, but what about DC? Warner Brothers has certainly not been sleeping while Marvel has been unleashing its movie and television cinematic Universe, with two steady hits on their hands with Arrow and The Flash, Warner Bros. unveiled Supergirl in July on CBS. To be honest, I have experienced very little customer requests for these early Silver Age keys, sensing that there is an understanding within the marketplace that certain books are so scarce its just not even worth asking. Case in point, Action Comics #252 – the first appearance of Supergirl from 1959, we have only had ONE copy in ten years and at the Heritage Comics & Art Auction the highest copy available for purchase (9.2) sold for $45,410. As for fans of the Arrow TV series, the first appearance of the Green Arrow from More Fun #73 (1941) recently sold in CGC 8.0 condition for $99,000, its safe to say, regular collectors are not searching for that issue. If not that issue, then what? I've had a very few customers requesting Brave and the Bold #85, the first appearance of the re-designed costume by Neal Adams (1969). Most of the heat for Green Arrow is obviously related to Green Lantern / (Green Arrow) #76, but more about that book in the Bronze Age section of the report. As for the Flash, the scarcity and the price for copies of Showcase #4 keep that book out of the mindset of 99.99% of all Flash TV show fans, however I have had some requests for some of the TV series characters, such as Gorilla Grodd from Flash #106, the Golden Age Flash from Flash #123 and the Reverse Flash from Flash #139, the latter book going up in price the most.

The more troubling aspect of this Silver Age report is the lack of collectors actually trying to fill-in runs, more so with DC issues, but also with Marvel as well. For DC, Batman is the ONLY Silver Age back-issue that sells on a regular basis, at every show, the rest of DC's Silver Age selection just sits. That includes early numbers from Brave and the Bold and Showcase as well, and lets not even mention any of the Superman titles: Action Comics, Superman, Jimmy Olsen, Lois Lane and even World's Finest! I have discovered that there is a small market for these titles, but not for issues published in the 1960s, but rather for the issues that came out in the 1950s – when we have some of those issues in VG or better condition, then we have some sales. As for Marvel's (non-key) Silver Age output, early Amazing Spider-Man issues sell, as do the Avengers (#6-25,46-71), Journey into Mystery (all), Tales of Suspense (#40-60) and Tales to Astonish (#36-59), as long as the books are above fine (6.0) condition. I have realized that for collectors of Marvel's latter Silver Age era (1967-69), a VF 8.0 or above condition is the preferred grade, lower grades from this period are common and have to be discounted to move. Clean Avengers issues, especially white-page VF and above copies are always popular with collectors, with extra 'heat' on this era of books due to the massive success of the movies. Most of the Don Heck issues are still slow, unless they are spectacular (9.0 and above), but John Buscema issues such as #51, with the great Giant-Man cover, #52 featuring the first Grimm Reaper, #53 with the classic X-Men vs. Avengers cover, #59 featuring the first appearance of Yellowjacket (still hot right now), #60 featuring the wedding of Yellowjacket and Wasp, #66 featuring the first appearance of Adamantium (with a sneaky appearance by Ultron-6).

Captain America, Iron Man and Thor issues have cooled a little, except for the Thor issues that feature the origins of the Inhumans #146-151 as well as the two 'Him' appearances in issue #165 and #166. Later issues of Tales of Suspense and Tales to Astonish are a little slow and even the X-Men issues from about #16 up are not moving that fast. Daredevil issues have had a moderate increase in sales activity, amazing to me, since the Daredevil Netflix series is apparently performing better than expected. The only theory I have regarding this lack of Silver Age Daredevil excitement is the fact that perhaps modern collectors are more enamored with Frank Miller's Daredevil from the early 1980s. While Daredevil has been rather under-performing, certain Doctor Strange issues have been selling like hot cakes, the result of low prices due to over thirty years of lackluster demand. While the doc's appearances in Strange Tales have seen a decent uptick in sales, the actual Doctor Strange series covering issues #169-183 have finally been selling. Issue #169 was horrifically under priced for years, but no longer, as speculators without the means to pick up the doctor's first appearance in Strange Tales #110, are falling upon any high-grade issue of #169 they can find. The rest of the issues have finally begun to move as well, an amazing thing, as it was only four years ago that I was able to pull out VF copies for $10 from dealer's tables!

To summarize the current Silver Age market, its obvious that 'key' hunting is a large percentage of the market, with collectors who are actually trying to complete runs, either almost finished with their thirty-year old quests, or those lucky enough to have all the books they need, upgrading on occasion. With the preponderance of new readers coming into the hobby unable to afford the vast majority of Silver Age back issues, they have either already given up on a 'unrealistic dream', or have embarked on a trade paperback purchasing campaign, if they are so inclined.

Bronze Age Market: I always find in interesting to read the 'Top 10 Bronze Age Comics' section in the Overstreet Guide, especially due to the fact that over the last few years the supposed top two books are actually price variants, both of which, we at Torpedo have never owned. In the real world, the king of this era is by far and away, Incredible Hulk #181 (1st full Wolverine), a book that if we don't have it at a given show is requested again and again and again, while if we do have it on our wall, collectors from every age group enquire about the books price and ask to take a close look. This book Guides for $270 in Good (2.0) condition, however, if you dare to put this book up for that price, other dealers will swoop in and rip the book out of your hands! Here's the odd thing about this book, the lower and mid-grades move really fast, even way over Guide, while the higher end copies (above 9.0) seem to have some price resistance, with collectors arguing with themselves about spending a certain amount for a 9.0 copy, or going for a full 9.2 copy. A book going the other way right now is Giant-Size X-Men #1 (1st new X-Men), which seems to be going through a period of low activity. House of Secrets #92 has slowed a little from last year, as has X-Men #94, but the surprise for me right now is the slow down on the high-end price of Iron Man #55 (1st Thanos). This book has stalled out at about $5000 for CGC 9.8 copies, but you had better believe that as soon as we see a new preview of Thanos either for the second Guardians of the Galaxy movie, or whatever movie Marvel wants to use him, then this book will explode again.

Talking of movie related 'hot' comics, all of the comics that featured the various characters from Guardians of the Galaxy, especially Marvel Preview #4 (1st Starlord), #7 (1st Rocket Raccoon), Strange Tales #180 (1st Gamora) and Incredible Hulk Annual #5 (2nd Groot) have all slowed down in most grades, except the magazines, which still command record prices in 9.8. It's been a few years since the Guardians movie caused thousands of collectors, speculators and dealers to dig through numerous magazine boxes at stores and conventions, looking to score a nice copy, but as one can see by the CGC census reports, 9.8s are hard to find. As for the 1970s Guardians appearances, most seemed to have cooled, except for Defenders #28 (1st Starhawk), which is still hot in most grades, but blazing hot in CGC 9.8 condition, commanding prices of up to $600! The Guardians' solo title – Marvel Presents #3-12 has dropped in customer demand, while their appearance in Marvel Two-In-One #5 is still in demand in 9.8 condition, with prices holding firm at over $400.

The ramifications of the recent successful Ant-Man movie on his 1970s comic book appearances (both Henry Pym and Scott Lang) have been reverberating throughout the industry this last year, with the first hot book becoming Marvel Premiere #47 (1st Scott Lang Ant-Man), getting sales as high as $800 last year, however, this book has recently undergone a severe downturn, with current 9.8 prices down to $350. The astute collectors and speculators out there, went for Ant-Man's reintroduction to the Bronze Age Marvel Universe in Marvel Feature #4, which as it turns out, is not that easy to find in true high grade. This book sat in thousands of back-issue bins for years, traveling around the country from show to show, being given away for years, until now, when suddenly collectors are asking for nice copies – and they are paying: a CGC 9.6 copy (Twin Cities) sold for $1550 in June of 2015, also selling in June was the 'Suscha News' CGC 9.8 copy, selling for an outrageous sum o $2000! Take note, this book Guides for $120 in raw NM- 9.2 condition and I know personally, all you 'long-in-the-tooth' dealers used to sell NM copies of this 'dead' issue for $20 a few years ago.

As I sit here writing this report (December), no actual previews of the Doctor Strange movie have hit social media, only a few set photos, but this lack of cinematic material is having no effect on the overall demand on Dr. Strange back issues. What is different about the demand for the doctor's back issues is the curious demand for the ENTIRE 1974-87 run, causing prices to finally go up! At first I noticed demand for issue #1 (from 1974) going through the roof, but throughout the year, I also noticed customers picking up regular issues from the run. Responding to my queries, most customers were picking up the run 'before the prices went up', having collected everything else, but Dr. Strange over the previous years. It's sort of sad in a way, that the doctor's back issues, which contain some of the most entertaining and imagination-expanding stories of the Marvel Universe, lay dormant for years until news of a movie suddenly spikes some interest from collectors – the state of the industry I'm afraid.

Regarding DC's Bronze Age material, all you have to say is BATMAN! It's very sad to report, that like last year's report and the year before that, DC's back issues that do not relate to Batman in some way just sit in the boxes. Demand for Detective #474, due to Deadshot's appearance in the upcoming Suicide Squad movie, has exploded going from a regular box-book, Guiding at $55 in NM- 9.2 in last year's Guide, to over $600 in CGC 9.8 condition. Detective #400 (Neal Adams) and Detective #411 (1st Talia) are requested all the time, we sold a medium grade copy (FN) of #411 for $125 – note Guide price was $63! Batman #227 is perhaps the most requested DC Bronze Age back issue we are asked for, but never seem to have (3 years and no copies of this issue), Batman #232 (1st Ra's al Ghul) is the current DC Bronze Age king of sales, selling faster that Green Lantern #76. We sold a VG copy of Batman #232 for $100 (Guide price is $50) and the customer could not have been happier. Batman #234 (1st modern Two-Face) is still in demand, but not like issue #232. Another issue that has exploded this year is Batman #251 (Neal Adams Joker issue), we had a VG/FN copy on our wall for $150 (Guide price in FN being $63) and it sold to another dealer – right away, no questions asked, this book is HOT. A CGC 9.8 copy sold earlier this year for $5000!

Books from the1980s: 'Key' issues from the 1980s have undergone some major price fluctuations, going both up and down. The key here is supply and demand – meaning that books from this era have a small window of opportunity, usually a month between becoming hot and before too many issues come out of the woodwork and are CGC'd. Recent examples of hot books falling away in the last few months as CGC census reports get higher are: Legends #3 (1st modern Suicide Squad), Suicide Squad #1 (1987), DC Comics Presents #26 (1st New Teen Titans), X-Factor #6 (1st full Apocalypse), X-Men #141-142 (Days of Future Past) and Marvel Secret Wars #8 (origin of the black Spider-Man costume). New Teen Titans #2 is still selling well, with Torpedo selling two CGC 9.8 copies via eBay for $500 each. It's been quite amusing to be asked for various issues of Firestorm this last year, including issue #3 (1st Plastique), issue #23 (1st Byte) and issue #28 (1st Slipknot), issues that have been gathering dust in storage for the last twenty years. The latter character is going to appear in the Suicide Squad movie, with the other two characters getting attention due to The Flash and Arrow television shows. The aforementioned examples are perhaps the personification of the modern collector/speculator – or 'treasure hunter'. What do I mean by this? Lets take X-Factor #6 from a few years ago when it could be found at dealer's tables or in various comic stories anywhere from $5 to $20 depending on condition. When news broke that Apocalypse was going to appear in the next X-Men movie, the 'treasure hunters' went into action, rushing around every store they could find, purchasing the best copies they could find and sending them into CGC for grading (or into CCS for pressing and grading). This flood of speculators fell upon the convention circuit, swooping up hundreds if not thousands of copies of X-Factor #6 and sending them off to be graded right away. Those collectors lucky enough to have CGC 9.8 copies of X-Factor #6 available, quickly put them on eBay and proceeded to get higher and higher prices, with some copies going for as much as $500 (last year). This just sent the 'treasure hunters' into overdrive, rushing as fast as possible to purchase every high-grade raw copy they could find before the 'gold rush' ended. We had a few 9.8 copies on our wall all throughout last year's convention circuit, and the response we got from customers was surprising, but not unexpected: they saw our CGC copies, asked the price, and then proceeded to say, "Do you have any high-grade raw copies for sale? – That is the essence of modern key book collector, THEY want to find the raw copy and send it in, when it's already CGC'd, it's too late! We did not sell a single copy at conventions, but we did sell two copies online, obviously to people who did not have access to conventions or quality comic stores. As I've mentioned before, a collector/speculator who specializes in 1980s books has to be quick on their feet, able to turn their 'hot' books right away, before prices drop. Just for some context, the current going rate of X-Factor #6 in 9.8 is about $280!

Modern Era: While the huge key issue sales of Golden and Silver Age issues continue to dominate headlines within the comic book industry, in my opinion, the biggest news for the last year has been coming out of the Modern era of comics. Obviously, due to the lower costs associated with current key issues, far more collectors and speculators can 'join the party' as I say, purchasing all manner hot Modern issues. However, there is something else going on in the Modern comic market, something that is actually changing the way publishers create and market their product. I'm talking about the influx of females into the super-hero comic book marketplace, something our male-dominated industry has NEVER seen.

The first sign that our industry had changed can be seen at the various comic conventions around the country, it was right there before our eyes – hundreds and even thousands of females dressed in their favorite cosplay character costumes and bringing their money with them. The most popular characters being, Harley Quinn (in all her myriad versions), Spider-Gwen, Ms. Marvel and Captain Marvel, Loki, Thor (strange but true), as well as the usual Catwomans, Batgirls, Wonder Womans, Zatannas and Supergirls. All these females coming into our industry had to have an effect, the main change being a call for more female professionals to work within the industry, as well as a taking a serious look at how females are actually being portrayed in stories. A ground swell of this new fandom, fully adept at all thing 'social media' have been making their voices heard, forcing Marvel to apologize for a somewhat over-sexualized portrayal of Spider-Woman (via a variant edition of issue #1). Just a few years ago, this type of cover would not have caused any reaction, but in today's world, such covers are seemed inappropriate and are being shunned. DC were even forced to halt publication of a variant cover to Batgirl #41, which featured a homage to the classic Batman: Killing Joke story from 1988. A furious Twitter campaign, combined with reports on Newsarama and Comic Book Resources (CBR) forced DC not only to withdraw the issue from its publication schedule, but also apologize. The main bone of contention being that the cover depicted Batgirl in a terrified and submissive position, while the Joker was menacing and vicious. To be truthful, it was not as if only females were complaining about the issue, as many young male readers and some older fans complained as well, obviously announcing to the publishers that the industry HAS indeed changed.

Okay, so I'm making a statement that the industry is changing, but what about some concrete proof? What specific examples can back up my claims? Since this is a publication about comic book prices, lets look at some of the current super-hot issues dominating the current market. Let's take Spider-Gwen for example, the perfect example of a feminine but not overly sexual costume that immediately struck a cord with female fans (and the guys), something that was immediately demonstrated by fans at comic conventions across the country. Spider-Gwen first appeared in Edge of Spider-Verse #2 (November 2014) and immediately sold out, creating a collector frenzy (and not just with females) leading to a remarkable sale of $4000 for a CGC 9.9 variant edition! The new Ms. Marvel (Kamala Khan), a Muslim from New Jersey has been an overwhelming success, with her first one-panel cameo appearance in Captain Marvel #14 (September 2013) hitting $1000 for a CGC 9.8 variant edition. Her first issue as the new Ms. Marvel from issue #1 (April 2014) currently sells for $40 in NM-9.2 and CGC 9.8 copies sell for about $150. Joining the party very recently is Alias, with a character (Jessica Jones) who is the recipient of a brand new Netflix show which has caused Alias #1 from 2001 to explode in value, hitting between $250 and $300 for CGC 9.8 copies, with a CGC 9.9 copy selling in November for $1100! Of course, the super-star of the current cadre of female characters is Harley Quinn, who has been blazing white-hot for over two years now. Batman Adventures #12 (her first comic book appearance) sells constantly in CGC 9.8 condition for $1600 to $2000 and shows no sign of slowing down. There are numerous Harley appearances that are actively being hunted down currently, forcing prices to rise as demand keeps growing and growing. Batman Adventures: Mad Love, featuring the animated origin of Harley from 1994 is a $500 book in CGC 9.8 condition, while her first appearance in DC Universe continuity (Batman: Harley Quinn, 1999) is a $300 book in CGC 9.8. Her second appearance in DC Universe continuity (Batman #570, August 1999) is also selling well for up to $100 in CGC 9.8, as is her entire solo series (38 issues) from 2000-2003. Harley's NEW 52 makeover in 2011's Suicide Squad #1 was originally perceived as gratuitously over-sexualized by fans of the classic animated-look, but a whole new slew of fans took to the new Harley, purchasing her comic appearances and creating an army of cosplay fans that can be seen at EVERY comic convention around the country. Demand for Harley has surpassed Deadpool in many respects, the ironic thing being, that soon both characters will be featured in movies in 2016. This has been the year of the female – both in terms of new readers entering our industry as well as the actual breakout of extremely successful female characters, this major addition to comics fandom can only improve our industry, both in terms of story content and financial reward.

Continuing with the theme of vocal fans and their ability to affect publication plans, both Marvel and DC have seemed to come under new pressure from concerned fans that seek to bring about more diversity, both in terms of ethnic characters, sexual preferences and gender issues. Apparently, this last year, like-minded professionals from all publishers have been hearing the call for change, especially those working at Marvel. Iceman has been revealed to be gay (in X-Men #600), Thor is now Jane Foster, and the Falcon has replaced Steve Rogers as Captain America. This is indeed 'not your father's Marvel Universe' and in a seeming effort to continue with the theme of change, Marvel has initiated a bold publication change – the re-booting of their Universe (sort of). Marvel editorial is obviously attempting to make their product more contemporary, initiating a plan that breaks with the classic Universe, created back in 1961 by Stan Lee, Jack Kirby, Steve Ditko and other legendary members of Marvel's 'bullpen'. Using a nine-issue Limited Series (Secret Wars), Marvel has obliterated their entire multiverse, the plan being to bring about a new Universe, a fresh and uncomplicated place where new fans can start reading Marvel Comics. One caveat concerning this new scenario is that the stories from the old 'classic' Universe actually occurred, obviously a cunning marketing plan to get new fans to read the new Marvel Universe, but also assuaging older fans, reminding them that their favorite stories did occur and in some way are still relevant (especially in terms of reprints via trades and hardcovers!)

One can discern that Marvel had been watching DC's major Universe re-booting event, the NEW 52 (back in 2011) with great interest, taking note of fan reaction to having their Universe re-booted again. Contemporary DC Comics fans were just getting used to the fact that many of the Universes destroyed in 1985's Crisis on Infinite Earths were apparently back, courtesy of 2005's Infinite Crisis epic, when DC editorial brought everything to an end and started completely anew, with new histories – a complete continuity break. Once again, a major publisher was initiating a massive publication shift, all in the hopes of appealing to NEW readers. Both Marvel and DC are attempting to take advantage of the new readers coming into the hobby via the recent mega-successful super-hero blockbusters, calculating that these new readers will not be interested in the continuity-heavy histories of the older universes, but would take to reading about characters with little back-story. So here we are, with both publishers giving new readers no reason to purchase back-issues, only time will tell if this aggressive publishing plan will have a detrimental effect on back issue sales.

John Dolmayan - Torpedo Comics

Greetings to my fellow dealers, collectors, and comic book enthusiasts. Torpedo Comics had an entertaining and interesting ride this convention season. There were shows that blew us away and some others that were more than a little disappointing, but all were educational. Knowing that there were dozens of shows and expos we had never attended I made the decision last year to expand our convention roster and take some chances, and although most did not work out financially, they did produce a wealth of knowledge that my team and I will use to produce a more effective and profitable 2016 season. The real benefit of these shows for me personally was a moment of inspiration that hit me at Wizard World Chicago. I was standing at my booth waiting for a customer to help and watching my trade paperback booth from afar. We traditionally have lagging sales at conventions where autograph signings are a dominant factor in correlation to attendees. This makes a significant impact on cash earned, as customers literally have no time to even visit your booth much less make a purchase until very late in the show or maybe Sunday. We can't make money if a majority of the people in the building are standing in three hour long lines or at panels. With this being said, it will always be a problem, we have a finite amount of space at these conventions as well as a finite amount of time to capture our customer. I asked myself how to solve this very substantial problem as I was making a purchase off an app I often patronize. It was right there the whole time! I'm happy to say by the time you read this report, the Torpedo Comics App will be launched and fulfilling (for now) trade paperback/graphic novel orders for purchase and pick up at the conventions or for delivery to your home or office. Customers will be free to browse our selection while standing in line, at home, or virtually anywhere 24/7. Soon any approved dealer will be able to sell (at shows) comics and collectibles of their choice through our App, customers will simply browse stock and pick up at their convenience. I am working with some of the top people in this industry and will soon have options for interested parties.

It's been a real pleasure serving the needs of our customers, making collections complete, and getting that dream key issue for many of our loyal customers is the greatest feeling. I can't remember all the great books we've sold this year, Steve will get into most of it with his half of the Torpedo Comics market report, but one book I was very sad to see go was my copy of Marvel Comics #1 CGC 7.5. This is my holy grail, the book that started Marvel Comics and I miss it every day, fortunately there may be another copy with my name on it out there one day very soon. It is truly my pleasure to serve our customers, both Steve and I are gratified every time someone takes a book out of our boxes or from our wall and adds it to their collection. We are here to serve our customers and our friends, and we are here to guide you in the direction that best fits your collecting needs. As usual Torpedo Comics stands behind every sale, so feel free to join our experience and become part of our collecting family.

Jeff Itkin
Cloud 9 Comics

Welcome back comic enthusiasts. It's time for another article of comic enlightenment and analysis, but first a Cloud 9 Comics update. By the time you read this it will be over a year since we first opened the doors to our SE Portland based store. It was an extremely busy 2015, we had great fun, met many challenges and had some really exciting moments. We also managed to squeeze in about 12 conventions across this great country, including just about every major con and a couple of test market areas we thought we'd explore. When the dust of the year settled we were able to look back and show through our hard work and commitment that we had a banner year and are one step closer to taking over the world. We opened a great store at 2621 SE Clinton St., Portland, OR, had an amazing Convention Season, and our site cloudninecomics.com and Facebook page are getting more hits, clicks and likes than ever before.

In this article I am going to discuss a couple of quick highlights for me through the year, including Cloud 9 Comics purchases of three Batman #1s and this year's record sales we set. Next I will discuss the avenues of acquiring comics and the reason comics have been stable as a collectible and a strong option for investing. I will give my in-depth thoughts of the Golden Age and its shifts and trends in the past 5 years to its future, as I feel that they have the most to discuss of all time frames. Since much has not changed I will only briefly touch on the remaining eras. However I will mention my recommendations of books to invest in for 2016 at the end of each era. I also wrote in a new time period and explanation for it. You will find it between Copper Age and Modern Age.

Last Year's Highlights: With all that transpired last year I would like to reflect on some of the most memorable moments. One of them was having the opportunity to meet a legend of the industry and a pioneer, Bob Overstreet and his lovely wife Carol. That was great because of who it was and what he has done for the industry, but equally a fond memory as well as I managed to stick my foot in my mouth and mix up Ant-Man with the Atom. I was thrown off as I was working on a deal with an Ant-Man book right before they walked up, funny, but embarrassing at the same time, botched that first impression. But got over it and still embrace it as a great memory. Also managed to finally attend Geppi's Entertainment Museum. That was really an outstanding experience and I highly recommend it for every one of all ages and hope to go back again this year. And last of all we had a great 2015 in comic acquisitions and sales. Managed to jump on the Batman #1 train early as we picked up three last year, one for myself and two to sell. It was great to get one of the copies to go to a collector who was extremely excited to have an entry level grade of a mega key. Also managed to set new record prices at the time for Showcase #4 CGC 4.5 $16,000, Batman #1 CGC 0.5 for $19,000 and a second Batman #1 CBCS 2.5 for $56,000.

The Comic Field: If there is something you can expect to happen every year it is that great comics and artwork will come to market, either from the many dealer websites available, local comic stores, or the plethora of conventions annually. These days as a collector you have to be happy and enthusiastic to the many options offered for buying comics. I'd like to thank all the hard working dealers pushing any avenue they can to bring new and existing books to market, as I know from experience it is not easy. I'd also like to thank all the Auction Power Houses. They are always able to put together outstanding comics and artwork for their events. They really help keep the collectibles exciting and fresh. Always reaching new prices that have never been achieved for a book or artwork. Then there is eBay, which can be great and awful at the same time. You just don't know what kind of experience you will have, especially when dealing with raw, high end comics. The amount of fraud, poor shipping, frustration and neglect that occurs is appalling. Finally there is GPA Analysis, a fantastic resource that keeps track of CGC graded books in the Marketplace. This is an invaluable tool. It allows every member to help keep track of sale prices and give an understanding for them. It offers a place for monitoring pricing of any comic and a flow chart of that comic's history. Now combine all these venues and you find the reason for the preservation of the collectible in this time of Comic Movie Fandom. These 6 resources give us the capabilities to validate the pricing for comics and comic art, provide them regularly and include tracking of its trends. Comic and related collecting has flourished into more than just a collectible but a commodity and a strong option as an investment opportunity.

Golden Age: Love, love, love this era. I do not find any other time frame more rewarding to collect than this one; and I am not alone. Our collectible hobby has more attention to it than ever before and that attention has caused multiple important and significant trends. With worldwide attention for comics through strong multimillion dollar sales, and a decade of enormous success through media outlets of TV, Film, Internet and Radio has come global recognition and comic awareness for everyone. This awareness includes the eyes of new and old investors, and reinvigorated collectors.

Which gets me to my first trend. That is the disappearance of rare unrestored books and mega keys lost to personal collections and family Trusts. This is most evident when you look back a mere 3-5 years ago and see the difference in the quality and frequency of books offered. Due to the lack of supply and huge demands it is not difficult to understand the increased values and prices that these comics are receiving when they appear for sale. This double edge sword of comic awareness and financial growth is causing a large, but deserving change.

Last year was another great year for this era, especially for Super-hero keys from Timely and DC, but they were not the only publishers with stunning numbers. Small publishers such as Centaur, Chesler, Fox, Four Star, Fiction House, Feature, Lev Gleason and so on, have more recently received exponentially strong growth with their key issues. The reasoning for this is that many truly rare and amazing books from these smaller printers are becoming more recognized by wise collectors. As books continue to be engulfed and not seen for periods at a time, other books need to take their place. There has been so much printed and to love in GA that when something is unavailable it will begin to increase the prices of the books that have been waiting on the fringe. These books have started to receive focused attention and now gleam in glory as record prices are being set with every auction or sale. Collectors don't stop, they collect and if it's not available they will find something else to get. This is a great thing, as people get to enjoy and appreciate a wider spectrum of comic collecting. Not just the mainstream titles, but others like Amazing Mystery Funnies, Science Comics, Fantastic Comics, Punch, Super Mystery, Amazing Man, Pep, etc. Smaller publishers have so many amazing covers and truly rare books that scarcely come to market and are coveted in any condition.

I see no slowing down when it comes to comics anytime soon or within the next 10 years. Collecting is meant to be fun, so collect what you enjoy. However, if you are investing I feel you can be comfortable in doing so outside of just Timelys and DC Super-heroes. This year will be very similar to last, with strong sales from the usual suspects, but an expansion of price growth to smaller publishers' keys. My top choices for unrestored mega keys that should be watched for and purchased with no regret are All Star Comics #8 (CGC 5.0 $48,000), Captain America Comics #1, Superman #1 (CGC 2.0 $88,000), Archie Comics #1 (CGC 4.0 $33,111), Action Comics #7 (CGC 1.8 $50,000), and Detective Comics #31 (CGC 4.5 $86,000). The next recommended books are less expensive in general, but as a blanket statement I would not hesitate to buy these at Guide as I feel they are undervalued. They are Action Comics #23, Detective Comics #58, Captain America Comics #3, classic Marvel Mystery covers, classic Detective covers with the Joker and pre-Robin Detectives, World's Finest #3, Mystic Comics #7, Red Raven #1, Flash Comics #86, All-American Comics #61, Captain Marvel Adventures #1(nn). As for smaller publishers these are just a tiny smattering of tough books to find, most of which I would pay double Guide for. In no particular order and with some recent pricing they are: Amazing-Man #22, Amazing Mystery Funnies V2#4, Amazing Mystery Funnies V2#5, Amazing Mystery Funnies V2#6, Cat-Man Comics #20 (CGC 5.5 $3,500), Crime Does Not Pay #24, Dynamic Comics #8 (CGC 3.0 $991 in 2014), Fantastic Comics #3 (CGC 2.5 $9,261 in 2014), Green Giant Comics #1, Headline Comics #8 (CGC 4.0 $2,032 in 2014), National Comics #16,#18, Punch Comics #12 (CGC 7.5

$28,680), Roly Poly Comics #14, Science Comics #4 (CGC 5.0 $3,107), Terrific Comics #5 (CGC 7.5 $11,353 in 2014) and Wonderworld Comics #7 (CGC 4.0 $3,107 in 2014).

Atomic Age: Another strong year for this era. We had difficulty keeping in any and all Horror titles, Baker Romance, Good Girl covers, select Crime books with violent covers and mid to high grade Sci-fi. Lots of original owner collections to still be unearthed in this time frame. I see it almost every week someone listing on eBay Atomic Age books found somewhere. I expect demand and gains to continue in this era again with the genres mentioned above. Some books to keep an eye out for are: Giant Comics Edition #12, Daring Love #1, Intimate Confessions #1, Tales of Terror Annual #1, Reform School Girl, Little Dot #1, The Spirit #22, Phantom Lady #17, Captain America #74, Startling #49, Peanuts #1, Junior Comics #15, Tomb of Terror #15, Black Cat Mystery #50, Mister Mystery #12, Venus #17-19 and Weird Mysteries #4.

Silver Age: It is still America's Sweetheart. It is comfortable, familiar, and absolutely easy to fall in love with. Great characters with amazing stories, talents, villains and outstanding artists and history. Movies and TV shows continue to keep comics on the forefront of people's minds. Super-hero titles from Marvel's top characters continue to dominate as usual and no surprise for anyone there. DC had a decent increase in sales in most all of their main titles as well. Batman continues to dominate and demand for Wonder Woman is still extremely high and very difficult to keep in stock. It is nice to see that TV shows for DC and future movies buzz continue to help boost their characters' sales. Please, please, please, DC don't blow it, which I think is the fear we all have in the back of our minds. Here are some of the top books to purchase in 2016 that are still undervalued: Brave and the Bold #28, #34 and #54, Action Comics #242 and #252, Detective Comics #225 and #233, Detective and Batman with Joker covers, Aquaman #1, Adventure Comics #247, Justice League #1, Amazing Spider-Man #3, Fantastic Four #1, #4 and #5, Avengers #1 and #4, X-Men #1, Journey Into Mystery #83, Tales of Suspense #39 and Incredible Hulk #1.

Peanuts* #1 is an Atomic Age book to keep an eye out for.

Bronze Age/Copper Age: Outside of the general keys, most of what is driving this genre are TV and Movie character appearances, people rekindling a relationship with titles they read when younger and completests (ones who have to own an entire series when collecting it). The Bronze Age mirrors the Silver Age in the titles and characters most purchased. If it's popular in the Silver Age it carries readership, interest and collectability into this era. I also feel that the Bronze Age is an entry level way for young collectors to get started in picking up keys and comics that they are comfortable budget wise to invest in. This time frame has some really great artists, covers, stories, and outstanding new characters that will always keep it appealing and memorable. I have begun to notice that the price jumps and steep increases we had seen in comics with correlation to Media's influence seems to have less of an effect today. The increases are not as grand, nor do they last as long as we are used to seeing a mere 2 years ago. The books to invest this year are: Incredible Hulk #181, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Amazing Spider-Man #129, Batman #232, Daredevil #131 and #168, Iron Fist #14, Marvel Spotlight #5, Star Wars #1 35-cent price variant, TMNT #1, New Mutants #98, X-Men #101 and Werewolf by Night #32.

Chrome Age or Steel Age (1992-2003): It's time to separate the era between Copper and this never-ending time frame of the Modern Age. It was an important time in the early '90s for comics, as a lot was going on and changing. In 1992 some of the largest and most popular artists of the time took a stand against Marvel and formed their own new company named Image Comics. The artists wanted better rates for pages and more royalties for the characters they created as their characters were being heavily merchandised. The company began with 4 titles, McFarlane's Spawn, Liefeld's Youngblood, Lee's WildC.A.T.s and Larsen's The Savage Dragon. The titles, artwork and characters were fresh and new and Image became an overnight success. There was also a fairly new trendy Price Guide called Wizard Magazine published monthly in 1991. DC in 1994 was taking a huge step in announcing that they were killing off their greatest character in Superman. That was an amazingly huge publicity stunt on their part that got everybody talking about it. This was also the time of trying new things for publishing such as lots of shiny chromium covers, fold out covers, multiple cover variants, polybags, limited signature variants, card inserts etc. That was my reasoning for the name of "Chrome Age" fits on what was happening at the time and all the other ages names as well. Then an alternative would be Steel Age, as the Man of Steel was almost killed off. As for books in this time frame to collect they would be: Venom: Lethal Protector Black Variant, Spawn #1 Black and White Edition, Cry for Dawn #1, Superman #75 Platinum Edition, and Batman Adventures #12.

Modern Age (2003-Current): Like the Chrome Age/Steel Age, there is an Image Comics influence in things memorable and influential in this era. Still love all that is Image as they continue to put our great new titles regularly. Currently enjoying Manifest Destiny and hope to get into Paper Girls (one of their late 2015 titles) as well. Otherwise Saga trades are nearly impossible to keep in stock, Deadpool is still a power seller and so is Harley Quinn. Marvel continues to reboot regularly but readers continue to stay faithful with Spider-Man and Spider-Gwen. We're also receiving strong sales for female Super-hero and non-Super-hero titles. Some books to get are: Saga #1, Peter Panzerfaust #1, Walking Dead #1, and Paper Girls #1, Amazing Spider-Man #678 Mary Jane Venom Variant and Harley Quinn #1 Straight Jacket Variant.

Conventions: For the most part we were really pleased with every convention we did except for a couple of stinkers in the test markets we tried. Going to stick mostly with the major cons and the ones local to us, just a safer bet. I do feel that far too many cons charge too much for a booth and don't have the attendance to justify setting up there. I will just leave it at that. I do want to thank all the people in all the cities we attended for coming to say Hi or purchasing books from us. We're really geared up for the new Convention Season to start up again.

Wrap Up: Comics had another great year with strong sales and new financial highs in all time periods. We had an outstanding year at Cloud 9 Comics with some glorious memories and achievements and look forward to this year as well. I have expectations for another marvelous year for the Golden Age as it continues to impress. It will be an exciting 2016 and we're looking forward to see what is going to appear for sale. There are many great outlets for books as we discussed earlier, so I highly recommend that you try and utilize all the resources and find something you like. Also attend your local conventions. It's a fun thing to do on the weekend with friends, family or just alone geeking out. See you all in 2016 and hope you get a chance to visit us some time.

This past year showed a maintained strength in the market for Canadian war-time comics. Whether we call them the Canadian Whites or WECA comics, after their breakout year in 2014, collectors gobbled them up at solid prices whenever they managed to surface. The renewed interest in them that began in 2014 did not, surprisingly, result in greater numbers or even large collections surfacing demonstrating again their overall 7+ Gerber scarcity that becomes even higher in grade.

Similarly, there seems to be a resurgence in interest in the post WECA (1947-55) Canadian reprint era books, especially the hybrid books with some Canadian content or those reassembled with distinct new covers and titles. These books, though not as scarce as WECA books, still had press runs that were one-tenth of the American books of the period and had petered out by the time of the Comics Code and disappeared completely by the dawn of the Silver Age. Though not generating prices near those commanded by WECA comics, hybrids and key hero reprints presently bring $100-$300 depending on condition with certain exceptions going higher.

Here are some prices paid for WECA books this past year (most of these books you could have gotten for $100 each or less a dozen years ago):

1945 Nelvana Compendium nn (1.5)	$10,456
Triumph Comics No. 12 (1.5)	$2,250
Rocket Comics Vol. 2 No. 4 (4.0)	$2,000
*Archie Specia*l nn (F. E. Howard 1944) (1.0)	$1, 036
Better Comics Vol. 6 No. 2 (4.0)	$1,000
Whiz Comics Vol. 1 No. 10 (8.0)	$1,000
Jewish War Heroes No. 2 (6.0)	$950
Lucky Comics Vol. 5 No. 9 (2.5)	$787
Dime Comics No. 3 (3.0)	$700
Jewish War Heroes No. 2 (4.0)	$488
Better Comics Vol. 3 No. 6 (3.0)	$485
Fantastic Comics No. 16 (reprint, 1941) (1.0)	$480
Dime Comics No. 18 (3.0)	$435
Zor The Mighty No. 2 (4.0)	$400

Like all comic book types, Canadian war time books are character-driven and the top two value books in this list show us that Nelvana appearances and covers seem to be one of the main factors in determining the marketplace value of these old books. Should a Triumph-Adventure Comics No. 1 (only 6 copies known with one copy restored and one copy coverless), which contains the origin and first appearance of Nelvana and making it much like Canada's Action Comics No. 1, come to market, it would be interesting to see what price it would get at auction. Similar questions could be asked of Triumph-Adventure Comics No. 2 (first Nelvana cover), Dime Comics No. 1 (first Johnny Canuck), and Better Comics Vol. 1 No. 1 (first real Canadian comic.

Looking ahead, 2016 will be the 75th anniversary of the Canadian comic book with Better Comics Vol. 1 No. 1 as the first real Canadian comic book, appearing in March, 1941. I look forward to reporting on some commemorating events and more sales in next year's message.

Primo Comics

Greetings from Primo Comics! We operate a newly launched online comic book store at primocomics.com as well as an eBay store at primo comics1. We have been dealing in comics since 1984 and have witnessed many market ups and downs. The comic book market in 2015 has been quite strong as evidenced by record prices for Silver Age through Copper Age books we have sold.

As comic book movies proliferate the globe, it has caused a huge increase in our back issue business related to those properties. Simply put, collections of comic books to buy have become much harder to secure as there are many dealers vying for a finite number of collections. Unless we act immediately, the collection will be sold to some other dealer or individual. The comic book movies have also exported an American pop culture pastime to the rest of the globe. Most of the countries outside of the United States do not have access to the original comics that many of the movies are based on. Currently, approximately 20% of our sales are generated from foreign buyers for both graded and ungraded comics. We are seeing the beginnings of a comic shortage in the United States, as a result. Most of the comic books published have remained concentrated in the United States, since comic collecting has historically been primarily an American hobby. Now those comics are spread globally, which is an interesting shift in trend.

American collectors are very issue and grade centric, meaning they want the highest conditioned copy of a particular issue they are interested in. Foreign buyers are less this way. We very commonly sell mid-grade, non-key books to foreign buyers at a premium to Guide prices since virtually no copies exist in their respective countries and they are quite pleased to have a reasonable example of the comic. American buyers will not accept paying a premium for the same book but will pay multiples of Guide value if graded by a third party grading service for a desired example. Globalization of comic books was a big theme for us in 2015 and we are learning and adjusting our business as a result.

Golden Age: Golden Age comics continue to be a brisk seller for the Superhero, Sci-fi and Horror genres, often selling for multiples of Guide if high grade (8.0 VF or higher) regardless if the issue is key or not. As long as the book is complete, there are many buyers for the respective example of the issue. Lower grade Superhero, Sci-fi and Horror books also sell quite well and usually bring Guide price. We have noticed that there is a trend that any Golden Age Superhero or Horror issue will sell regardless of grade since these issues are so difficult to find. Any issue in any grade in desired. The less robust areas of the Golden Age are Funny Animal, Westerns and Romance books. These genres will sell well in high grade but mid- to low grade copies are often a more difficult sell to collectors.

Silver Age: The Silver Age is white hot. Early Marvel and DC superhero titles dominate the landscape. All titles in all grades sell briskly. There is a true scarcity of high grade DC books from this age. Any 9.0 VF/NM copy of a DC superhero book will sell for multiples of Guide. Marvel high grade books are somewhat more plentiful but true high grade examples bring a bidding war. Key books for this age are ultra desirable. Again, the trend is any Marvel or DC book from this age in any grade has a collector base. Not everyone can afford thousands or even hundreds of dollars for a book, so people become content owning a reasonable example of the book.

Bronze Age: The Bronze Age is somewhat of a less mature era of collecting desirability. True high grade, 9.4 or higher, has a strong collector interest. Grades less than a 9.4 become somewhat harder to sell at Guide prices. Defenders, Luke Cage, Iron Fist, X-Men and many others sell quite well. More obscure character titles become very unpredictable in terms of desirability.

Copper Age: This era has really become harder to find and highly collected. There were many first appearances of key characters introduced in the 1980s as well as great artists and writers who produced groundbreaking work. I would recommend collecting this era aggressively since the books are still relatively inexpensive and have become scarcer. First appearances and origin issues are the most collected, but we typically sell non-key issues of popular characters consistently at or slightly above Guide prices.

CGC & CBCS: Graded comics have become a constant in the comic book marketplace. This service has removed the uncertainity collectors had to now truly know what they are buying and ultimately owning. CGC still dominates the landscape. A great new service is the Comic Book Certification Service (CBCS). Both offer fair and unbiased evaluation of your comic books.

Overall the comic book market is very strong, being fueled by movies and TV shows based upon the properties.

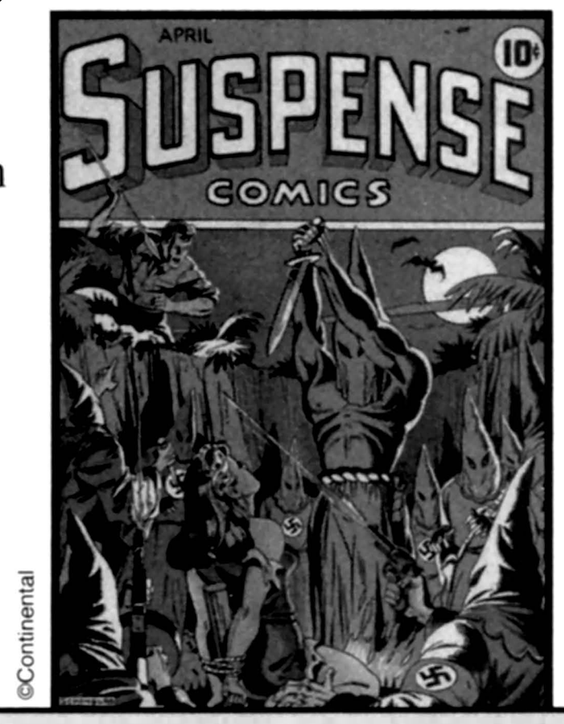
Welcome to my first annual OSPG Market report! It is a tremendous privilege to be an Overstreet comic advisor, and to share my thoughts and experiences in the comic book industry with all of you. Thank you to Bob Overstreet and the Gemstone team for the opportunity to share in this edition. I would also like to thank the following long time comic friends for sharing this hobby with me and for contributing to my growth as a collector: Isaac Flores, Brian Fornesi, Brian De Los Santos, Tom Hassey, Noel Jumaoas, Frank Rohr, Lance Washington, and Rick Whitelock.

My roots in comics began with accumulating Marvels in the early '80s at my local 7-11 store. From there, I found my LCS (Al's Comic Shop in Stockton, CA) where I'd purchase numerous Marvel titles off the rack. I soon ventured into wall books, and I still have my high grade Defenders #10 that I purchased (for a then-whopping $4) from Al's in 1985. In junior high, I can remember trading a stack of 1965 Marvels at a local Holiday Inn show for a low grade FF #8. It was the first time I ever saw a 12-cent circle Marvel and I had to have it. I took a break from comics in 1988, but would return in 1993 after I purchased a Hulk #3 at a local mall show and that hooked me into the vintage market. My focus is on pre-1964 Marvels, GA Schomburg covers, Timelys, and pre-Robin Detectives.

As I write this market report a few weeks before Christmas, the market still seems very strong across the vintage realm of comics. The OSPG, Gerber Photo Journals, online auction houses, slabbing comics, and movies & TV shows continue to have game changing impact on the vintage comic market. I have been watching the new Supergirl TV show on CBS, and it has been quite entertaining. This new show has bumped Action Comics #252 (1st. app. of Supergirl) to experience record demand and prices across all grade ranges. Vintage comic characters are benefiting from the mass media exposure. This is healthy for our hobby to draw in new collectors, but the rapid increase in demand has driven prices up and priced some collectors out of the market very quickly. For the old school collectors like me, I still see Avengers #1 as a $400 book in VG and not $1500. For the rest of us, a VG Avengers #1 will always be the norm at $1500. It can be quite a sticker shock initially for some collectors.



Golden Age: I get asked all the time if Superman, Batman, and Captain America related titles are the best Golden Age books to invest in. Those have proven to be solid buys (and should continue to be), but comics should still be enjoyed for the creative, visual, historical documents that they are. As I type this, a Batman #1 CGC 1.5 Brittle just sold at auction a few hours ago for $40,000! That is a very strong price for the grade and page quality (peanut brittle) if that sale actually goes through. Batman #1 is one of the most consistent, near bulletproof investments of the GA keys. It's also quite plentiful of the keys from that time period; so hungry buyers should stay very patient when shopping for a copy. Action Comics #7 has plenty of room to grow. There will be a CGC 2.0 copy auctioned in Feb 2016, and I am guessing it will be pushing the $80K-$90K range. Every time an Action #1 sells for a record price it sends shockwaves to the #7, #10, and #13. The full front Superman pose on the #7 is the largest of the early *Action*s while he is drawn quite small on the #1, #10, and #13. Pre-Robin *Detective*s and early *Action*s remain the cream of the crop for DC Gold, but All Star #8 (1st Wonder Woman) has been a high demand book lately.

I am witnessing a few trends in collectors: One is to downgrade big-ticket books when they hit a certain price point, so other books can be acquired. I experienced this earlier in the year as Detective Comics #31 was sizzling in demand and price. I thought it was wise to downgrade my mid-grade copy in exchange for a low grade copy plus pick up some other keys and cash. It was one of the best decisions I have made in this hobby, but I will say that timing is everything when shopping or selling a big-ticket book. The other trend I am seeing is the amazing market for parts and pieces for key books – raw or slabbed centerfolds, front covers, back covers, single wraps, single pages – they are all in demand. I am reminded of the Action Comics #1 CGC "3/5 of the front cover only" that sold about six or seven years ago at auction for around $7,000. A complete cover of Captain America Comics #1 CGC sold for nearly $10K earlier this year, and a Cap #1 CGC "front cover only" sold for $3,400 at auction and $5,000 on eBay days later. Prices for the key GA books are getting so high even in low grade that folks are settling for parts and pieces of books. I can't wait to see a slabbed single staple from an Action #1 or Detective #27 with parts of the front cover hanging on---what will that go for? LOL.

How many pre-hero, especially pre-Batman Detective, collectors are out there? Not many, because it is a small niche of collectors who are after these rare books. The Creig Flessel covers are some of the best of the dawn of the Golden Age. I've observed the pre-Bat market closely this past year. And although they are rarely for sale publicly, sales this year have been up. I remember in February 2015, a slew of pre-Batman *Detective*s (#'s 4,5,7,9,10,12-16,18-20,22,23,26) showed up on eBay at the same time from the same seller. The books were mainly all brittle, restored, or incomplete but prices were generally still strong – the #13 CGC 1.0 PLOD $900, and #18 CGC 1.0 $1,581. With most CGC census readings showing less than 20-30 copies of any pre-Bat issue, these books certainly prove that even brittle or incomplete copies are still in demand and acceptable due to a limited supply. Detective #18 is certainly my favorite of the run – the creepy, cool, and mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu!

On the Timely front, Captain America Comics #1 is climbing, but it is still a hair behind Batman #1. Unrestored copies for Cap #1 have been scarce on the open market the last half of 2015. Cap #3 has gone bonkers price wise! I blinked and VGs went from $2500 to $12,000 overnight. Meanwhile, Cap #2 seems to be the bargain between the #1 and #3. I'm hoping Overstreet denotes the #2 as the "1st round shield" someday in the price listings. Cap #33 remains my favorite Cap cover for the later Schomburg Cap run. Marvel Comics #1 had some strong sales this year, which always seems to happen when a book disappears from the open market for a year or two. I am hoping Marvel Mystery #9 makes a rebound as a CGC 5.5 copy sold for $23,500+ recently. There's not a rumored Torch or Subby character in any movie, but Marvel Mystery #9 has always been a big ticket Timely for the old timers. It's arguably the best Subby cover. If you can't afford or find a Marvel Mystery #9, then buy a Torch #8. It is the "poor man's" Marvel Mystery #9, sports a fantastic "in your face" Torch pose by Alex Schomburg, and is plentiful in supply. Speaking of supply, USA Cap covers are still tough. The #7 receives all the much deserved attention, but I believe the #8 to be the rarest of the #6-11 run. I have owned several #7s, but #8 has proven tougher. Call me if you want get rid of a USA #8! All Select #1-10 is a great mini run to put together. Some say the #4 and the #7 are very tough. I used to think the #3 was tough, but I have seen enough of them. The #2 can be elusive and is neck in neck with the #1 as my favorite in the run. The green cover, big 'ole gun barrel and parachute, and Red Skull story is an attractive aspect for collectors. Does anyone out there know who owns the Reilly (San Francisco) copy of All Select #2? I've only seen a B&W picture of it in old Overstreet Grading Guide, but never a color scan or in hand. That would be quite a treasure to acquire. Speaking of Schomburg covers, the 9.0 CBCS Suspense Comics #3 brought $173K in the August Heritage auction. Suspense #3 might be the best "cover" book of the Golden Age. I get a fair amount of requests for it, but some collectors won't spend 4-5 figures on a "cover only" book. For the rest of us, Schomburg's most powerful imagery of hooded Nazis, bondage, bonfire, guns, knives, swords, a full moon, bats, a steamy jungle, and of course the Spear of Freedom is too much to resist!

Suspense Comics* #3 might be the best "cover" book of the Golden Age

Silver Age: Although Showcase #4 (or Detective #225 depending on who you ask) historically marks the start of the Silver Age, I consider any book with the CCA stamp to be Silver Age, which means any book dated March 1955 onward. DC Silver is picking up steam, and it appears some Marvels have slowed down and shown some price resistance as of late. Brave and the Bold #28, Detective Comics #225, Action Comics #252, and Showcase #4 are the hottest Silver Age DCs. Wonder Woman #98 (1st SA WW) experienced some hefty sales in the later part of 2015. A friend of mine purchased a CGC 3.0 copy for $2,900 and I saw a few copies sell on eBay for roughly $800-$1000/point. The pending JLA movie in 2017 and the Flash and Supergirl shows are really pushing up the first appearances. Martian Manhunter was quite a surprise in the Supergirl episodes, and I witnessed a CGC 2.5 Detective #225 sell for $2,000 on eBay just hours after the episode in which the Martian Manhunter was revealed. By the time this goes to print, I'm guessing Detective #225s will be even hotter. So what is the toughest Silver Age DC key in any grade? Adventure #247? Detective #225? Jimmy Olsen #1? Adventure Comics #210? Regardless, page quality for Silver Age DCs is much tougher to find in off white or better and can sell for premiums.

On the Marvel front, Incredible Hulk #1 seems to have slowed down the past few months to around $3k per point. Showcase #4 is selling at a higher price point than Hulk #1. Even Amazing Fantasy #15 is slowing ever so slightly, but it is not as noticeable as Hulk #1. If you own a Hulk #1, and you paid strong for it in the last 2 years, don't worry. These price corrections are normal and healthy, but you will have to hold onto it longer term before the market catches up again. The question is what about the speculation movie books such as Strange Tales #110 and Fantastic Four #52? Will those continue to sell from strong prices? I still believe the best Marvels are the pre-1963 issues. The earlier "12 cent circle price" Marvels like FF #1-13 and Hulk #1-6 are still my favorite. I got to meet Stan Lee two summers ago at a rare LCS appearance. I was trying to decide which book to have him sign, and it made sense that FF #1 was the right choice since it was the first title that started the Marvel Silver Age. I hope FF #1 rebounds in the market in the near future. With all respect to AF #15, it deserves to be the #1 sought after Marvel key. One should slab those keys if they are planning on selling them soon, or if you just want to see what you have grade wise. Otherwise, keep those books in a double Mylar and two thick acid free boards and you can enjoy it cover to cover whenever you want.

A friend of mine told me that they noticed two oddities that I agree with: One, Journey Into Mystery #89 seems to be the toughest in the Thor-JIM run. I've seen that issue often missing in dealers' boxes. Look around and I think you may find that true. Second, take notice that a deep colored green monster on the front cover of an FF #1 is quite uncommon. Most copies have a lighter colored monster. I remember owning a CGC 3.5 old label FF #1 about nine years ago and that was the only deep green monster copy I've owned.

Bronze Age: Incredible Hulk #181 is the AF #15 of the Bronze Age. It has relentless demand and oodles of supply but still sells at about $200/point. Missing Marvel value stamps don't stop strong sales, especially if the eye appeal is VF or better. This is now a 40+ year old book and we will continue to see the 20s generation start buying these up as they begin to work and have money to invest with. ASM #121 has passed #122 as the stronger demand book. ASM #129 is snapped up in an instant as well. Giant-Size X-Men #1 is still a popular book as well as X-Men #94-143. Sub-Mariner #59 is a book that flies under the radar and is still cheap...a superb Everett black cover showing a Subby vs. Thor battle!

In summary, always buy what you like and unless it is a scarce book or a killer deal, be patient for the books you are looking for. Networking with established dealers and collectors at conventions and on the CGC chat boards can help keep you connected and stock your comic vault. For new collectors, it may take you a few seasons to find out what you truly love versus what is cool but not for the keeper box. I can attest that over my 23 years in the hobby, that you will go through many collecting cycles influenced by family/friends, dealers, collectors, social media, and Hollywood. You will make some good deals and some bad deals. You will over-pay for a book. You will pass on a book and regret it later. With time and patience you will build up a fine collection. Two books I regret letting go are Action Comics #13 and Captain America Comics #3. I only owned them once, but I have since acquired many books of equal or higher caliber. The hunt is half the fun!

Hello again from New Jersey!

The good times kept rollin' in 2015 for the back issue market!

After a very strong 2014, I was sure that the market for back issues had peaked, but boy was I wrong. Sales just kept growing.

In the 30 years I've been selling comics, I believe this is the most dynamic market for back issues. 2014 trends continued, with first appearances of important and not-so important characters exploding in value after news of a movie or TV appearance was announced.

There have been comparisons made to the '90s bubble, but I feel that today's market is much healthier. The breadth of quality on my wall of new comics has never been better, despite the Marvel publishing difficulties (more on that later). Also, the explosion of superhero movies and TV shows has fueled a genuine love of the characters and the medium. My shop was open in the '90s and there was a much more speculative, mercenary feel to the inflated sales of that period. Today, while there's plenty of flipping and speculating, there's a genuine interest and passion in new and vintage material.

Another difference is that the internet has widened exposure to the back issues market and has vastly expanded the hobby. There's a part of me that misses the hunt of the pre-internet days. The relative scarcity or abundance is easily discovered now by a simple eBay search.

One segment of the market that I'm enjoying is the Golden Age market. I was lucky enough to pick up several nice groups of Golden Age books, plus various individual books and sales were robust. The pricing on particular issues with noteworthy covers or artists or scarcity is often many multiples of Overstreet. While we love buying all eras, there's something magical about opening a box and seeing a really scarce Golden Age issue that I've never owned before. Interest in specific genres of Golden Age is white-hot now, including Timelys, certain DC titles, Horror, World War II,etc.

Humor/Westerns, TV/Movie, etc. will move, but only heavily discounted.

Regarding Silver, Bronze, Copper and Modern, the market is very healthy. Low to mid-grade examples of key issues have really moved up in price, with the spreads narrowing between 4.0 and 6.0. I'm seeing a trend of "price-point" books, where certain issues sell with no regard to condition, if the buyer has a budget and wants to own that issue.

While the market has become more key-centric, we are selling plenty of runs of all Marvel titles and some of the DC titles.

While there are many more part-time dealers and flippers out there, the number of brick and mortar shops specializing in back issues has not grown. So, we have more competition from on-line sellers, but less competition from brick and mortar.

We aggressively pressed our buying this year and managed to acquire many Silver/Bronze/Copper and Modern collections. Although the greater visibility of comics in general has pulled a lot of comics out of the woodwork, demand has easily absorbed any and all key issues when priced appropriately.

Our convention sales have been brisk, with plenty of demand for higher priced "wall" books as well as the bargain boxes, where we move lots of vintage comics in affordable grades. We set up at about 8 to 10 larger shows, as well as some of the local 1-day shows, and for the most part, it has shown growth from 2014.

New York Comic Con just keeps growing, with the crowds reportedly eclipsing San Diego Comic-Con numbers. While the trend of cosplayers and celebrity guests taking over major conventions continues, there's still plenty of buying and selling going on.

A small sampling of sales at New York: Flash #123 7.5, Amazing Spider-Man #1 (3 copies), Fantastic Four #1, Strange Tales #110 (2 copies), Hulk #181 (4 copies, probably could have sold about 25 or 30 of them if I had them…), Amazing Spider-Man #300 (7 copies), New Mutants #98 (4 copies) plus, hundreds more key issues from various eras.

At this writing, Star Wars hit theaters and was a blockbuster. Interest in the Marvel Comics series Volume 1 was strong leading up the film release and continued afterwards Issues #1, #42(1st Boba Fett), #68 and #107 are the hottest, but sales were very strong on all numbers as collectors aimed to finish their runs. We sold over 50 copies of #1 and #42 throughout the year, and I could have sold that many #68 and #107, but they seemed tougher to get.

Batman (main title) shows great demand and I will note that if I was able to find enough supply, it would be my number one selling back issue title.

All the usual 1st appearances and classic covers continue to sell very well, including #155,181,189,200,222,227,232,234, 244,251,357,386,etc.

Batman: The Dark Knight Returns continues to be a favorite and with the release of the Dark Knight III sequel, demand increased. An added bonus of the release of DK3 was that I can now sell lots of the Dark Knight Strikes Again sequel, which formerly was quite slow. We added to the DK3 fun by releasing our Zapp! Exclusive cover by the great Terry and Rachel Dodson. Sales have been nothing short of phenomenal and DC also produced a 1:5000 incentive edition featuring a unique Jim Lee original art cover. We sold ours quickly for $5,000 to a happy Batman collector.

Batman: The Killing Joke doesn't stop selling at $45 to $60.

New Teen Titans #2 with the intro. of Deathstroke exploded. Mid-grades fly at $75 to $100. CGC 9.8 over $500.

DC Comics Presents #26 with the intro. of the New Teen Titans, gets about double Guide easily.

Deadpool is officially in movie theatres as I write this and is a smash hit. Interest in back issues remained strong.

New Mutants #98 held steady at $800 to $850 in CGC 9.8. While demand is strong, supply is quite ample, creating equilibrium. When raw, this has become a "price-point" book, with a floor of $150 for literally any grade. As long as the book is not a beater, it sells easily for $275 with no hesitation. Generally, any Deadpool appearances sell very well including the 2 mini-series from the '90s have nearly tripled, from $10 a set to $25 to $30 per set. The 1997 #1 sells easily raw for $80 to $100.

Secret Wars #8 has moved up. While very common, demand is non-stop and we sell them as fast as we get them for $35 -$45 in raw NM..

Suicide Squad continues to sell as movie hype keeps bubbling. All the different volumes sell, but the hottest are the DC New 52 series.

Archies are selling very steadily, with sales up on the new issues and more demand for Silver and Bronze. Golden Age Archies, sell fast at well over Guide instantly.

Batman Adventures #12 is white-hot, and prices steadily climbed all year.

Batman New 52 series by Snyder and Capullo are the kings of current series. #1 sells easily for $50 to $75, #4 is $25, #6 is $30, many other issues command $8 to $12 each.

The myriad variant covers to the Batman series also remain very hot, and tend to hold their value better than most variants.

Civil War sets sell easily at $60 to $75.

Infinity Gauntlet sets sell easily for $50 to $60. The sequels, Infinity Crusade and Infinity War, jumped as well, to about $20 to $25 per set.

Thanos Quest still sells well, $40 to $50 per set.

Walking Dead is holding up, with demand very strong and prices holding steady. We sold many copies of #1 at $1,000 to $1,200. This has become a "price-point" book, with the normal spreads between grades rendered meaningless. The rest of the run sells very quickly. This is one of the few titles that we purposely order plenty of extras each month, as they are difficult to buy in the collections.

Sales on new issues are steady, but our shop's sales suffered as Marvel paused their publishing of most titles and then did reboots that were not welcomed by our customers. I didn't order heavily in contrast to the DC New 52 relaunch, and still had too many unsold copies. Whereas the DC New 52 reboot was produced in a cohesive and original fashion, Marvel continues a scattershot haphazard approach without a consistent plan. The DC New 52 relaunch was a massive success, and this Marvel relaunch was very poorly received. The shop owners that I've spoken to universally expressed how much business was harmed by the poorly executed publishing from Marvel in 2015.

I understand that Marvel's focus is on movies and publishing is a tiny business comparatively, but I can't understand why they don't get a better plan together. I really believe there's a lot of money left on the table right now.

We're seeing demand for many of the '90s comics. Yes, those million print run ones that we all think are junk. For example, we moved over 100 Spawn #1 in the stores and at cons this year for $5 to $10 each. These are bought by both new buyers who were not even born yet as well as lapsed readers purchasing nostalgia.

Overall, we were very happy with 2015 and we have the wind at our backs with Star Wars, Deadpool, Civil War, etc. in the pipeline for 2016.

Please, if you're buying or selling comics, please contact us any time. I'm itching to buy some more comics!

In closing, I want to give a thank you to all of our loyal customers for making our business a success, and I look forward to more good times ahead.

Not many people are aware that Canada published their own comics during the Golden Age. These wartime era comics hosted a stable of superheroes that where both analogous and indigenous to Canada. Such iconic heroes as Nelvana of the Northern Lights and her brethren spoke to Canada's role on both the Home front and smashing the Axis abroad.

These comics were published primarily from 1941-1946, as a result of the implementation of the War Exchange Conservation Act, wherein non-essential items were prohibited for import into Canada, including pulp literature. As a result, Canada started its own fledgling comic book industry.

These comics were essentially published with colour covers, with interiors that were published in black and white, in order to defray costly publishing expenses. Hence, these comics are now referred to as "Canadian Whites" by both collectors and historians alike. That said, the very early issues of Wow Comics published by Bell Features and the very early issues of Better Comics published by Maple Leaf sport colour interiors.

The first publisher was Maple Leaf publishing books out of Vancouver, BC such as Better Comics, Rocket Comics, Bing Bang Comics and Lucky Comics. The aforementioned Maple Leaf comics introduced the first Canadian superhero in Better Comics #1 in March of 1941 (The Iron Man). Maple Leaf comics are deemed to be the scarcest and command a premium when changing hands. Anglo American (Double "A") Publishing in Toronto introduced Freelance and a host of Fawcett derived characters to Canada, including Captain Marvel and Spy Smasher. The next publisher was Bell Features in Toronto with Johnny Canuck, Nelvana, the Penguin and Thunderfist, etc. in such flagship titles as Dime Comics, Triumph Comics, Active Comics, and Commando Comics. Finally, Educational Projects out of Montreal, Quebec introduced Canada Jack in its flagship title, Canadian Heroes.

It is important to note that these vestiges of Canadian Pop Culture helped create a Canadian identity within their pages. Canada Jack was an athlete that battled the 5th column saboteurs on the Canadian home front in Canadian Heroes comic books. While he was not larger than life and not endowed with super powers, the Canadian youth of the Second World War at home could emulate and subsequently identify with Canada Jack. This sort of homegrown sentiment could also be likened to Johnny Canuck, who while also was not larger than life, helped smash the Axis abroad, including Hitler.

Nelvana was the first superhero with a Canadian national identity, and graced the pages of Triumph Comics. In fact, Nelvana pre-dated Wonder Woman by almost four months! She came to aid of the indigenous peoples of the North West Territories in her early appearances, and could fly along the Aurora Borealis.

Sadly, the War Exchange Conservation Act was repealed in 1946, and subsequently American comic books were allowed to be imported into Canada. Hence, Captain America and Superman and their brethren replaced their Canadian counterparts in full colour for only a dime. This ushered in the demise of the "Canadian Whites", as the floundering industry could no longer complete. The last ditch efforts to produce Canadian homegrown comics in full color just did not stand up against their American predecessors Subsequently, many of the publishing houses in Canada folded, including Anglo-American publishing, Maple Leaf Publishing, and eventually Bell Features.

In 2015, it can be stated that it was a remarkable year for Canadian Golden Age comic books (AKA: Canadian Whites) in terms of both bringing awareness to the marketplace, and prices realized at auction.

The Great Escape

Greetings once again from Tennessee and Kentucky! This has been a great year for comics, and a great year for back issues! We've seen an incredible amount of increased activity in the back issue market this year. Of course, this was driven by movie and TV appearances, or even the announcement of appearances.

All of the upward price pressure for first appearances of popular characters has also had the effect of driving more budget minded customers to look for the more obscure characters' first apprearances. This has led to some odd pricing in the last year. For instance, the first apprearance of Carol Danvers is now worth considerably more than the first appearance of Mar-Vell! And who would have predicted that the first appearances of characters like Felicity Smoak or Captain Universe would be sought after? It is worth noting, however, that the Marvel first appearances are more sought after than the DC ones.

In spite of the first appeance mania, we do continue to see some of the same long-time trends. One is that of the "donut hole" of back issue sales. This is where you can sell issues from the last five years or older than fifteen years, but don't sell many from the years in between. We also don't really see as many folks trying to put together long runs anymore. Lots of folks pick a specific spot from a few years back and try to just complete those. Another trend that we've been noticing in just the last few months is the slowing in sales of used Trade Paperbacks. The new ones still sell pretty well, but the used ones sit for a lot longer than they used to. I attribute this to a couple of factors. 1) There's now so much product that it's hard to keep up with the new trades, much less buy used ones. 2) The market for trades may be the same market that is now digitally downloading their books. They're not as tied to having the physical copy of the book, so they wait for a cheap digital sale to read the older titles. On the other hand, one great trend that we're seeing is lots more younger people getting into buying comics!

This year was a banner one in terms of acquiring collections! We were able to acquire five Amazing Spider-Man #1s this year, as well as quite a few other Key issues! We also picked up a complete run of Fantastic Four from #2 up, and a complete Warren collection only missing the Eerie #1. We even bought a collection that had seventeen copies of Star Wars #1 ranging from Very Fine to Near Mint! Not much in the way of original art this year, though we did pick up a nice page from Adventure #384 and a cool Jimmy Olsen page.

Silver Age sales of note: Amazing Fantasy #15 GD- $3000, Amazing Spider-Man #1 Fair $1200, 3 copies at GD for $2500 each, and one CGC 4.0 for $3800, Aquaman #35 VG/FN $150, FN $350, Avengers #57 VG $125, FN/VF $400, Captain America #117 FN $100, Daredevil #1 GD $400, Famous Monsters Of Filmland #1 VG $500, Fantastic Four #12 VG $700, Superman's Girl Friend, Lois Lane #70 FN+ $150, Marvel Super-Heroes #18 FN+ $115, Showcase #22 GD $1400, Showcase #12 GD $375, Silver Surfer #1 GD $60, #1 VF $400, Silver Surfer #4 CGC 4.5 $200, Strange Tales #110 GD $700, X-Men (Uncanny) #1 GD- $1000, GD $1400.

Bronze Age sales of note: Amazing Spider-Man #122 VG $100, 129 VG $200, Dr. Strange vol. 2 #1 VF/NM $100, Incredible Hulk #181 Fair $405 on eBay, Iron Man #55 GD $146, GD $210, Marvel Feature #1 FN/VF $75, Marvel Premiere #15 GD- $75, Marvel Preview #4 VF $400, Rampage Magazine (this is a British comic reprinting Marvel Two-In-One Annual #2) VF/NM $50, Star Wars #1 35-cent variant Fine $1000, 35-cent variant VG/Fine $1000, #3 35-cent variant $825, Tomb Of Dracula #10 VF $150, Vampirella #1 FN $132, and Werewolf By Night #32 VG $75.

Modern Age sales of note: Amazing Spider-Man #300 VF $150, Incredible Hulk #271 NM $200, New Mutants #98 VG $157, VG $162, Suicide Squad #1 NM $40, Venom: Lethal Protector #1 Gold Variant VF/NM $50.

Cavalier Comics

It's been a very interesting year for my store. New comic sales have fallen off with Marvel and DC with all of the event books and a never ending glut #1 issues and reboots from both companies (especially Marvel). Customers are fed up with this and they are dropping their subscriptions. The quality is no longer there with the big two except for a few select titles like Batman. Once again, they have to get back to self-contained storylines with the respected books and quit starting over.

But the good news is that several of them are picking up older books. Demand for key books and older storylines are high in my shop as well as conventions. I'm putting in more of an effort to track down collections for the upcoming year. Notable sales for the past year: Batman Adventures #12 VF $350, Scooby Doo #1 (Gold Key) GD+ $135, Joker #1 VF/NM $75, Astonishing Tales #25 VF/NM $110, New Gods #1 VF/NM $120, Swamp Thing #37 CGC 9.6 $150, Ghost Rider #81 CGC 9.8 $100, and Amazing Spider-Man #238 CGC 9.6 $205.

Greetings from Portland Oregon!

Estimating true value and keeping up with new hot books and other pricing shifts in the highly active comics market is an arduous task. Notable sales this year were of low grade keys such as Archie's Pal's & Gals #23 (Winter 1962), the first appearance of Josie, in VG for $148 on eBay. Most of the comics I sell cost less than $30, such as Hero For Hire #1 (6/72) in GD- for $33. Other sales of note include Inhumans #1 (10/75) VF+ for $129, Iron Man #55 (2/73) GD+ for $140, and the 1966 fanzine Spa Fon #2 VF for $95. Non-key Golden Age comics from the 1940s, regardless of title or condition, sold on average at 150-200% Guide; examples of such titles include Frisky Fables, Funny Stuff, Happy Comics and Tick Tock Tales.

Plain old Marvels of any kind starting at $5 sold in antique malls at 125% Guide or higher. Double Guide was not uncommon to receive from speculators and collectors looking for undervalued and overlooked titles. For example, I sold Marvel Chillers #1 (10/75), the first appearance of Mordred the Mystic in FN/VF for $22, and Skull, the Slayer #1 (8/75) in FN/VF for $17.50, also a first appearance. Comics sometimes sell in person that just won't move online, even at a fraction of the cost, and reminding buyers that such books are forty years old can help close a deal.

Walking Dead comics sell well for me year-round in antique malls, including current issues in 9.6 NM+ starting at $5, and the entire run remains bulletproof in terms of sales. Image's '68, Marvel's Empire of the Dead and any Marvel Zombies titles and crossovers also sell well, with ancillary zombie titles slow to move unless discounted. Archie's Afterlife still has a pulse. Deadworld one-shots and mini-series maintain back issue interest going back thirty years.

DCs were slow to move this year in general except for key issues. Archies sold well overall. I almost sold out of low grade Dells again this year except for Western titles in the $5 to $20 range at an average of 100% Guide, with Westerns bringing about 60-75% Guide. Charlton Romance doubled in sales this year, with low to mid-grade copies selling briskly in the $5 to $15 range, with no resistance to $20 and up on VF or better copies because high grade Charlton Romance are uncommon. Comic sales in general were up regardless of publisher from last year, with TV and movie tie-ins tough to keep in stock. I sold a raw 9.4 NM copy of Preacher #1 on 11/1/15 for $295 on eBay, roughly twenty minutes after the Preacher preview was broadcast during an airing of AMC's The Walking Dead, and so it goes with pop culture driven books. Burgeoning interest in comics has helped the hobby evolve into a stable, healthy and prosperous industry.

Marvel Type 1 test market cover price variants continue to break record sales results that are well above the listed values of easy to find Bronze Age key books such as Incredible Hulk #181 (11/74) listed in OCBPG #45 at $2400 in raw 9.2 NM- and X-Men #94 (8/75) listed in raw 9.2 NM- at $1350. Type 1 variants lead the herd in demand due to scarcity because such variants were not created to be collectible. Publisher experiments in the 20th century repeatedly birthed Type 1 cover price variants immediately before universal price hikes, such as the shift from 10 to 12 cents per copy that occurred in January 1962, and the 25 cent to 30 cent shift famously embodied by the Marvel variants cover dated 4-8/1976 and from 30 to 35 cents for variants cover dated 6-10/1977. Despite much heckling back in the day from fellow advisors and critics, when I discovered and publicized the existence of the Marvel cover price variants in August 1997, such comics have soared in popularity and value. For a history of comic book variants from the Golden Age to the present, as well as a list of known variants and a lexicon of variant types, with examples that continue to evolve and expand, refer to my article from 2010 in the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide #40, "A History of Publisher Experimentation and Variant Comic Books," pages #1010-1038.

Marvel Type 1 test market cover price variants are absolutely the hottest Bronze Age books pursued by collectors and speculators, with some comics realizing prices of 50 or more times than the same non-variant issues, and often double digit multiples of listed Guide values! Auction results on Marvel test market variants can fluctuate wildly. Key books listed by the Guide in the Top 10 Gold, Silver and Bronze Age categories are there due to consistent sales and demand, and two of the top Bronze Age comics are 35 cent variants. As of this writing, Star Wars #1 (7/77) in raw 9.2 is in first place at $6000, and Iron Fist #14 (8/77) in raw 9.2 is in second place at $3000, and both listed values are conservative. It is worth noting that Marvel's Star Wars #1 is the only mainstream collectible that was released before the Star Wars film was released, aside from George Lucas' Star Wars: From the Adventures of Luke Skywalker novel, ghost written by Alan Dean Foster — this is the scarce Ballantine book #26061(12/76) with a Ralph McQuarrie painted cover which features a large Darth Vader image with smaller images of Luke Skywalker, R2D2, C3PO and Chewbacca.

The ratio of regular 30 cent copies of Star Wars #1 in CGC 9.4 NM to 9.8 NM/MT (there are over 2000) to the 35 cent variant of #1 is 200 to 1, according to the CGC census. Roughly twenty certified 35 cent copies exist in NM 9.4 or better, of which two certified copies exist in CGC 9.6 NM+ condition to date. One CGC 9.6 NM+ 35 cent variant sold in June 2015 on Comiclink for a whopping $36,500! Other notable sales include a Star Wars #1 35 cent variant in CGC 9.0 VF/NM in May 2015 for $7768, and a Thor #260 in CGC 9.8 NM/MT 35 cent variant in April 2015 for $3000, the latter being the highest graded copy. The highest graded examples of Marvel variants are bringing truly astronomical prices at auction, and that will undoubtedly get another bump from the new Star Wars: The Force Awakens movie. I predict increased sales and solid value increase in the entire Marvel 1977-1986 Star Wars series, with significant price jumps in issues #1(7/77), #42(12/80) first Boba Fett, #68(2/83) re-intro Boba Fett, and #107(9/86), the last issue. Marvel's contemporary Star Wars titles are fun reads, too!

Archie 15 cent Type 1 cover price variants have 86 out of 112 possible now confirmed to exist, and I feel confident that all 112 issues will eventually surface. Doug Sulipa and I estimate that such 15 cent variants are about 400-500 times scarcer than their 12 cent counterparts. In 2015 the few 15 cent variants that changed hands went for only about 2-3 times Guide of 12 cent editions when they changed hands at all. In 2015, the Sci-Fi and monster 1961-1962 regular 12 cent issues sold for about 3-5 times Guide, so the 15 cent variants of these books should logically be considerably higher in value, but it's difficult to nail down actual worth when such items are rarely seen on the market. I believe all 15 cent Archie Type 1 cover price variants have enormous investment potential, especially the three super-keys: Archie's Madhouse #22 (10/62), Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #75 (3/62) and Josie #1(2/63).

Sixteen different Type 1 Charlton 15 cent test market cover price variants from March 1962 may be out there, but currently Space War #15 (3/62) and Texas Rangers #32 (3/62) are the only two examples confirmed to exist. Such 15 cent variants are so unknown to collectors that no sales have ever been reported, and only four total copies are confirmed to exist. No additional 15 cent variants surfaced in the last year, and real value is difficult to judge without any money changing hands. I find such cusp era variants interesting and hope collectors will share acquisitions with me and/or the Guide so I can disseminate the information.

U.S. published Type 1a cover price variants simultaneously published for foreign distribution are increasing in demand according to Doug Sulipa. Bronze and Copper Age Marvel and to a lesser extent DC Type 1a Canadian cover price variants are now routinely selling for 150-400% Guide, and select CGC high grade key issues of popular characters have been bringing 400-2000% of Guide; such books are at least 10 times scarcer due to low print runs. Canada's population is about 10% of the U.S. population, thus about 10% of all print runs are Canadian copies, however roughly 80% of the surviving copies are Direct Editions, bought in comic shops and saved by collectors. Most of the Newsstand editions were bought by non-collecting readers, with a much lower survival rate, and most are well read FA/GD to FN/VF copies. Most VF/NM or better Type 1a Canadian Newsstand Cover Price Variants are 50 to 250 times Scarcer than their U.S. Direct Market counterparts in high grade; randomly checking the CGC census will substantiate this for most items. High grade examples from the Silver and Bronze age of Type 1a variants are scarcer still, largely due to damages that occurred in transit, and in particular water damage found on pence editions shipped overseas. Such difficulties predate contemporary standard procedures like simultaneous off-site printing, a reality that renders the concept of origination meaningless for modern books. Marvel collectors dominate about 75% of the Type 1a Canadian cover price and British pence variant market, while DC and the others split the remaining 25%, with non-DC books accounting for less than 10% of total sales, a ratio that steepens when you hit the 1990s, when Type 1a cover price variants that don't say Marvel or at least DC have yet to show any real pulse outside of key issues.

Interest is increasing in the five DC pence issues that exist from the early Bronze Age: Action #402 (7/71), Adventure #408 (7/71), Detective #413 (7/71), Flash #208 (8/71), and Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #139 (7/71). Action #402, Detective #413, and Flash #208 have Neal Adams covers, and the Flash issue is a 52-page Giant, so such books have attractive qualities beyond just being Type 1a variants, and can bring 300-400% Guide or more than cents editions. Interest is also increasing in DC pence editions published from March 1978 to September 1981, and such books often bring double Guide or more.

The fact that an Iron Man #55 (2/73) Type 1a pence cover price variant sold in late 2013 in CGC 9.4 for $2000 on eBay during the same time period that CGC 9.4 cents editions of Iron Man #55 in the same grade were bringing $1600 on average, which proves that collector recognition of what had previously been considered a foreign edition of lesser value can bring as much or more than a regular cents edition. Type 1a cover price variants will eventually have to have their own listings, or intermingled listings, and may well routinely exceed the prices for cents edition of key books due to scarcity. Collectors are now in hot pursuit of pence edition Marvel keys, such as Amazing Fantasy #15 (8/62), Amazing Spider-Man #1 (3/63) and Incredible Hulk #1(5/62), and some dealers currently advertise to acquire such books in the Overstreet Price Guide.

Dell Canadian and U.K. Type 1a cover price editions are being collected more, and currently sell at at a modest premium of 125-150% of standard cents editions. Western Publishing's Type 1a Canadian 75 cent cover price variants of 60 cent Whitmans from 1984 sell briskly at 300-400% Guide due to extremely low print runs, according to Doug Sulipa, who states that he has a waiting list for any copies in Fine Plus or better condition; it should be noted that alleged copies of 1983 Type 1a 75 cent Whitman variants do not exist. Whitman pre-pack comics dated 8-12/1980 are red hot sellers due to scarcity and bring $100-$500 or more in Very Fine or better condition. Some dealers have been trying to sell GD/VG copies of the 8-12/1980 Gold Key comics with asking prices of $500 to $1000, which is too much for the market to bear and discourages some collectors from pursuing such scarce books at all as they cannot afford to collect them or complete sets, and also collectors can get more bang for their buck elsewhere. That said, consider a different and more sensible sale, such as the ultra-scarce Black Hole #4 (9/80), the highest graded copy, selling in CGC 9.8 via Paypal for a stunning $6250 on 2/21/2014! Refer to my article, "The Whitman Mystery," in Comic Book Marketplace Magazine #85-86 (9-10/01) for the strange story behind what caused the scarcity of Gold Key/Whitman comics dated 1980-1984 and their untimely demise!

Early Marvel Direct Sale Editions are scarcer and sell for an average of 200-300% of regular newsstand editions according to Doug Sulipa; such books were sometimes erroneously referred to as "Marvel Whitmans" due to their simultaneous distribution in department and drug stores in Whitman bags. Early Marvel Direct Market Editions have a duality of purpose, and thus have the unique honor of being "special market editions" that required a secondary market to help justify the cost of their existence in smaller print runs. The Direct Sales market was in its infancy, and Marvel wanted to monitor retailers' return credits, hence the confusion surrounding the odd but necessary difference in appearance between such books and their newsstand counterparts. Short gaps in production occurred from 2/1977 to 5/1979, as it cost less for Marvel to roll the dice against bogus returns than over-produce books erratically purchased by chain retailers. All early Direct Market Editions were produced except for the cover dates 1-3/1978, 7/1978, and 3-4/1979, and such comics are primarily sought after by hardcore Marvel collectors and completists.

Collectibles, especially examples of killer comic books, have long been a hedge against inflation. Thoughtful buyers and speculative investors of comic books often enjoy a faster, higher return than slower liquid investments will ever provide. It's your choice to have fun, make money, or both collecting comic books. My advice? Collect what you love and sell your books while they are hot!

New Dimension Comics

Another year has flown past and the good folks at Gemstone Publishing have asked me to contribute my thoughts on the comic book marketplace for yet another edition of "the bible" of the comic collecting hobby! I am privileged to be given this chance to rant and I hope some of my insights are helpful or, at least, entertaining.

First, who the heck am I? 2016 marks my 30th year in the comic business. 30 years! I was flattered in chatting with an old pal (Henry from New England Comics) this past year and he recalled first meeting me as "the new kid" in the early 1990s. He chuckled about how his veteran peers enjoyed seeing my enthusiasm for having, by comparison, just gotten into the business. As an entrepreneur, there is very little in the way of reassuring or encouraging words. It meant the world to me when he said, "now look at you. I guess the new kid made it." With 5 stores in the Pittsburgh region and my 6th newly opened in Ohio in 2015, I guess I have done OK selling funny books. And I love it more than ever.

This past year was the most aggressive convention travel schedule I have ever tackled. Why? My top priority is to have fun. Visiting new places, enjoying the company of friends. And, I LOVE to buy comic collections. I often have collections to view just about anywhere I would travel. The cons themselves are also a blast. Lots of work and long hours, but the people are great. I was so inspired by this fantastic scene that I have decided to delve into the convention promoting world by hosting 3 Rivers Comicon in Pittsburgh, my first in May 2015.

While I believe it's my duty to this price guide to report on trends in my region, I certainly have experiences from my convention tour. I would often travel with a $3 stock, sometimes vintage books, sometimes hot Modern era, a marquee display of high end treasures. Some shows would see heavy activity in the $3 bins while others were justified just by selling a handful of pricey display books. An interesting and important point, I'd say about half of my sales are to other dealers. Being in western PA, which is not a hugely stimulated market, makes me price things conservatively. When I take them outside that zone, the city I'm visiting scoops them up quickly. And more insight to the leveling of my pricing strategy, I hardly ever sell vintage books online or through an auction house. I don't need to. I have 6 stores and a long list of clients hungry for quality books. This puts me in a strong position for buying as well. If I know a book is sold quickly, it's easy to pay a lot for it. Last year, I was on a hot streak and bought several major collections at the same time. I did something new. I picked a date and had a premiere of all of them on 1 day. This gave me a deadline to get them all processed and in addition to a swarm of my regulars, guys came in from 3 different states for the event. I'll be doing that again!

I want to elaborate on my $3 convention stock. We hand pick good stuff for it. I map out how many boxes fit into a convention set up and hold the line at that number. I wish we kept better track, but in the ongoing process of adding new arrivals (we keep these stocks sorted) as we traveled, I bet we went through 20-30 long boxes. Some customers bought a handful of books, some bought a few long boxes. I now have 4 separate stocks, varying in size, of $3 Gold/Silver/Bronze Age. I also have a stock of hot Modern comics at $3 each. It's tough to know what to bring to any given con. It's like gambling. You play your hand and see how you do. Some shows are suited more for vintage buyers, some only want the Deadpool. We keep saying one day we will just bring both and have a contest to see what does best.

Pressing. I have to admit that I don't know a lot about this, but I was taught that there are 3 things that kill a comic book. Heat, moisture, and light. Why would anyone want to intentionally apply 1 or 2 of these to a comic book? I have seen the examples of results. I get that it will yield a better looking book. But will it stand? Will it revert to its former wrinkledness over time? Will the popping gloss crack? Will the pages turn brittle quicker? Did the staples contract to cause issues on the spine? And worse, the prevailing opinion seems to be that pressing isn't something that needs to be disclosed. Are you kidding me? If I buy a car, I'd like to know what kind of work has been done to it. If I buy a comic book, I'd like to know if someone ironed out the water damage or cover dents.

Over the years, collecting comics has polarized. High grade stuff was always desirable, then grading services came along to squint that down even further. All those great looking books folks had in their collections came out to get a number assigned to them. Then the hunt was on, for some types of collectors, to get a copy that was .2 higher than their last copy. And now, maybe that copy will get an EVEN BETTER grade if it is pressed, cleaned, has its staples waxed, or some other such nonsense.

I have said this for years (in fact, in a market report here many years ago). People collect originality. First appearances, first issues. My point then was about restoration and how that has not been embraced by the comic book hobby as it has in many others. Which, is a crazy point. Comics have a million things that can be wrong with them and in need of repair compared to say a movie poster. But in the end, it's the acceptance of the marketplace. Comic collectors have yet to accept restoration. Maybe pressing will ease them into it. I know dealers/collectors who think restored books are a great investment because they will be more desirable in the future. Who knows.

My thought is that this will come full circle. There is nothing more exciting than a beautiful comic from an original owner collection. Original. Look at some of the classic examples of the early pedigree collections. Everyone knows those are gorgeous, unmolested copies and they command a huge premium for it. Now, I think the pedigree thing is a bit overdone now to the point it's not as special as it once was. This is just more polarizing. What can be done to add some sexiness to a comic book and keep the market rolling? Nothing says marketing better than branding. This reminds me of an old trend. I have seen/bought many vintage comics where the dealer who initially bought the collection made a certificate to accompany it stating its origin story and other notable attributes. All have stated they were from an exceptional, original owner collection and signed by the dealer. This might be the future. Great looking comics that you can feel confident have not been tampered with coming from a reputable source.

No matter what the trends or the next wave of change that comes to the comic hobby, remember this: collect what you love and love what you collect! Enjoy!

Miracle Comics

2015 was another great year in comics, especially in Bronze and Copper Age collecting. Last year I mentioned that Star Wars #1 CGC 9.8 regular cover had surged to near $800. In July 2015, the book topped out at $3,165 in CGC 9.8 but has now settled into the $1,800 range. I remember selling several CGC 9.8s just a few years ago for $350 in CGC 9.8. The book exploded with the announcement of the new movies. Star Wars #42 was a hidden gem a few years ago (1st Boba Fett and Yoda in comics). In 2013, the average price for a CGC 9.8 was around $250. In 2015, the book has more than doubled to an average of $550 in CGC 9.8 with room to grow.

I'm hoping for a Moon Knight movie which would continue to push up the price on Werewolf By Night #32. In 2014, the Guide price was $750 for NM-. The last sale of a CGC 9.2 NM- was $1,350. The book is extremely rare in CGC 9.8 with only 12 copies having been graded out of a total of 1,127 books. That's around 1 percent. The last sale of a CGC 9.8 was in October 2015 for $14,550. With that sale, it is currently selling for more than Incredible Hulk #181 in CGC 9.8. Copies in CGC 9.6 are also fetching great prices. The last sale of a CGC 9.6 was $3,850 in November 2015.

On the flip side, X-Men #94 and Giant-Size X-Men #1 have held steady but no big increases in value. X-Men #101, however, has sold very well and prices are up on that book in all grades. A CGC 9.8 copy sells for around $1,600 which is up from around $1,100 a year ago. Uncanny X-Men #266 has increased roughly 30 percent from last year. In my mind, the book is undervalued and is waiting for a Gambit movie appearance to double the price. The book has a massive CGC census which may affect the value. 1,543 copies have been graded in CGC 9.8 --- that's about 23% of the 6,824 total graded copies. For those who can afford it, the CGC 9.9 is potentially the best investment. It last sold for $3,228 in August of 2015 and only 14 copies have been graded in CGC 9.9.

Other notable Copper and Modern comics include Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1, Batman Adventures #12, and New Mutants #98. TMNT #1 still holds the Copper Age record for a CGC 9.8 at $14,938 in November of 2014. The book is really desirable in any condition. In August of 2015, a CGC 9.6 came up to market and sold for $8,010. Batman Adventures #12 had another huge increase. The average sale in 2014 was around $760. In 2015, the average sale was close to $1,800. Harley Quinn is such a popular character with both men and women and I think it is one of the reasons more woman are buying comic books than years past. This is increasing demand on the book substantially. New Mutants #98 remains incredibly popular with the Deadpool movie just around the corner. As of this writing, the book is selling for about $800 in CGC 9.8 and I would expect it to top $1,000 in 2016. Unlike many Modern comics, the book is solid on value in all grades: $420 in CGC 9.6; $370 in CGC 9.4; $320 in CGC 9.2; $290 in CGC 9.0. It wouldn't surprise me if the comic overtakes Amazing Spider-Man #300 in value in 2016 (in CGC 9.8). Amazing Spider-Man #300 in CGC 9.8 is currently selling for $940.

I have recently become a collector of Golden Age comics even though I'm considered a specialist in Copper and Modern Age comics. Golden Age comics (such as Batman and Superman) have set records in high grade but they are also selling for more than Guide price in "beat but complete" condition. Nothing is better than reading a Golden Age comic and smelling the pages.

Comic books and popular culture have now meshed and even the non-collector knows the major characters and some minor characters. Popular culture itself is now producing new comic book characters before they are in comics --- as in the case of Harley Quinn, who was a TV cartoon character before she appeared in Batman Adventures #12. The TV episode was called "Joker's Favor" and first appeared on September 11, 1992 which was a year before the comic came out in September of 1993. The same is true with Arkham Knight although, in his case, the comic was released in May 2015 and the game was released in June 2015. However, if there was no video game there would likely not have been an introduction of a new character since the comic was a prelude to the game. Batman: Arkham Knight #1 currently sells for around $35 in CGC 9.8.

I guess it's been reported that new books are down and have been down for three-quarters of a year. The Star Wars line at Marvel, on the other hand, is something that's succeeding and helping a lot of retailers' sales. Trade paperbacks and graphic novels have also been up – and that's helping to compensate for the overall decline in new comics sales.

DC Comics has had a fluctuation from the move with Convergence and then building up to Rebirth. With that, the readership cannot necessarily trust what they are reading now (at DC) because they are waiting for what's about to happen.

Back at Marvel, the delays in Secret Wars have made delays on its number one launches, which also put a hold on a lot of their line. Instead of the publisher releasing all of the number ones at one time like DC's 52 line did, they let them out a little bit here and a little bit there. A bunch of them were released in a week in October, which was a great week. Marvel dropped a lot of books – Iron Man #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1 . . . I think it was like five books that Marvel dropped all at one time.

Having said that, the week we are doing this interview is the same week that Black Panther #1 was shipped to retailers. I don't know – because I haven't finished evaluating it yet – but to me this book is selling as well as Amazing Spider-Man or any of them. This book was very highly anticipated and is selling wonderfully. I also understand that the book has sold out from the publisher.

So, (the majority of) new comic sales are down – and that hasn't happened for quite a while. In fact, some retailers are not doing as well because they don't know what to do. They may sell back issues or offer gaming – anything to compensate for the low new comics sales. They are also looking for other avenues in which to sell their comics, like online sales. But it has been very difficult.

Having said that, Valiant Entertainment is publishing good comics and have a start in Hollywood with a four-movie deal. And how do I know this? Well, top to bottom, Valiant has one of the best owner and sales team in the industry.

BOOM! is also publishing great comics like Lumberjanes, Strange Fruit, and Day Men. The publisher has a great line of comics that need to be stocked well by retailers for better-than-steady sales.

With that said, back issues still seem hot when it comes to the first appearance of a character or a memorable storyline – anything that people are remembering or going back to because there is a movie coming out or a TV show. Or, the comics were a big deal back then and collectors are reminiscing. The reader has matured – they're now 32 or 33 years old and they want their childhood back.

In addition, it's not that the interest in comics is down; it is that the product is down because there's nothing coming out – and that has certainly affected sales. I spoke to a retailer yesterday who is 350 miles away, and he said that he was down 25% from this time last year. That's a lot.

Variants are still selling. And I'm not one of the retailers who are saying that enough is enough. Variants have a strong place in the industry, and I'm not getting rid of them. And, the store variants we do ourselves, well, retailers just have to pick the right ones and they seem to work. Our recent one – Power Rangers – is probably the best-selling variant that the store has ever offered. I think I have sold more Power Rangers in the first five days than I have sold other titles. That's saying something.

As far as back issues, it is wonderful nowadays that books – like older DCs which I usually never sell – did. I just did a show in South Carolina, and I had a customer come up and buy a stack of *Rip Hunter*s. And boy, was I happy about that, because that wasn't happening before the TV show. Supergirls are red hot, Action #252s are red hot, and Flash is hot, among others. It's wonderful. Even Captain Cold appearances and covers are red hot.

Just like DC, Marvel comics are also selling well because of their link to Marvel Studios' blockbuster movies and hit TV series. From Silver Age to Modern Age, any title tied into a TV series or the movies sell quickly.

Back issues up from Golden Age to Modern Age books sell, and it's just like what you would think it is. It's speculation. And, it's also a great time right now for first appearances in '80s, '90s, and 2000 books – anywhere in that time period. That's just a small example of older books that are lying around in a collection for a bunch of years, and to most collectors, it was just another comic. Now, for some reason, that has nothing to do with them except that a character or characters were featured in a TV show.

With its ups and downs, the comics industry still seems bristling with creativity and grand ideas. Comics today could be considered going through growing pains – and retailers and publishers are more than ready to meet that challenge.

ComicLink is celebrating its 20th anniversary serving the comic book collecting community in 2016, and though it seems like when it comes to these market reports, we always say the same thing, we are pleased to report yet another robust year for ComicLink.com sellers, as aggressive buyers scooped up thousands of certified comic books to enhance their collections.

2015 was another year of handling exceptional material for consignors, with many eye popping results materializing on both the Comic Book Exchange and via ComicLink auctions. Buyers were very eager to add valuable comic books and related original artwork to their collections. This was a continuation of the trend of the past couple of years, where strength was exhibited across virtually every collecting genre. From Golden Age rarities of the 1930s and '40s, through the Silver Age keys of the late 1950s and early '60s, and right up to Bronze Age and Modern high grades, the bar was raised on record sales this year. Historically, it has seemed that as one era has risen in collector interest, another gets a little quieter. This has not been the case recently, however, with collectors eager to compete for quality examples published throughout virtually the entire time span encompassing the comic book hobby.

Demand is ever-present for comic books from the Silver Age genre. As usual, major Marvel and DC keys led the way in 2015 with exceptional results for several premiere and "1st app" issues achieved. There are way too many books transacting on ComicLink.com to list all of the exceptional results here, but here are some representative examples: Action Comics #252 CBCS 8.5 for $13,514 (first Supergirl), Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 9.0 for $200,000 and CGC 7.5 for $68,500 (first Spider-Man), Amazing Spider-Man #38 CGC 9.8 for $9666, Aquaman #1 CGC 9.4 Pacific Coast for $11,250, Avengers #1 CGC 9.4 for $125,000, Batman #181 CGC 9.8 for $13,250 (first Poison Ivy), Creepy #1 CGC 9.8 for $3166, Doctor Strange #172 CGC 9.8 for $5655, Fantastic Four #5 CGC 9.6 for $96,267 (first Dr. Doom), Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 6.5 for $33,120 and #5 CGC 9.6 for $34,501, Iron Man #1 CGC 9.8 for $8601, Journey into Mystery #54 CGC 8.0 for $2322 and #112 CGC 9.8 for $20,501 (Thor vs. Hulk), Showcase #4 CGC 5.0 for $14,750 (first Silver Age Flash) and #60 CGC 9.6 for $2011 (first Silver Age Spectre), Strange Tales #95 CGC 9.2 for $2988, Superman #199 CGC 9.6 for $8001 (first Flash vs. Superman race), Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.6 for $300,000 and CGC 9.0 for $43,333 (first Iron Man), Tales of Suspense #57 CGC 9.8 Northland for $33,567 (first Hawkeye), Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 9.0 for $47,678 (first Hank Pym/Ant-Man), Tales to Astonish #44 CGC 8.5 for $2850 (first Wasp), and Thor #126 CGC 9.8 for $20,805 and #165 CGC 9.8 for $10,000.

Major Golden Age runs and scarcities were also a focus for many of these buyers in 2015. Just a small sampling of record 2015 sales in this segment includes All Star Comics #8 CGC 2.0 for $20,472 (first Wonder Woman), Batman #2 CGC 9.2 for $62,000, Detective Comics #27 CGC 2.5 for $275,000 (first Batman) and a coverless CGC NG example for $29,011, Detective Comics #29 CGC 2.5 for $28,038, Detective Comics #38 CGC 6.0 for $35,233 (first Robin) and #61 CGC 9.6 for $11,751, Funny Pages #40 CGC 7.0 for $4650, Headline Comics #8 CGC 2.5 for $2600 (classic cover), Journey Into Mystery #21 CGC 8.0 for $2445, Mad #1 CGC 9.2 Gaines File Copy for $20,249, Marvel Family #1 CGC 9.4 for $27,529 (first Black Adam), More Fun Comics #73 CGC 6.5 for $67,000 and a CGC 5.5 for $52,566 (first Green Arrow and Aquaman), Phantom Stranger (1952) #1 CGC 7.0 for $7877, Sensation Comics #1 CGC 7.5 for $37,250, Strange Tales #9 CGC 9.0 for $2234, Sub-Mariner Comics #1 CGC 8.5 for $50,000, Superman #1 CGC 2.0 for $81,222, Superman #14 CGC 9.0 for $30,177, Tales from the Crypt #20 CGC 9.0 for $4600, Wonder Woman #1 CGC 6.5 for $34,00, and Wonderworld Comics #7 CGC 6.5 for $7323.

Scarcity and particularly scarcity in grade are key factors here with buyers extremely educated on the availability of these items and stepping up aggressively when they did come to market. The Golden Age market is also extremely cover driven right now and even at the lower end of the pricing spectrum a book with a stand-out cover can blow the doors off Guide prices when properly promoted.

Highlights of the Bronze and Modern eras were also found with the very top of the grading spectrum leading the way. Issues connected to upcoming Marvel and DC films projects drew serious attention with some issues leaping from the "dollar bins" into three and four figure territory in just a matter of months and established keys continuing to rise. Some standout sales included Albedo #2 CGC 9.8 for $4050 (first Usagi Yojimbo), All-Star Comics #58 CGC 9.8 for $3500 (first Power Girl), Captain America #217 CGC 9.8 for $1049 (first Quasar), Conan the Barbarian #1 CGC 9.8 for $5778, Detective Comics #411 CGC 9.8 for $6000 (first Talia and another 9.8 for $8007 at the start of 2016!), Hero for Hire #1 CGC 9.8 $11,360 (first Luke Cage), Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.8 for $16,055 (1st full Wolverine) and #340 CGC 9.9 for $2311, Iron Fist #14 CGC 9.6 Price Variant for $10,250, Iron Man #55 CGC 9.8 for $9000 (first Thanos), Marvel Feature #1 CGC 9.8 for $2912 (first Defenders), Marvel Premiere #1 CGC 9.8 for $4625, Ms. Marvel #1 CGC 9.8 for $1895 (first Carol Danvers as MM), Saga #1 CGC 9.8 Retailer Incentive Edition/Signature Series for $1628, Star Wars #1 CGC 9.6 Price Variant for $36,500, New Mutants #98 CGC 9.8 for $965, Where Monsters Dwell #6 CGC 9.8 for $1900, X-Men #76 CGC 9.6 for $4302, #79 CGC 9.6 for $4359, #107 CGC 9.8 for $3011, and more.

Original Comic Art continues to draw the attention of more and more collectors and this segment of ComicLink's business has been incredibly dynamic in the past few years. Just a few standout 2015 art sales include John Romita Jr's Amazing Spider-Man #238 cover with the first Hobgoblin appearance for $100,000, George Pérez's Justice League #217 cover for $80,000, Jack Kirby's page 2 of Avengers #1 for $48,000, a 1969 Frank Frazetta illustration for $47,000, Kirby's Captain America Annual #3 cover for $38,000, a John Romita Amazing Spider-Man #69 panel page for $37,000, Rich Buckler's Fantastic Four #167 cover for $37,500, Bob Layton's Iron Man #151 cover for $25,257, a Jim Starlin Warlock #15 panel page for $22,750, a Jack Kirby Silver Surfer #18 page for $21,305, a 1983 Gary Larson Far Side panel for $17,250, a John Buscema Conan #100 panel page for $15,250, a Keith Pollard Amazing Spider-Man #194 page for $13,250, a Paul Gulacy Master of Kung Fu splash for $12,250, a Frank Brunner Howard the Duck title splash for $11,361, and many more.

The first months of 2016 have already shown exceptional results across all eras with auction and Exchange sales such as X-Men #1 CGC 9.6 for $350,000, Fantastic Four #52 CGC 9.8 Curator for $90,000, Action Comics #7 CGC 2.0 for $71,000, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 CGC 9.8 for $22,500, Fantastic Four #48 CGC 9.8 for $17,027, Amazing Spider-Man #16 CGC 9.8 for $16,750, New Mutants #98 CGC 9.9 for $9201, and House of Secrets #92 CGC 9.6 for $9199, as well as Dick Sprang's Batman #30 cover art for $60,000, Dave Cockrum's Iron Fist #12 cover art for $28,000 and Michael Golden's She-Hulk #8 cover for $19,350, Dan Jurgens' Superman #74 page 8 (1st Doomsday meeting) for $17,150, and a Michael Turner Superman/Batman #13 double page splash for $12,100, just to name a few.

With results like these leading off the year, 2016 seems poised to be filled with many more record-breakers on ComicLink.com -- most exciting at the time of this writing, is the Action Comics #7 CGC 6.0 that was consigned to our upcoming May Featured Auction.

With two decades online serving buyers and sellers in the collecting community, ComicLink is the longest running and most established consignment service in the hobby. We are excited to see what the next 20 years brings! It does not seem like we can get enough material of quality to satiate our collector-investors so if you've got some, give us a call!

Top Notch Comics

Another year in the books as 2015 comes to a close here in early December. The comic book market was very strong with keys and first appearances leading the way with sales, and many books had strong increases. I feel that checklist collectors putting together long runs of titles is a soft market for dealers trying to move commons without discounting from Guide values.

The movie announcements continued to change the values of back issue comic books, especially first appearances of Heroes and Villains who are going to appear in future films and TV shows. One of the big announcements is an upcoming Suicide Squad movie that has brought out keys going back to the Golden Age: Batman #59 with the 1st Deadshot, Rick Flag in Brave and the Bold #25, El Diablo in All-Star Western (1970) #2, Slipknot in Fury of Firestorm #28, Killer Croc in Batman #357, Enchantress in Strange Adventures #187, Harley Quinn in Batman Adventures #12, Amanda Waller in Legends #1 and Katana in Brave and the Bold #200. We had a number of sales this year with these characters: Batman #59 CGC 6.5 for $3,000, Brave and the Bold #25 CGC 2.5 for $1,000, Fury of Firestorm #28 CGC 9.8 $75, Legends #1 CGC 9.8 $75, Batman #357 CGC 9.4 200, Batman Adventures #12 CGC 9.8 $2100 and $1850, Brave and the Bold #200 CGC 9.8 $200, Suicide Squad #1 1987 CGC 9.8 $400, CGC 9.6 $175, Suicide Squad #1 New 52 2011 CGC 9.8 $300, CGC 9.6 $150.

Let's talk about Batman books as Batman was my highest volume for sales by characters. The break out books continued to be the highest in demand. The first Mr. Freeze in Batman #121 (who originally was Mr. Zero) I sold a high grade CGC 9.0 copy for $12,000 along with a pedestrian copy in CGC 4.5 for $800. Batman #155, first Silver Age Penguin, in CGC 6.5 for $235. Batman #78 the first Roh-Kar the Man Hunter from Mars a highest graded CGC 7.5 for $1700 and a CGC 6.5 for $717. Batman #92, first Bat-Hound, a CGC 6.5 fetches $1050 and a CGC 4.5 at $700. Batman #171 the first Silver Age Riddler a CGC 6.5 for $365, CGC 5.0 for $225. Batman #181, the first Poison Ivy, a comic that has a poster insert which often is missing from the comic, so always check the centerfold for the light green poster of Batman and Robin. We sold several copies this year of the first Poison Ivy, a CGC 5.5 for $375, a 3.5 for $149.95 and a 2.0 for $99.95. Batman #189 the first Silver Age Scarecrow, we sold a CGC 9.4 copy for $900 and CGC 7.0 for $300. Batman #222, a Neal Adams cover featuring the Beatles, a CGC 8.5 copy sold for $200. Batman #227 is a Neal Adams cover swipe of Detective #31, and we sold several copies this year: a CGC 7.5 signed by Neal Adams for $325, and a 5.0 copy for $125. Batman #232 is the first Ra's al Ghul, and we sold a CGC 6.0 copy for $350 and a CGC 8.0 copy for $500. Batman #251 is a classic Neal Adams Joker cover and we sold quite a few copies this year. Leading the way was a White page CGC 9.8 for $4800 cash trade, CGC 9.4 for $1500, CGC 7.0 for $350, CGC 6.5 for $325, and a CGC 5.0 for $200. Batman #357 is the first Jason Todd, but the driver for this issue is the first appearance of Killer Croc who is going to be in the Suicide Squad movie. We sold a CGC 9.4 copy for $200. Batman #386 is the intro of the villain Black Mask, and we sold a CGC 9.8 copy for $250. Batman #400 is an anniversary issue with a large list of artists, and we sold a CGC 9.8 copy for $150 and a CGC 9.6 for $65. Batman #423 is a McFarlane cover, we sold a CGC 9.8 for $180 and a CGC 9.6 for $70. Batman #612 is a Batman/Superman issue we sold a first printing in CGC 9.8 for 125 and a #612 CGC 9.8 second printing for $115. Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #1 CGC 9.8 for $725, CGC 9.6 for $250. Batman: The Killing Joke spiked this year also, as we sold multiple CGC 9.8 copies at $200, and CGC 9.8 copies signed by Brian Bolland for $265, VF/NM for $49.95. Batman #1 the New 52 from 2011, we sold a CGC 9.8 copy for $275, a CGC 9.6 for $165, and a CGC 9.8 signed by Snyder and Capullo for $345.

Early Bronze keys are still very strong: Iron Man #55 Thanos, Incredible Hulk #181 Wolverine, Hero For Hire #1 Luke Cage, Marvel Preview #15 Iron Fist, Amazing Spider-Man #129 Punisher, House of Secrets #92 Swamp Thing and Giant-Size X-Men #1. These are all established keys, but they did see growth in virtually all grades. A book to watch for is a high grade copy of House of Secrets #92 I think it's a sleeper right now. Other picks are Marvel Premiere #1, and Forever People #1.

Let's go over some of the late Bronze books that have been strong sellers, as I believe the female characters will continue to have future growth. All Star Comics #58 is the first Power Girl, Amazing Spider-Man #194 first Black Cat, Marvel Spotlight #32 Spider-Woman, Ms. Marvel #1 Carol Danvers, Savage She-Hulk #1, and X-Men #101 first Phoenix. We sold an Amazing Spider-Man #194 CGC 9.8 signed by Stan Lee for $1150 and a CGC 9.0 for $150, Fine copy for $65, Good copy for $25. Ms Marvel #1 in CGC 9.8 for $1350. CGC 9.6 for $335, CGC 9.4 $175. Savage She-Hulk #1 CGC 9.8 $200 and CGC 9.6 for $100. X-Men #101 CGC 9.8 $1700, CGC 9.4 $475, CGC 9.0 $9.0 $250, CGC 8.0 $165.

One of the big break out sellers of the late Bronze this year has been Star Wars with the #1 first printing being the key. It is a common book in supply but the demand is just so strong with the franchise the buyers are there to soak up the copies as they come to market on venues like eBay. We sold 5 copies in CGC 9.8 this year between $1500-$2100 each, CGC 9.6s for $500-$575, CGC 9.4 for $300, CGC 9.2 $200, CGC 9.0 $175, CGC 8.5 $149.95, Very Fine minus $75, Fine $50, Very Good $35. The rest of the original Marvel Star Wars run is also very common in supply even the #107. The following books are in demand the #2 Chewy, #4 Vader cover, #42 Boba Fett, #68 and #81 with Boba Fett, the #3, #5, #6, #7, #8 and #9 get a little more collector interest, along with Empire Strikes Back run of #39-44, and the final issue of #107.

Copper books from the 1980s and early 1990s continued to show growth with keys and first appearances. The blue chip leaders are Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1, New Mutants #98, and Amazing Spider-Man #300. A second level of keys are New Teen Titans #2 Deathstroke, DC Comics Presents #26 Teen Titans, Uncanny X-Men #266 Gambit, X-Factor #6 Apocalypse, Secret Wars #8, New Mutants #87 Cable, Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #1, Amazing Spider-Man #238 Hobgoblin, #252 Black Costume, Sandman #1 Morpheus, Sandman #8 Berger Variant.

Modern books from the 1990s have several big books that are very collectable, Batman Adventures #12 first Harley Quinn and Preacher #1. Superman: The Man of Steel #18 the first appearance of Doomsday has a high supply his cameo in #17 will sell for more as the supply is signifiigantly smaller on the market. Carnage has strong demand with the first appearance in Amazing Spider-Man #361 leading the way. Some sales: Batman Adventures #12 CGC 9.0 $500, Preacher #1 CGC 9.8 $800, CGC 9.6 $325, Superman: The Man of Steel #17 CGC 9.8 $200, CGC 9.6 $100, VF+ $35, Superman: The Man of Steel #18 CGC 9.8 $115, CGC 9.6 $49.95, VF+ $15, and Amazing Spider-Man #361 CGC 9.8 $200, CGC 9.6 $100, VF+ 8.5 $35.

The Walking Dead* #1 continues to be the Blue Chip book of the past 15 years.

The Walking Dead #1 continues to be the Blue Chip book of the past 15 years, and we sold several copies of the #1. The keys after issue #1 are, #2, #3, #4, #19, #27 has gotten soft, #48, #53, #61, #92, and now the #100 is picking interest with the first appearance of Negan. I sold several copies of the #1 a CGC 9.8 green label which had an unauthorized signature on the cover, for $1750, a CGC 9.6 signed by Kirkman brought $1650.

In conclusion, the comic shows are still growing, the back issue market is still growing for keys and first appearances, and a solid portion is movie driven. I don't see anything that would indicate a slow down is on the horizon.

The market, the market, THE MARKET! These are crazy times. The market steering crazy courses! Sales charts and arrows going all over the place! Deadpool and Thanos living together! MASS HYSTERIA! Market volatility like we've never seen before.

This is our 18th year in operation as a store. At the convention level we've been selling off and on going back to the mid-1970s. Back then this market was relatively new and exciting in its rookie seasons. I'm seeing similar newness with competing grading companies, an emphasis on Copper to Modern Age comics, the crush of TV/movie emphasis and yet another generation reaching its productive years with some extra cash at hand.

Unless you are an Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide first-timer you know where this report is going. Actually, none of you readers may be first-timers. It's tough to find Guide novices…It seems too many of the customers I encounter are familiar with the book but only use Overstreet to look at the Near Mint value on their copies of VG and Fine comics. The rest of this book is a complete mystery to so many people, especially the pages on grading instructions. The others don't use this book at all. Those comic customers have even stopped lamenting the absence of Wizard magazine for their almost whimsical back issue price guide (the magazine ceased print in 2011 leaving the newsstands void of back issue pricing, inaccurate as it often was). At least with Wizard's monthly schedule, buyers could get a real-time feeling for the ups and downs of comic book pricing.

We all understand the variety of options we have for pricing, with various internet sites offering large numbers of titles and issue numbers displaying price points to either believe or disbelieve. Competing sites that offer validated sales prices for encapsulated comic books help us round up or down to dollar figures we dealers can justify. High grade raw copies are a slightly tougher class of comic books to attach real-time sales prices.

I prefer to stay with Overstreet's 9.0 and 9.2 prices on non-key comics. Some of my customers do not. Unquestionably they can find sources for high grade, raw comics that are cheaper than The Guide. I can live with that since I feel those Overstreet price tiers are about as accurate as the market can be.

But are they?

Would any collector pay Overstreet prices for NM- common back issues? Say Silver Age or newer? I can answer that by comparing several comic book pricing options. Before deciding how to go with this I opted to skip key comics in my search. That market has been scanned to death and needs no further input from me. To do this project I searched for the NM- price for one random Silver Age comic: Tales of Suspense #90. This particular issue of this title has little or no chance of being a key book. It would be beyond the speculator craze and would reside in their natural, obscure habitat. It is also a comic that is unlikely to generate any uptick in future value.

I plugged "Comic Book Price Guides" into Google "Search" to find a comprehensive list of pricing structures that would yield the results I needed for my search criteria for Tales of Suspense #90. I wanted something in high grade but clearly defined by each guide so I chose Near Mint minus as the grade tier. That was as high as Overstreet went and seemed like a universally-complicit grade.

I started with Overstreet 2015 since it's easy and handy, plus it's accepted by most everyone as the granddaddy of comic book pricing.

Overstreet lists the 2015 value for TOS #90 in NM- at $105. No complicated explanation for that number, just extrapolation on prices from years past. Next I looked for paper-published guides from other sources. Krause Publications and Wizard ceased print years ago so no dice there. Next, I clicked on-line links through sites I've heard about. Those sites breakdown as follows (they will remained unnamed because I'm not here to promote or denigrate anyone. I just wanted to figure out who else has a decent sense of pricing):

Site #1 had a corrupted server and was unable to process registration. Learning their price structure required member registration.

Site #2 used what they called an "eBay analyzer" so eBay was their pricing go-to. I searched for TOS #90 in NM- and found an eBay store listing an ungraded copy of TOS #90 priced to sell for $100. Although that price is close to Overstreet, there was no associative grade listed. I linked to more information for that particular issue and landed on copies offered up by customers signed up to sell through the provider. The phrase "Remember, a comic is only worth what someone is willing to pay for it" was printed on many of the pages I visited. I rolled the phrase over in my mind a couple of times and realized it was a metaphor for everything in a consumer's life (example: gas is only worth 25 cents a gallon to me). In reality a comic is only worth what several people are willing to pay for it over time or else the hobby stops dead in the water. But I digress.

Site #3 priced coins and comics. They produced prices for many titles including TOS. I located a rail of prices for #90 beginning at Good and ending at Mint. The lower grades roughly matched Overstreet and continued to closely match grades up to VF. VF was the last tier they utilized and then it went straight to NM. I checked their prices for VF and NM, did some math to extrapolate a NM- price that may or may not follow their algorithm and ended up with a price tag of $165 for a NM- TOS #90. That's a pretty friendly price. I rechecked to see how I got there. VG was roughly twice GD but FN was just a bump over VG. Now I gathered that these were eBay-based sales numbers because those differences are similar to what I've gotten on eBay with raw copies of similar TOS comics. FN and VF were impossible numbers for me to achieve for raw copies on eBay so this site lost me.

Site #4 is actually a human brain - John Seeburger. John's an associate of Bob Storms (somewhere advertising in this book) and a pretty savvy guy when it comes to pricing comics from the past 30 plus years without a written guide. He can wing the price on an apparent NM+ copy of New Mutants #98 on eBay like nobody's business. But my TOS challenge defeated him. His solution was either Overstreet or GPA.

Site #5 is GPA. GPAnalysis follows CGC graded comics sales, period. The figures they post are taken from public auctions they track and member solicitations. There may be more sources I'm unaware of. They provide comprehensive charts and graphs of sold CGC comics with data readily available for three years with data going back to 2002 (the beginning of their site). Simple to use, extravagant in its scope.

My reality is that I use GPA for some comics whether they are slabbed by CGC (also CBCS) or not. It's also a good place to price raw books by comparison, especially in grades greater than CGC's NM- 9.2 tier (their highest trademarked Guide tier). GPA records eBay sales so any other site may be redundant unless I'm only targeting the eBay seller's experience. With records of sales in 9.4 and higher I'm able to see what's possible for my high-grade inventory. If it's encased, it's a no-brainer. If it's a raw book, I can look at a comparable encased price, deduct the third-party submission cost and price it accordingly.

Site #6 provided eBay sales stats retooled for a different search method.

Site #7 was actually three sites; Heritage Auctions, ComicConnect and ComicLink. All three maintain archives of their previous comic book sales. Their frequent auction sales make them handy for researching even the most obscure titles. Heritage recorded a TOS #90 NM- sale in 2012 for $62. Probably better than eBay but well below Overstreet.

Site #8 covered a wider array of collectibles. They gathered stats on the prices of coins and stamps, as well as comics. Their homepage stated that they gather prices for these items from dealer price lists, advertisements in dealer publications and auctions. I wasn't sure if these were achievable prices or dealer wish prices. No reliable TOS #90 sales info.

Site #9 is similar to Site #8. Statistics for comic book prices are researched using eBay and Amazon. Same TOS #90 problem.

Site #10 would have been the venerable Krause

Publications' Comic Book Price Guide. Krause, publisher of the Comic Buyer's Guide produced a comic price guide up until 2010. Overstreet was always a dominant guide but Krause could fill in a few blanks. Krause produced its weekly (then monthly) Buyer's Guide but that ceased publication in 2013. There was plenty of good information and articles that offered more depth (from my point of view) than Wizard magazine.

Site #11 offered an app for CGC sales prices at random grades. No raw, unslabbed TOS #90 data.

Site #12. This site collates CGC and CBCS sales figures. The link to their site provides an entire page to one title and Issue number. They offered twelve samples that viewers could "test drive" before registering. It's a pretty nifty site. No raw TOS #90 in NM- and the trending rate for a graded copy is about $74, below Overstreet in raw. The monthly subscription was not over the top and they provide images of the actual item. There are websites out there that still only provide generic pictures of their sales items.

Site #13: Me. I've had many on-again, off-again and then on-again years grading/pricing comics; 20+ consecutive years this go-around and ample business opportunities. So, I have a good grasp on what people will pay for back issues.

Conclusively, I use a "triangle" of sources to pin down the price on a key, topical, in-demand comic I want to sell. The points of the triangle remain Overstreet, GPA and my experiences. Obviously, GPA is an umbrella of other sources while Overstreet has decades of progressive sales increments to either believe or not. To be fair, no buyer wants to pay CGC/CBCS prices for a raw comic book. But giving GPA its due keeps the pricing near the high end where all the key books reside. BTW, I've met no purchase resistance to CGC over CBCS, or vice versa.

During the research phase for this report I reviewed random Modern era comic's sales. The information gleaned from our curiosity reflects the comic book marketplace, though not for all readers of The Overstreet Guide.

Now, I've never been a proponent of investing in variant covered comic books. I don't believe they are the "wave of the future" for collectors casting eyes upon prospective profits. Many copies can be redeemed for profit if purchased cheaply and sold quickly. I have yet to validate the story that they go up in value for the long game.

My employees and I did a little profiling of 2013-2015 published titles looking for trends in the sales of variants. What we found was a litany of new comics with GPA sales that flat-lined, ran stagnant, trended downward or seemed to be replaced by the next hot title variant. We amassed a list of titles that came out new in the past two years. They were heavily publicized and through my store we felt the wave of fanboy excitement over the following list of titles. The list was drawn from titles that saw a greater amount of demand for variants through our store and a lot of fan scrutiny. Our plan was to map the trajectory of sales for variants for number one issues for each title. These are all CGC graded 9.8 copies. Almost to a title the variants showed downward trends in value with the exceptions of sketch covers. Those bits of rare, original art aimed at fans often hold value or increase. Unfortunately, they reside in a lonely place at the top for overall variant investment wealth.

We started with a few hot Image titles. Image captures fan attention each month with new series all hoping to catch fire. We looked for recent sales numbers that reflected and upward tick in value:

Shutter #1 - All variants, signed or otherwise flatlined with none reaching value over the individual costs of submission to grading.

Wytches #1 - Basically everything went down. Signed variants that booked for high dollar values either stalled or went down.

Sex Criminals #1 - With a few exceptions the various copies either stayed the same or dropped.

The Wicked and The Divine, Rat Queens, Peter Panzerfaust, Pretty Deadly #1 - All three titles trended down in the same fashion. Generally, no money to be made and steadily dropping.

Outcast #1 - Flat or down. Same as East Of West #1.

The Walking Dead #100 - As vibrant as any new hot Image title, WD #100 is gradually moving up the sales charts in many variant categories. Lots of up arrows for the sub-$100 copies of just a few months ago. Also, a ton of CGC submitted copies. Whether it's because it presents a new character just cast for the TV show (Negan) or a perennial issue in demand, WD #100 shows sales of signed variants going up, going down or staying put. Based upon the sheer number of GPA WD #100 records, I would be surprised if a Walking Dead fan did not already own a copy.

Onto other companies…

Convergence #1- DC's big game-changing series. Awful sales, a real pungent storyline. Bad variants. The better variants trended as flat or failing.

Boom's Jem And The Holograms #1 - Went nowhere.

How about Valiant? (with their major motion picture studio contract drawing lots of immediate fan attention). Ninjak #1- Very few variants were submitted for grading, with those that were either stalled or lost ground. Nobody jumped on board with Bloodshot except for one, lone Chinese variant.

Marvel's variant requests at our store are greater in numbers than anything the other companies produce. Customers just prefer Marvel which includes all things Star Wars. Speaking of which, Star Wars (2015) #1- There had to be a hundred 9.8 listings on GPA for every kind of variant and signature combination. Quite a few entered the market, sold once and never resurfaced. Most variants had stopped or dropped in value. Few non-Signature Series variants had risen above the costs involved in third-party grading if the copies were submitted individually. Except for the most obscure, difficult-to-locate, CGC SS comic there seemed to be little purpose in paying the current prices for these books. Expect those numbers to continue to drop.

Two hotties (titles and ladies) from 2015 that kept Facebook people on the hunt were Silk and Spider-Gwen with twin #1s. Both produced a sizable variety of variant and signed opportunities. Both titles trended nowhere as in sales figures never matured after initial releases. The market lands flat by December 2015 with many of the variants showing a 90-day drop. The same is true of the All-New Thor with a female version. If the numbers were not dead even with previous sales, they had dropped.

Finally, Marvel's return to the title Secret Wars was a better read than DC's ultra-contrived Convergence. That's a shame because many of DC's ongoing series are more entertaining to me in late 2015 than Marvel. Secret Wars altered characters for a new direction, changing characters timelines or universes. Marvel's studio politics destroyed the Fantastic Four, tossed mutants and Inhumans in together and threatened Fox Studios with a cessation of future mutant characters to bring to theaters. From my point of view Secret Wars seems more public then secret.

Secret Wars #1 - Like all DC/Marvel big event titles they only run for a handful of issues. Once done the readers tend to move on leaving resale and variants in the dust (let's see what happens with Dark Knight III!). By early December 2015, Secret Wars was still two issues away from finishing this delayed series. Already, the variants and signed series stuff for #1 are tanking. It's not good people.

My motto for people that ask me for collecting advice remains "Buy what you like. Buy what you can afford". Can you afford to take a loss? I own a smattering of Marvel keys and seven Amazing Fantasy #15s. Those are the true investment books with collecting legacies going back forty plus years. The customers that ask if they can make offers are young enough and in such numbers to validate owning such comics for years to come. I still preach and will continue to preach that investing in the past is viable, more sustaining and will continue for years.

This report focuses on the convention and mail order aspects of comic collecting. Sales from 2014 to 2015 have been very strong. Crowds are larger than ever at many established conventions; sadly the percentage of attendees at most shows tend to be less interested in comic books than other pop culture. There are exceptions, such as Baltimore ComicCon, CalComicCon and Big Wow Comic Fest.

Golden Age (1938-1945): Golden Age keys continue to be a good investment. For investment, I recommend looking for obscure characters that have a chance to be reintroduced in comics, TV shows or movies. Demand for these major keys continues to grow because supply is so small. Even secondary titles such as Green Lantern and Flash Comics are requested more often. That said, at most conventions it is no longer worth the effort to bring any Golden Age at all as few serious collectors of this material bother to go to shows anymore because of the hassle. Sales of note: Captain America Comics #1 CGC 3.5 restored $18,500, #16 GD+ $1600, Donald Duck Four Color #9 VG/FN $2100, Planet Comics #20 FN/VF $700, and Cat-Man Comics #20 PR cfo $600.

Atom Age (1946-1955): Still a largely un-appreciated area of collecting that many dealers group with Golden Age. Some collectors are starting to pay quite high prices to find these in higher grade, while very few books from this era are above Very Good condition. Teen and humor titles are selling well with most titles having interesting art and stories. I recently located a Meet Merton #4. I never saw one before in all my years as a dealer. Sales of note: Mystic #18 CBCS 7.0 $3000, Weird Mysteries #5 VG+ $2375, Venus #18 GD/VG $1700, and Crime SuspenseStories #22 VG- $650.

Silver Age (1956-1970): Sales of early Marvel Keys have slowed down possibly because the prices, even in lower grades, have become too expensive for the average collector. That said, minor keys of lesser value comics have been selling quite well. Some of these are Avengers #57, Amazing Spider-Man #41 and #50, Iron Man #1, Fantastic Four #45 and #46, Silver Surfer #1 and #4 as well as X-Men #12, #28 and #50. Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, Incredible Hulk #1, Journey into Mystery #83 and Tales of Suspense #39 are still in high demand in any grade and they are hard to acquire at a price that allows for a quick sale. For DC Silver, Batman is selling well, especially books with appearances by the Riddler, Joker and Catwoman. DC keys are still selling well but not as fast as most Marvels. All the Avengers have had really good sales due to the box office success of their characters. Captain Atom #83, the 1st reintroduction of Blue Beetle is a comic to watch. Some sales of note: Amazing Fantasy #15 PGX 4.0 $10,500, Amazing Spider-Man #1 CGC 2.0 $2300, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 6.5 $20,000, Journey into Mystery #83 CGC 6.0 $6400, Blue Beetle (1964) #1 CGC 9.6 $4200, Strange Tales #110, CBCS 7.5 $6400, Daredevil #2 CGC 9.4 $9600, Batman #181 VF/NM $1000, Andy Griffith Four Color #1252 VG+ $325, and Konga #24 NM $200.

Bronze Age (1971-1985): Incredible Hulk #181 and Amazing Spider-Man #129 are still two of the best selling Marvel keys. Daredevil #168 has become a high demand comic. While I can make a very long list of Bronze Age keys to watch, I recommend getting as many of these as you can while they are still affordable. Some of my favorite picks are Defenders #1 and #4, Champions #1, Kamandi #1, and always a favorite, Conan #24 (1st full Red Sonja). Almost every comic from this era is affordable for the average collector, and some of the best art and stories are contained in them. Other good sellers were Tomb of Dracula #10, Swamp Thing #1, Werewolf by Night #32, Marvel Spotlight #5, and Ghost Rider #1. Some sales of note: Iron Man #55 CGC 9.6 $3000, Giant-Size X-Men #1 CGC 9.6 $2500, Green Lantern #76 CGC 9.2 $2200, Forever People #1 NM- $255, Shazam! #28 NM- $250, and Spectacular Spider-Man #64 PGX 9.6 $200.

Magazines: Magazines were mostly sold through the mail as we're rarely bringing many to shows due to their bulkiness and low show demand. Some of the titles we sold were Epic Illustrated, Marvel Preview, Savage Sword of Conan, Planet of the Apes and some Skywald magazines like Psycho and Nightmare. We sold quite a few Fanzines such as Rockets Blast ComicCollector and Graphic Story World with wonderful artwork in them. Some magazines that are sleepers are Creepy #1, Eerie #17, Deadly Hands of Kung-Fu #1, Savage Sword of Conan #1 and Vampirella #1 & 3. Sales: Blazing Combat #1 FN $225, Vampirella #3 FN/VF $135, Psycho #20 NM- $90, Mad Magazine #24 CGC 8.5 $320, Confessions Illustrated #1 CGC 9.2 $240, Graphic Story World #14 NM- $135, Marvel Comics Super Special #1 FN/VF $100, and Legion of Monsters #1 CGC 9.4 $250.

Modern Age & Independents (1986-Now): New Mutants #98 and Amazing Spider-Man #300 and Batman Adventures #12 are three of the best selling comics from any era. New Mutants #87, Amazing Spider-Man #261 and X-Men #266 are also good sellers. This era contain a seemingly infinite amount of Independent titles, so I could not even speculate on what the next hot title or character will be. We have done well with Preacher, Hellblazer and Aliens. Sales of note: John Byrne's Next Men #4 NM+ $125, Invincible #1 CBCS 9.6 $250, New Mutants #87 CBCS 9.6 $200, Batman Adventures #12 VF+ $400, Albedo #2 CBCS 5.5 $700, Harley Quinn #1 CGC 9.8 $150, Batman: Harley Quinn nn CBCS 9.4 $250.

Graded Books: Most of our graded comics sales are done online in our eBay store. This has been a very good year for these sales as most of our highest sales all year were graded comics. This is still the best way to sell high grade/high value comics. While there are currently three companies that offer this grading service, they all have strong and weak points. CGC (the first) still gets the highest prices on a regular basis, but their services are the most expensive and they have the longest lead-time. Newcomer CBCS has several strong points (such as Signature Verification), and a much better website interaction that offers additional services such as pre-screen and images available for every comic you submit. Turnaround time and pricing are comparable to CGC. The other company to offer this service is PGX, and while they are not overly popular with many collectors, they do have a couple of things going for them - they are the fastest and most affordable. So if quick turn around and budget are a priority, give them a try. Their drawbacks are: no corporate sponsor and no office to do business in. Sales: Brave and the Bold #58 CBCS 9.6 $1200, X-Men #1 PGX 5.0 $300, Fantastic Four #26 CGC 9.4 $3200, Tales to Astonish #27 CBCS 4.0 $2300, Teen Titans #1 CGC 9.4 $2000, Daredevil #1 CBCS 6.5 $1550, Freak Brothers #1 CGC 8.5 $450, Gunsmoke Western #60 CBCS 7.5 (John Severin copy) $270, Iron Man #1 CGC 9.2 $1125, Captain America Comics #4 PGX 1.0 $1000.

Internet Sales: Orders for comics listed on our website are placed by phone or email request as we do too many conventions to keep our listing completely up to date. We had a great year with internet sales between our website and eBay store. We get a lot of requests for scans, but we cannot accommodate all the requests and get anything else done. We will send scans for items over $100 and offer a 30-day unconditional return on all sales. Our eBay store has been producing steady sales of CGC books. You can find most of our entire inventory at www.Terryscomics.com.

One area that did not go well was a group of some very nice comics that we consigned to a couple of auction houses. Most but not all went for less than half of my original asking price. I am not talking about low grade comics nobody wants, but high grade keys and great Golden Age comics. I will say that the auction houses did their part in trying to promote these books, but toward the end of 2015, people appeared to be cautious about spending money with all the things happening in the world. Just a reminder: whenever you consign comics to auctions with no reserve, you are rolling the dice that two or more people are looking at that auction during that particular window of time in which your item is being offered.

In summary, while the economy may be in a lull, demand remains strong for high grade comic books that have given collectors a better return than most other forms of investment. So for those of you collectors who say your spouse would kill you if you bought this or that comic, just explain that it is a great investment. Keep looking for those sleepers and try to read a few comics now and again, and don't forget that this was the original idea behind this hobby.

Michael Pavlic
Purple Gorilla Comics

Greetings from Calgary! Living in a city whose economy is very dependent on the oil industry is to live in extremes. We can go from high wages and employment shortages to mass layoffs of thousands of people in as little as 12 months. Even though there's a popular expression around here "Dear God, please let there be another oil boom! I promise not to piss it all away again!" we Albertans never really seem to learn. Times are tough again. Just means we have to work harder.

So how did the collapse in oil prices affect my tiny part of the economy? Apparently, not that much. While there were a few months that I found "not too groovy", overall sales were consistent with last year's. As always Marvel dominated my sales, but this year even more so. The only DC book that gets any love now is Flash. Even good old dependable Batman is suffering in sales.

Marvel Comics: Marvel is the powerhouse, the reason I keep the lights on. Anything Avengers and Avengers-related, like character solo books, are very popular. Deadpool is insanely in demand, we all know that the price of New Mutants #98 has gone through the roof, I'm able to sell X-Force #2 for $45, no problem. And the first series or the first two mini-series are strong sellers, Circle Chase #1 sells quickly at $75. Carnage is the most popular comic character not associated with a TV or movie project, and his first appearance, Amazing Spider-Man #361 has held firm at $150 while ASM #362 and 3#63 are solid $45 books. Speaking of Spidey, well, selling Spidey is the easiest thing in the world to do. I sell the Todd McFarlane Spider-Man #1s for $20 all the time. Good thing they're so plentiful! Do I need to mention the old Marvel Star Wars sell? No, no I don't.

DC Comics: Like I said earlier, DC just ain't moving. If I could get any, I'd sell a ton of Harley Quinn, but I can't, so I don't. The Flash TV show has translated into comic sales, unlike Arrow (or Daredevil for that matter). As for Batman, only the key books or things like Year One, Year Two, Dark Knight Returns and The Killing Joke sell with any frequency. Any Joker appearance still moves though.

Independents: Aliens, Predator, and AVP are scorching hot. It used to be I could only sell these titles as sets, but it's become increasing hard to get complete mini-series of those titles. Spawn still sells and sells well. Spawn #1 is a $30 book and I sell at least two a month. Other Image titles that do well: The Maxx and Pitt. Nobody cares about any of the other old school Image titles. Horror comics, especially tied into movies are popular and move quickly, at 2x Guide. Any EC reprints of Tales From The Crypt start at $10 each. TMNT is still a good seller, although lately it's getting harder to replace stock.

Undergrounds: I bought an amazing collection of early Underground comix, many first or second printings of such titles as Zap and Freak Bros. They sold very quickly at 2x Fogel Guide (which needs to come out with more frequency, Dan!). These were some of the nicest copies of Undergrounds I've ever seen. Usually I get copies with hash burns or beer bottle rings on the covers!

Silver and Bronze Age: Very strong sales for comics in this era. I bought a collection of Amazing Spidey that went from issues #10-200 (not complete, but close!) and everything below issue #50 was sold within the month at 1.5x Guide, as well as every key book below #200. I could have jacked those prices higher, but I got them for a good deal and passed the savings onto my customers. Any Marvel hero book from the 1960s rarely lasts a month, less if it's a key book. My Avengers #1 (grade of 1.5) sold in a week and a half for $700. DC Silver and Bronze sell better than their modern equivalents, Superman is more popular than Batman(!), JLA and Wonder Woman also sell briskly, but the second and third tier titles (eg. Doom Patrol, Jimmy Olsen, Adventure, Superboy) take longer to find good homes for them. Dell and Gold Key Westerns are huge and move quickly at Guide price. There is a demand for Charlton Horror comics, especially with Ditko or Sutton art. Romance comics also sell well, especially DC Romance. Classics Illustrated move quickly, any grade, any printing.

All Ages Comics: I feel it is extremely important for the comic industry to grow the next generation of...well...US. I'm pushing 50 years old and I'll bet that many of us Advisors are as well, if not older. I'll also be that most of us got into this crazy world of comics between the ages of 8-12. What is there today for this age group? Not much. So I decided to take all the Gold Key, Harvey and anything else that was kid friendly that I had priced at $3-8 and drop it to $2. Since the new Disneys from IDW are at least $5 Canadian, I felt it was important to have cheap and good comics to "indoctrinate" the youngsters. So far this has been very successful, so much so that I've added $3 "well-loved" Silver and Bronze Age boxes to the mix. The $3 boxes have all publishers and all genres mixed in. Of course Marvel Hero books move, but the Gold Key Mystery books fly out at $3 as well as any Westerns. Retailers, think of the long term health of our industry, get those kids reading comics!

I would like to thank the folks at Overstreet for giving me this platform to yap about comics. I'd also like to thank my customers, my pals Sgt. Erock, Dave from Amazing Fantasy in Red Deer, Ben, Kyle and Martin from Phoenix Comics and Doyle. It's still your fault, Doyle! Oh and I want to especially thank my Mom, who drove me all over town looking for comics when I was 12. I wouldn't be half the Nerd I am today without her.

Greg Reece & Alex Reece
Reece's Rare Comics

Greg Reece - Somehow 2015 was busier than 2014 which we thought couldn't be busier than 2013. To that end, as you read this market report, Austin (some of you from Baltimore will remember him as he helped me out at that show when we were part time years ago) will join his brother Alex in helping us run the business. We are also making a small change to the name of the business from "Greg Reece's Rare Comics" to "Reece's Rare Comics". I never imagined we'd get so busy as to need 3 full time people. To be able to work with my sons is a dream come true (well most of the time anyway :) Look for continued upgrades to our website, which just passed 7,000 listings, (www.gregreececomics.com).

The question I get asked the most, by far, is what book(s) do I think will go up in value. That gets harder and harder each year as previously undiscovered books get hot and while they may fall some after the initial buzz, they rarely present the bargain they were pre-announcement (Movie, TV show, etc.) That said, here goes:

Amazing Spider-Man #1: While Amazing Fantasy #15 has racked up gains of 40%+ across almost every grade, ASM #1 has languished for the last 4-5 years, showing just a 10% increase over that period of time across most grades. I expect the gap between AF #15 and ASM #1 to tighten some in the coming years as it becomes a relative bargain compared to other Silver Age Keys. I'd expect this book to increase across all but the lowest of grades. As with all of my recommendations, purchase clean (no writing, no pull date, no diagonal mis-wrap) well centered, attractive copies.

X-Men #1: Arguably Marvel's most successful franchise (and in anyone's top 2), this is another super key that has fallen (relative to other Silver Age keys) flat in recent years. I'd focus on 6.0+ copies for this particular issue.

Daredevil #1: This once dormant issue (yes even #1s were slow to move) received a much needed shot in the arm from the critically acclaimed Netflix series. With season 2 already showing, it seems likely Daredevil could have a multi year run in millions of homes. If fans own only 1 Daredevil issue, it will be this one. It is still an affordable Silver Age Marvel key and I like it in all grade ranges.

Amazing Spider-Man #20: Total shot in the dark but if the Scorpion gets announced in a Movie/TV show, this issue is old enough to get a serious bounce if it happens. I'd be looking for 7.0s - 9.6s for the best ROI as 9.8s are already bid up by the whales for their registry sets.

Avengers #9: This seems more like a case of when, not if. Wonder Man is perfect for the big screen. I think this book would rise across all grade ranges if it happens.

Incredible Hulk #181: You're not going to see a 50% return here but with banks paying 1%, this blue chip Bronze Age key that churns out annualized 10% returns year after year looks extremely attractive. We rarely keep a copy more than a few weeks whereas even a few years ago we normally had 3,4 and even 5 copies to choose from. This is not a rare book, not in any grade, so it suggests to me the book is being actively hoarded. Perhaps as much as any other book, collectors are unwilling to part with their under copy. Next time you're at a major trade show, count how many are on the walls and compare that to what you saw 5-7 years ago.

Amazing Spider-Man #129: Read everything I wrote about Incredible Hulk #181. Rinse, repeat.

Special Marvel Edition #15: The Master Of Kung Fu has a cult like following and with its black cover, defects are readily shown. A more speculative play than some of the others, so tread cautiously. Look for 9.4+ copies.

Show Reports

Wizard, New Orleans: For all of the flak Wizard takes, this is a show they get right. Scheduling in January whereby dealers can get in out of the cold as well as showcase all of their new inventory (most haven't done a show in 3 months) is why this show is a success. Don't get me wrong, I love the music, food, and the people (you just won't meet nicer folks, across the board) but I am not down there if it's held in the middle of con season.

Wonder Con, Los Angeles: The toggling of location seems to have derailed this show from all it could be. There is no doubt a vibrant vintage collector core base in and around LA but the layout of the room left something to be desired. We will head back there next year and are hoping they find their rhythm.

MegaCon, Orlando: This used to be a show we went to for fun and if we sold something great. In the last 6 years it has morphed into a giant and is now always in our Top 5 shows for the year. While not as comic-centric as many would like, the crowds are absolutely amazing, rivaling even NY in terms of the aisles being packed.

C2E2, Chicago: Nobody understands how to build a show better than the folks at Reed. They are not bound by a "quarterly" Wall Street mindset and it shows. Slow and steady, making sacrifices to build out for the long term have made this a yearly staple on the circuit. You get complete immersion at their shows. Plenty of comics but well rounded with ancillary products as well. If Reed announced a new show in the USA, I'm pretty certain they'd sell out dealer space quickly. We'd be there for sure.

Awesome Con, Washington D.C.: Regrettably our home city, while drawing an impressive amount of people, seemed the antithesis of Reed. If you could pony up for a booth, they'd sell it to you. There were gutter guard booths, a carnival barker (literally), people selling cell phones, contact lenses, etc. Felt very much like a large indoor flea market. We won't be returning.

Wizard, Chicago: Wizard's flagship event and one of the top 3 shows in the country for the amount of comics to be viewed (Heroes and Baltimore are the other 2). There are a lot of other booths you have to wade through but if you like to dig through boxes, this is a show you should plan on attending.

Baltimore Comic Con: This show gets bigger and better every year. Since Marc has gone to a 3 day show it has just exploded in size/scope. Do not miss this show if you are anywhere along the east coast.

New York Comic Con: Massive crowds were once again the theme as this show threatens San Diego for top dog status. My understanding is that when the Javits Center remodeling is complete, they will do just that. Even if items outside of comics do not interest you, you might want to take at least 1 trip to view the spectacle that is NYCC. And frankly, there is no shortage of books either. The only complaint I've heard there is there are not enough $1 books but with hotels at $350/night, parking, and the price of the booths themselves, it's hard for too many guys to be able to do that. You will find a slew of high end material to peruse.

In closing, wishing everyone a happy and healthy 2016 and thank you so much for your support.

Alex Reece - Reece's Rare Comics

Hello all! I hope all comic book collectors, dealers, and everyone in between are doing well. 2015 was another very solid year at Greg Reece's Rare Comics, specifically when talking about keys and high grade books. We broke several GPA records with some high grade Golden Age DCs, and we sold a good mix of raw books as well, though mid to low grade Silver/Bronze Age books were notably slow turners, even when priced below Guide. It seems that the trend is moving more and more towards high grade, and less and less towards "reader copies". Though they are still out there in small numbers, I saw fewer run collectors this year than I have in years past, with most of our buyers seeking to either upgrade their current copy, or drop some money in an investment comic book. This has seemingly pushed high grade comics and key books to higher price levels again in 2015, as they are becoming harder and harder to replace.

While selling was good in 2015, buying was another story entirely. We were able to purchase an extremely high grade collection of Marvels, an eighty longbox collection, and several other smaller deals throughout 2015, but those were the exception and not the rule. 2015 was one of the driest years for buying comic books in the seven years that I have worked in the hobby. This includes getting calls for full collections, people bringing books to the booth at a show, and even dealer to dealer sales. Everyone seems to be holding on to their material, and apparently they are right to do so. With prices for keys and high grade continually on the rise, no one is willing to sell, as they want to max out the return on their investment. On the rare occasions that we were able to buy the right kind of material, we were often paying eighty to ninety percent of market value just so we could keep keys in stock. The demand for this material is exceedingly high, while the supply is as low as I have seen it.

On the show front, we did twelve shows from Anaheim to Baltimore, and while there were the typical pop culture shows, most were solid comic shows where we met customers and were able to sell through a lot of material. A decent amount of people still buy exclusively at shows, so maintaining a physical presence is important, as some high end collectors want to see the books in hand before making a purchase. We also did our second annual $2 Baltimore Blowout Booth, which did very well again. The rule there is have fresh material, bagged, boarded, and alphabetized, and people are all over it.

As for the ever ubiquitous question, "What's hot in comic books?" the answer is not easy. As I have mentioned multiple times throughout this report, keys and high grade are easy to sell, and difficult to obtain. Besides that, the Hollywood Hype machine has created some "keys" out of thin air. I use quotations because while these books see overnight success, the long term investment might not pan out. Take Avengers #55 for example. The announcement of Ultron being the lead villain in Avengers 2 broke in 2013, and the movie was released in 2015. A common book became sought after, driving prices up as high as 10x their previous value in 2013. If one were to buy that as an investment book in 2013, one would have lost badly. The book has fallen every year since, seeing a slight uptick around the time of the movie's release, but then continuing to trend down. The good news is, while these books do not hold their value when compared to a classic key (think Incredible Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #1, etc.), they still have become B-level keys in their own right. Will the first appearance of Ultron in 9.0 ever fetch $800 at market again? Likely not, but it still is worth far more than it ever was before the movie announcement broke, and I believe this will be the case for quite some time. The same thought process can be applied to Ms. Marvel #1, Marvel Super-Heroes #18, Fantastic Four #45, and the like. The short version is, while it is easy to get caught up in the movie hype, I would only recommend investing in those books with a quick flip in mind, not for the long haul.

In overview, the key and high grade market for comic books has never been better. The mid to low grade market of common Silver/Bronze titles is a bit weak, even when books are priced under Guide. Buying opportunities have become scarcer, and when they do come along we have to pay aggressively to acquire new material. The Hollywood Hype machine continues to create overnight "keys" that are great for comic book dealers and people with extensive collections, but are bad for those looking for a long term investment piece. Overall, the market is healthy, and I look forward to another great year in 2016. Stop by and say hello if you ever see us on the road!

Barry Sandoval
Heritage Auctions

Heritage Auctions was privileged to once again sell over $30 million worth of comics and original comic art in 2015. The price of every item we've ever auctioned (for last year or any other year) is available for free at our website HA.com – feel free to use it as a research tool, particularly for comics graded higher than 9.2 which is the highest grade this Guide lists a value for.

One collection we would make special mention of is that of Magik Woo of Vancouver, Canada. His copy of Suspense Comics #3 was the one pictured in Ernst Gerber's Photo-Journal (and Bob Overstreet also owned the comic at one time). Graded VF/NM 9.0 by CBCS, it sold for $173,275, one of the highest prices ever for a non-superhero comic. The rest of Mr. Woo's collection had similarly strong eye appeal, and one reason for this is that he did not read them! By the time this Guide is printed we'll be offering Part Two of the collection.

And we should also mention the collection of Maggie Thompson and the late Don Thompson. Alas, we are finished selling those books, but very honored to have been entrusted with auctioning them, and the collection totaled well over a million dollars!

In the comic art realm, our top result of the year was $442,150 for Neal Adams' iconic cover for the key Green Lantern #76, a piece that had been in a collector's hands for decades. We can't emphasize enough that the comic art market places a huge premium on "fresh" material, meaning pieces that have been in collections without changing hands since at least the pre-Internet 1980s.

Also, we're happy to see that Alex Raymond Flash Gordon originals are making a big comeback. From May 2014 to present we have sold four prime examples for $95,000 or more!

If there's something we at Heritage can help you with, you'll find our contact information in our many ads in this book. We look forward to helping more collectors maximize the value of their four-color treasures in the coming year.

Alika Seki
Maui Comics & Collectibles

Aloha from Maui! It has been a year since we opened our very first brick-and-mortar storefront! We want to thank all the local and visiting customers who helped to make our first year a productive one. I started the Instagram account (@maui_comics) when the store opened, and a scroll through our posts is a story of all the key issues and collections we've bought and sold – have a look when you've got some time.

Our first year of business would not have been possible without the dedication of my partner Kaleo Kaina and our volunteers Travis Shultz, Swan Kaho'okele and Ryan Balberdi all of whom gave their time for the love of comics. I would also like to thank the NERDWatch podcast for recording in the store every week and making me and this store a part of their show. You can listen to the NERDWatch on the MAUIWatch App (available through iTunes), or on the internet.

Modern & Copper Age: This year we found a few large collections of Copper and Modern Age comics loaded with key issues. These eras have served us well, as a lot of these key issues are only now gaining value and can still be bought cheap. The most common and lucrative of the modern keys has been New Mutants #98 (first Deadpool). Not only did we find at least one copy in almost every modern collection we picked up this year, but they sold the day they were put out on display. All five of the copies we sold this year were between 8.5 and 9.4 grades, and sold consistently for between $270 and $320. After the Deadpool movie was released I had expected at least a small spike in price, but I wasn't disappointed when it didn't happen. I just had to remind myself how common this book is.

Another Modern book that was a common and consistent seller is Batman: The Killing Joke, first printing. I sold 4 copies this past year; the first for $35, the second for $55, and the third and fourth for $85 each. This book has climbed dramatically over the course of this year. This climb is mostly due to the previews of Jared Leto's take on the Joker in the upcoming Suicide Squad movie, which looks heavily based on the art of Brian Bolland from The Killing Joke.

I desperately wanted to hold on to my copy of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 (Mirage, 1984), first printing (CGC 8.5 white pages), but in preparing to open the store I had read Chuck Rozanski's series of essays "How to Open Your Own Comics Retail Store" in which he reasons that a store owner cannot remain a collector. Chuck was right, and I sold the book for $3,300 – well over Guide price. The TMNT are probably one of the better Copper Age investments to make right now. Most pre-1990 TMNT comics are still under $5 apiece. The Image run (Volume 3, 1996) and the current IDW run (Volume 5, 2011) are both solid sellers. It's impossible to find single issues of the IDW run for less than cover price. A set of the four connecting covers (A, B, C & D) sells for between $130 and $150. The TMNT will always have incarnations in movies, television, toys and video games ensuring many warm childhood memories and generation upon generation of fans and collectors to come. As a dealer I know that every time a fan turns 30, they become a spender; and every year they age beyond that their budget increases.

Bronze Age: Notable Bronze Age sales include; New Teen Titans #2 (first Deathstroke) two copies each in approximately 9.0 condition both sold for $110 each, Conan the Barbarian #1 in approximately 8.0 condition for $175, and Power Man #48 (first meeting with Iron Fist) in 7.5 condition for $60. The amazing work of Mike Colter in the Netflix series Jessica Jones has definitely increased interest in Luke Cage.

Silver & Golden Age: Notable Silver Age sales includes a stack of beautiful Thor comics issues #134-165 all in the VF to NM range, with a couple of the books reaching the 9.4 and 9.6 range. I bought and sold the stack in one sitting to a friend of the store. The higher grade Silver Age books are starting to widen the price gap from the lower grade stuff. Lower grade copies of the same issues are going for $5-$10 in most instances and usually gets glossed over in the bins.

We also sold an Avengers #1 in approximately 3.0 condition for $900, an Avengers #57 (first Silver Age Vision) in approximately 6.0 condition for $400, and a Brave and the Bold #54 (first Teen Titans) in approximately 5.0 condition for $175.

Atomic Age & Pre-code Horror/Sci-fi: Last, and definitely not least, the comics of the Atomic Age have been the clear favorite for collectors of all stripes. I sold all the remaining Avon and Atlas comics I had from the 1950s, all for well above Guide, like Flying Saucers (Avon 1952) in approximately 4.5 condition for $300 and Dracula #1 on Avon in approximately VG condition for $90. I also bought a solid collection of Famous Monsters magazines from issue #2 and up. The collection was in mid to higher grade by outward appearances, but smelled of mold from being stored in a wet environment. Despite the obvious smell and page-color issues the books sold fast, as early issues of Famous Monsters magazine in any condition are hard to come by.

Simpson Collection – Maui: A good friend of the store, Ken Gardner, found a collection of mid to low grade Dell and Gold Key comics all TV, cartoon and Disney related. While this may not sound spectacular at first, I was blown away at how complete the runs were. The best TV shows such as Star Trek and the Twilight Zone were in higher grade, average FN/VF and were complete runs. The Disney series including all early Beagle Boys and Duck spin-off books were also in complete runs. The only notable title missing from this collection is Scooby Doo, but it may be found yet. The collection belonged to Steven Simpson and his father Alan Simpson who passed in 2009. As a child growing up in Southern Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) in the later 1950s early 1960s, Steve collected mainly Disney comics by Dell. Most were obtained from a book/magazine store that his Mother worked at. She also helped by ordering/subscribing to the comics we collected, through a distributer in England. In the late 1960s the Simpson family moved to Los Angeles and found two newsstands that sold comics; one in Hollywood and the other in downtown Los Angeles. Ken has since been entrusted by the Simpson family to curate and sell the books. Ken was also kind enough to gift our store with the complete run of #1-19 of the Beagle Boys, as well as some higher grade Doctor Solar and Magnus Robot Fighter books. While most of these books aren't particularly valuable, the cover art is always fun to look at. Anybody interested in this collection can contact Ken through the store. See our B&W ad in the back of the book. As I reflect on our first year in business and all of the fun we have had and interesting collections we have found, I can't help but think about how much Bruce would've loved this place. For those who haven't had the pleasure, Bruce Ellsworth III was my mentor, and a Senior Advisor to this guide, who passed in 2013. Without Bruce, my love of comics would've laid dormant after the chromium apocalypse of the late '90s. Without Bruce, I would've never become an advisor to this guide. Without Bruce, this store would have never been opened. It's to Bruce that I owe so much. So in thanks and in memory of Bruce I dedicate our first year of business. Thank you to all of our customers, local and visitor alike! NERD OUT WITH YOUR BIRD OUT!

The comic book and art markets are as hot as ever and sales are strong, as collectors and investors search out the next purchase. As high grade key books reach staggering prices, demand for low to mid-grade key books keeps increasing, causing more and more record prices for these issues as well. Grading of books has given a new confidence to the buyers that what they have bought as a particular grade is exactly what it will be when they sell it. The strong demand for high grade Gold, Silver and Bronze age books shows no slowing down at this point, again commanding record prices at auction. Most buyers are committed to paying whatever it takes to own the rare 9.6 to 9.8 graded books and are confident in the grades assigned by CGC and CBCS.

Golden Age books continue to be sought after and even ungraded copies are bringing in big prices for even some of the more obscure titles.

Silver Age Marvel titles continue to be at the top of most buyers lists. It's been a fever pitch ever since comics sales have been driven in recent years by the movie franchises and TV Series that are spawning daily. Speculators are clamoring to find the next break out title or character and those are the ones that become red hot. Even the demand and sales of ungraded books is steady. DC Silver Age titles are not as active beyond the key issues. Look for early appearances of Supergirl to steadily increase in all grades, thanks to her new TV show.

The standout modern title continues to be The Walking Dead with the popularity of the TV show continuing to have increased viewership with each season. Prices on back issues have leveled out a bit but demand for issue #1 in high grade is still strong. Modern books as an investment are also driven by speculation on TV and movies. Expect Deadpool appearances to jump when the movie releases.

Comic art prices continue to rise as well with each unique page or specialty piece that comes to market. Covers and pages long stashed away from public view are coming to market as prices skyrocket. Each year we continue to lose some of the classic artists of the past and their art becomes more sought after. Look for modern art to keep rising steadily as some artists start to convert over to digital only formatting. Even color guides and preliminary artwork are becoming desired collectibles as time passes. Covers and key appearance pages are most coveted but art value continues to be driven by the artist of the piece.

Important Sales: Amazing Fantasy #15 (3.5) $8,800, (5.0) $16,500, (5.0) $16,941, Incredible Hulk #1 (4.0) $4,640, (2.0) $4,240, (4.0) $9,777, Journey Into Mystery #83 (5.0) $3,751, and a Frank Frazetta Superman Watercolor Original $30,800.

Copper Age/Modern Age: The two books that continue to be on the rise from the Copper and Modern Ages are Batman Adventures #12, first appearance Harley Quinn and New Mutants #98, the first appearance of Deadpool. Our Coast To Coast Comics specialist in this area Tim Gutto has seen these two books double in value in raw sales. At the beginning of the year we sold six copies of New Mutants #98 between $100-150 and in the last four months our sales have not gone below $300. Graded copies of this issue have also significantly gone up, in the first quarter these books in 9.8 were fetching between $450-500 and have now gone up to $850. Expect both raw and slabbed copies to continue rising with the Deadpool movie coming out in February. Following the same trend Batman Adventures #12 as also doubled in raw sales, at the beginning of the year selling between $200-250 and now rising to the mid $400s on average. This book is a lot harder to find in high grade due to it being marketed primarily towards kids and with this being the first appearance of Harley Quinn this book will continue to rise as well.

Other books trending upwards due to movie "hype" are modern Thanos stories with him being introduced as the main villain in the Marvel Cinematic Universe over the past few years The Infinity Gauntlet #1-6 are selling between $60 and $90 a set and his appearances in Silver Surfer v.3 #34 and #44 have been very steady movers for us while still being relatively affordable. TV shows are also affecting the market, with the announcement and subsequent commercial of Preacher (DC/Vertigo) raw copies of issue number one have shot up to over $100, while Robert Kirkman's new title Outcast (Image) set to debut on Cinemax in 2016, has raw copies of the premier issue selling between $10-30 and 9.8 graded selling for $65-85.

Still the king amongst comic-related TV shows is Image's The Walking Dead, with the TV series now around issue #84 (by my count) and several key characters set to appear, Paul "Jesus" Monroe and Negan, we've seen a significant rise in their first appearances ("Jesus" #92, selling in the $70 range raw and Negan #100 going for $15-40 depending on the variant). Variants are a unique trait of the modern era and almost impossible to keep track of, they can be as high as 10-20 times cover to as low as a dollar after a month and with the big two Marvel and DC almost flooding the market with variants recently (Uncanny X-Men #600 had just under 20 different covers and DKIII: The Master Race having too many to count!) it's almost impossible to tell what is going to be hot and what is going to end up in a dollar bin. Some good movers for us this past year when it comes to variants have been covers done by artists Skottie Young, J. Scott Campbell, and Adam Hughes selling for at least double cover price. Skottie Young's variant cover for Deadpool #45/250 is currently selling for $100 raw, J. Scott Campbell's cover Superior Spider-Man #20 going for $200, and Adam Hughes cover for Harley Quinn (The New 52) #1 going for over $300 in our last sale!

Other Modern Age books we've seen substantially increase this past year are, What if: Venom Possessed Deadpool #1 with raw copies getting as high as $200, NYX #3 (first X-23 the "new" Wolverine) also in the $200 range, Edge of Spider-Verse #2 (first Spider-Gwen) going for $70, and Batman (The New 52) #1 similarly going in the $70 range. Overall this has been a crazy year for us when it comes to Modern Age books and with all the new movies coming out in the next few years, the majority of which follow modern story arcs, we expect prices to keep rising.

Silver Age/Golden Age: Silver Age once again continued to be the dominant part of our beloved hobby once again in 2015. Specifically in the key #1 & 1st appearance issues with DC making a major run on price increase and appreciable value this year like we have never seen before. Marvel keys such as Amazing Spider-Man #1 increased in value and price as did #1 issues of X-Men, Fantastic Four, Journey Into Mystery, Tales Of Suspense, Amazing Fantasy #15 etc.

Across the board all major Marvel & DC Silver Age #1 comics as well as 1st appearances seemed to increase in an accelerated manner mostly driven by popularity and an inability to completely quench the collecting public's appetite for these treasures. There seemed to almost be an urgency among many in the hobby to obtain their childhood dream titles, meaning keys in particular before prices reach an amount that could possibly put this keys out of the financial grasp of many collectors. We noticed in particular that low grade copies in the 1.0, 1.5, 1.8 & 2.0 range had a tremendous surge in pricing and the demand for these more affordable copies was in fact the culprit. The Golden Age market is not an area that we currently have less expertise in however in our observation role we noticed a common and encouraging trend across the board, just like Silver Age, Copper Age and Modern Age comics if priced right were selling extremely well. Of course like all areas of the comic market the influence from all of Hollywood's incredible new movies and upcoming movie announcements fueled and incredible demand from Comicdom. This year, like none other in the last 10 years, Coast To Coast was unable to meet 100% of the demand from our customer base for all of the aforementioned. 2016 promises to continue with the hot, competitive pursuit of wonderful, amazing keys, comic art and just about all movie related memorabilia as well. Dealers will be in hot pursuit of material to meet the ever growing demand of their collector customer base. We here at Coast To Coast Comics wish all of you in the comic galaxy a healthy and prosperous 2016 in this amazing hobby that continues to grow and reach new spectacular heights.

What a difference a year makes! Some say that the days and weeks just blend together, not in 2016! Every single day was a new challenge. What do we market heavily? What do we order conservatively? What collections do we buy? What conventions do we attend?

After some painfully long days and nights we finally said goodbye to 2015. We saw sparse growth in sales with graphic novels making the largest contribution at a 6% increase. Generally our new issue sales continue to be on a steep decline and unless the publishers do something quickly its going to be a very quiet year for new releases.

The greatest area of growth in-store remains our sale of graphic novels. This is definitely the direction the hobby is going and the major companies have started producing more stories in only this format the release of Avengers: Endless Wartime, Hellboy and the Midnight Circus, and Fairest in All the Land are just a few examples. Most of our new customers are coming to pick up graphic novels instead of regular monthly issues.

The impact of digital comics is being felt by many retailers, and it looks like they will be a major part of the hobby in the years to come. Hollywood continues to help our sales with the increasing visibility of its mainstream comic movies including (Avengers: Age of Ultron, Ant-Man, Fantastic Four and Star Wars: The Force Awakens being released in 2015 and Deadpool opening in 2016, The networks haven't let us down with steady diet of Agents of SHIELD, Daredevil, Jessica Jones, Supergirl and The Flash.

Key issues from the Silver and Bronze Age are still selling incredibly well and don't seem to be slowing down at all.

I simply can't keep up with the demand for high-grade Silver and Bronze Age books – from Action to X-Men, people want them in the highest grades and as fast as possible. I would need a full-time employee just to keep up with the want lists I am being handed daily. The usual suspects are always involved: Amazing Fantasy #15, Incredible Hulk #1, Fantastic Four #1, Daredevil #1, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Incredible Hulk #181, and X-Men #94, but I'm also seeing some new ones, Marvel Spotlight #5 and 12, Hero for Hire #1, Marvel Premiere #15 and Marvel Super-Heroes #18 are just a few examples.

Golden Age sales are slowly picking up, and with so many collectors pursuing high-grade Silver Age, buyers are finding some great deals. Don't get me wrong there was always a market for Golden Age hero comics, but never at Guide, and usually well below. I really can't see this trend changing in the near future.

Silver Age sales are in the stratosphere, and high-grade copies are selling faster than I can get them in. Everyone wants book from the 1960's regardless of condition and cost.

For DC Silver Age, Hero and Horror comics have seen the greatest growth in sales, while Romance has slowed right down. It could just be the affordability but DC bin stock sells way more in volume than its Marvel counterpart. Batman is the key mover for DC along with Justice League of America.

Marvel Silver Age is selling very well, with Amazing Spider-Man and X-Men leading the way, and demand for Avengers and Thor, and Iron Man increasing. The Marvel Silver Age market is always strong and doesn't look to be slowing down anytime soon.

Bronze Age comic sales are through the roof in high grade, and demand for mid-grade copies have increased as well. Marvel leads the way in this category because of Byrne X-Men (#108-143) and all Amazing Spider-Man issues between #100 and #200. These issues are on almost everyone's list and, if I had an entire box of each, they would be gone in days.

I can't continue my report without mentioning CGC and their fantastic service. Not only would our sales have been slower, but also, we wouldn't have grown as quickly if it hadn't been for them providing the only guaranteed way to corroborate condition and confirm restoration on high-quality books.

CGC continues to be the ultimate standard in independent third-party grading. I would like to mention that CGC is still the exclusive grading company for Paradise Comics.

Some recent CGC sales include:

Tales of Suspense #39 CGC Signature Series 5.0 $5000.00, Daredevil #1 CGC Signature Series 3.0 $750.00, Strange Tales #110 CGC Signature Series 6.0 $2800.00, Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.2(restored) $1200.00, Amazing Spider-Man #9 CGC 7.0 $1100.00, Batman #16 CGC 4.5 $1800.00, Hulk #3 CGC 7.5 $1400.00, Fantastic Four #12 CGC Signature Series 5.0 $1200.00, Walking Dead #1 CGC 9.8 $2200.00, and X-Men #1 CGC 4.5 $2200.00

Online sales on both our eBay Store and website (WWW.PARADISECOMICS.COM) continued to grow all year and we are looking forward to even better sales in 2016.

Big B Comics - Barrie

Wow! What a year it has been. In a year of constant personal flux for me, I am reminded of how thankful I am for the steady work and diligent oversight of all those associated with the Overstreet Guide. Thank you to Bob Overstreet and Mark Huesman and everyone else responsible for putting this essential book together. Like life itself, the comics market can be a wild and crazy ride of ridiculous highs and maddening lows. In such an environment, it's important to have thoughtful and observant caretakers who recognize the value of not rushing to judgment.

For the past 15 years, I had worked with fellow advisor Walter Durajlija operating 3 retail stores and exhibiting at numerous conventions. We dutifully submitted our market reports jointly, sharing our unique experiences at the forefront of buying and selling comics in Southwestern Ontario. As of July 2015, Walter and I have moved on to the next stage of our partnership. I now fully own and operate Big B Comics Barrie, north of Toronto; Walter is now the sole driving force behind Big B Comics Hamilton and Niagara Falls. I'm sure Walter will have all sorts of interesting tidbits about his stores and the sales there in his report (I'll be reading his first!). My report will focus solely on everything I have experienced at my store since July.

Barrie, Ontario is a relatively unique market (for me, at least) in that it for a very long time has been underserved as far as having a good source for vintage material. Working out of Big B HQ in Hamilton all my life, I had honestly grown accustomed to always having great comics and always having a ready audience willing to buy them. I'll be honest; before July, Big B Comics Barrie did a terrible job of presenting quality back issues to the local market. The selection was bad and the knowledge base at the store to buy and sell specialty items like old comics just wasn't there.

This was one of the challenges I took on when I turned my full attention to this store. For nearly two years I stockpiled good inventory of Silver, Bronze, and Modern books. I was determined to wow my customers with a whole array of great books. I came in with multiple copies of great Copper and Modern keys like Amazing Spider-Man #300, New Mutants #98, Batman Adventures #12, a wonderful collection of about 100 mid to high grade pre-Code Horror, a selection of good Silver Age, and tons of quality bargain books in the $2-5 range.

In the first few weeks of having these books out sales were good but not great. Turns out a good deal of my customers just like buying new comics and never look at back issues. But I believed in the old "If you build it they will come" philosophy, so I kept plugging away.

The first book I sold was an All Star Comics #58. Second one was Amazing Spider-Man #194. Third one was Incredible Hulk #102. The trend was the same as you will read everywhere in this guide: keys, keys, keys. Selling keys is great but any full time dealer will tell you that selling the run books and bargain books is where we really make it or break it. It doesn't take much effort to sell a key comic these days. The demand is so high just about anyone can do it. Comic conventions are full of people buying and selling key comics. Some of them even make money doing it.

So why, you may be asking, does any of this matter to you the average reader? Well I guess I just wanted to point out that it can be done! I'm 4 months in at the time of this writing and I can report that slowly but surely, collectors, real honest to goodness collectors with their want lists and guides in hand, are coming in and wheeling and dealing on all manner of old comics. It is refreshing to say the least. Sure, I still sell lots of keys and have big demand for all the usual suspects. But I can also sell 1950s Westerns and beat up *Daffy Duck*s from the '70s. Yesterday I was asked for back issues of Shogun Warriors (no, not just #1). As long as they are priced right (more on that in a bit), all old comics remain sellable. We hear so much these days about a second speculator bubble and a market that is driven by trying to cash in on casting announcements more than anything else. While that is certainly true, and indeed troubling in many ways, there is still a large but silent majority of collectors who buy comics and have never once visited Comics General on the CGC forums or signed up for a GPA subscription. These collectors are young and old, men and women, and come from all walks of life. I love them all because they love comics as much as I do.

Let's talk about some of the notable comics these lovely people have purchased from me in the last 4 months. All prices are in Canadian dollars. Grades are mine.

Here are some standard run of the mill keys, the kind you will see in most every report:

Amazing Fantasy #15 CBCS 1.0 $5500
Amazing Spider-Man #129 8.0 $800
Amazing Spider-Man #129 5.5 $600
Amazing Spider-Man #129 3.0 $325
Amazing Spider-Man #129 2.5 $300
Batman #232 8.0 $375
Batman Adventures #12 9.6 $800 (x2)
Batman Adventures #12 9.4 $600
Batman Adventures #12 9.2 $400
Brave & the Bold #54 5.0 $275
Captain America #117 9.0 $360
Fantastic Four #45 5.5 $400
Fantastic Four #52 5.0 $400
G.I. Combat #87 4.5 $375
Giant-Size X-Men #1 4.0 $350
Incredible Hulk #102 CGC 9.2 $700
Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 6.0 $1600
Iron Man #1 CGC 6.0 $575
New Mutants #98 9.4 $400 (x4)
New Mutants #98 9.6 $500
Our Army at War #81 2.0 $350
Showcase #30 5.0 $550
Strange Tales #110 3.0 $1200
X-Men #4 3.0 $400
X-Men #12 5.0 $280

Here are some noteable sales from the collection of pre-Code Horror I mentioned above:

Astonishing #26 7.0 $300
Horrific #3 2.0 $500 (Classic bullet to the head cover)
Journey into Mystery #2 2.5 $300
Marvel Tales #111 6.5 $210
Spellbound #1 3.5 $320
Spellbound #9 6.0 $250
Strange Tales #15 4.5 $500
Strange Tales #20 4.5 $300
Suspense Comics #10 3.5 $450

Of course the market as I said is more than just these highlights that are selling for multiples of Guide. The other side of the coin is the huge swath of comics that sell for less than Guide. This is where we find the Westerns, the Dells, the Gold Keys, the Funny Animals, the Classics Illustrated, the Charltons (non-Ditko division), and lots of Marvel and DC too. My favorite price to sell this stuff at, as long as it's not falling apart, is $5. It might say $22 in the Guide. I price it at $5. I find that's a good price point for something that's old enough to be cool just for being old, but isn't actually cool on its merits. Think a Dale Evans from 1957 in FN+. It's a neat historical artifact that shows well. But people who grew up thinking Dale Evans was cool are pushing 70. Those people are selling comics more often than buying comics. No new buyers are coming in to the market, or in fact have come in to the market in the last 30 years, who think that Dale Evans is cool. There are a lot of comics that fall into this category.

One other thing that I really like to sell is bulk junk! I've learned to love not having to rent a warehouse and so over the years have embraced the quick flip on bulk comics. Just in the last 4 months I have sold 7500 comics for $500, 580 graphic novels for $500, another 4700 comics for $350, and my favorite by far, 50 sealed copies of Batman Digital Justice at $3 each. I'll always take the cash in hand over piles of long boxes in a storage locker.

I knew it would take some time to build up sales on old comics. What I really had no idea about was going to be my ability to buy new collections in a new market. As it turns out, I've been buying an average of one nice collection a week! I count a nice collection as at least a thousand dollars retail worth of comics. It seems I am constantly tweeting out photos of new acquisitions (@bigbbarrie – follow me!). The best purchase was a very deep collection of 1955-1965 DCs from a very kind and amiable gentleman locally. Included were Brave and the Bold #28-30, JLA #1, Green Lantern #1, tons of good *Showcase*s, about 100 comics from the big 4 War titles, and oodles more. The grades were all average but I will take DCs from this era in any grade every time. The rest of my collections consist largely of great stuff from the '80s and up. This era is so rife with money keys now that I look at every single collection regardless. 10 years ago I didn't want to bother with anything post 1980 because it was almost all worthless. Now I get excited looking through boxes of *Darkhawk*s because you never know when another New Mutants #98 or Batman Adventures #12 might pop up. More often than not, I find quite a few and people are pleasantly surprised by the stacks of cash I give them.

The corollary to this is that it could just be that all these "keys" are really, really common. Two months ago, I sold my entire stock of New Mutants #87, 4 copies in total, to another dealer at the local Toronto Comic Book Show (@tocomicshow – check them out). I now have 4 copies again, just from buying random long boxes of Moderns. I have bought 3 more New Mutants #98s and 2 more Batman Adventures #12s in the last 30 days. Demand is super high and prices are strong, but there really is ample supply of these just sitting in people's long boxes, forgotten in closets. It's nothing like comics from the '60s and back, which for me, living in a town that was almost all farmland in 1965, are pretty much non-existent as original owner collections. I wish I could buy two Amazing Fantasy #15s every month!

This is why I remain extremely skeptical about consumers paying any kind of large premium for ultra high grade slabs of Moderns or playing the census game. The market is so much bigger than the census but it is easy to get caught up in those tiny little numbers, only to regret it later when a nicer copy pops up and your formerly "highest graded" becomes "second highest graded". Buy nice raw copies at reasonable prices and you are much better off in the long run 9 times out of 10.

While I'm on the topic of Moderns and CGC and GPA and all that, I have a story to relate which is becoming all too common. I heard this from a very nice guy at a local con, a collector who has become a weekend dealer, and a guy who truly means well. He has his inventory arrayed on a table, with nothing priced. A customer asks the price on a comic. It was a raw ASM #298. The dealer gets out his phone, checks GPA, and says "well 9.8s get $250, and mine looks like a 9.8, so I'll take $250". I've seen this multiple times from multiple dealers now. This shouldn't be how it works guys!

My second GPA quibble is this: why do so many people want to pay less than GPA if they treat GPA as gospel? Doesn't that just make the comic you just bought worth less than it was before? If we all did that we'd be setting new record lows every month!

While I continue to grow the back issue market at my store, new comics remain the single biggest seller at Big B Barrie. The new comic market right now is a constant challenge in trying to keep up with all the crazy stuff going on at Marvel and DC. Marvel is caught in an endless cycles of reboots that I have written about in past market reports. In CBPG #44 I described Marvel's editorial policy in 2013 as akin to "watching a dog chase its tail, except the dog only has one eye and three legs so it trips and falls more often than not". In 2015 I'd hack off another leg and lump DC right in there too. DC especially has fallen on hard times of late. Outside of Batman, their titles are in freefall. I run a big, established store with a large customer base and I can't rack shelf copies of things like Aquaman and Catwoman. 4 months in a row of watching 1 copy get racked and not sell is torturous. The most common complaint from my readers is bad stories and editorial decisions. The recent wave of new titles featuring Bat-Mite, Lobo, Starfire, and other duds was met with the expected thud.

Marvel's recent "All-New All-Different" relaunch is interesting in that they are at least trying new things. A diverse line up of heroes is a laudable goal. We recently had an election here in Canada and our new PM made all sorts of news with his gender balanced cabinet. When asked why he did it, he had the best possible answer, "Because it's 2015." So yes, Black Captain America and Asian Hulk are good things as far as I'm concerned. But none of it will matter if in 6 or 8 or 12 issues the next relaunch happens and all this gets swept away for the grand return of the original heroes. Will they call that the "All-Old, All-Recognizable" relaunch? At some point Marvel lost sight of the fact that people collect comics. They make things difficult on themselves by breaking that habit for people with a relaunch every other year.

The good news is there are still plenty of good comics out there that people buy and enjoy and come back for. They just don't sell for anything on the secondary market, with very few exceptions. Even outside of Marvel/DC, I haven't seen as many big hits this year from the likes of Image or Boom or what have you. It used to be you could count on some comic blowing up each week and fetching $20+ on eBay on day of release. But the cycle has played itself out. I imagine too many people have been caught holding the bag on overinflated "collectibles" and the market has naturally corrected itself. Good for you, market. It's better this way.

Finally, to wrap things up, in the immortal words of Ice-T, I'd like to send a shout out to the following: My Fellow Overstreet Advisors – I look forward to reading all your reports. If you didn't write one, do it next year. It feels good to contribute. To Big Papa Walt Durajlija who put me where I am today, thank you for everything. Steve Borock and the folks at CBCS – You guys rock. This segment of the market was due for a shake up. Alice-ann Pilon, Jeremy Moore, and Marshall Geddes, aka the Big B Barrie crew – I love you all.
Til next year!

Everything's Archie!

2015 was a very busy year for everyone's favorite red head. Taking a page from the Big Two, Archie Comics re-launched all of their major titles with new writers and new artists. Archie also announced their next upcoming adventure, a live action show called Riverdale, would be coming out in 2016.

Because of all of these major announcements, collectors have started to pay closer attention to Archie as a viable investment piece. An Archie Comics #1 4.0 sold for $33,111 in June of 2015, while a 6.5 sold for $61,000 in March. Mid grade Archie #1s are still a great value for Golden Age collectors, but the lower grades may not give you as much of a return down the line. A Pep #22 CGC 6.5 sold for $135,000 in March, with equally strong numbers for lower grades and restored copies. But again, this is still a great value for such an important comic in the pop culture world.

Jackpot Comics #4, the first time Archie appeared on an MLJ cover, is still fairly affordable. A 5.0 sold for $10,755 in February of 2015. Pep Comics #25, the first appearance of Mr. Wetherbee, is also a very affordable Golden Age Archie key. A 2.5 sold for $717 in late 2014. Pep Comics #31 will also likely pick up momentum as it is the first time we see Veronica's father, Mr. Lodge. Silver, Bronze Copper and Modern Archies are still sitting at somewhat low prices. Life With Archie #110 is a very under-rated Bronze key in the Archie world. Featuring Chuck Clayton for the first time, he was brought in to help diversify Riverdale in 1971 and has been a series regular since. Veronica #202 is the most valuable out of all the modern Archie books, as it is the first appearance of Kevin Keller. Prices have stayed at around $200 for this book. First appearances of secondary characters will be picking up steam this year and next. Books to keep an eye out for are Archie's Girls, Betty and Veronica #320, the first appearance of Cheryl Blossom. Currently prices for this book are falling for higher grade copies, but mid-grade books are staying put. However, Cheryl is going to be a major character in Riverdale, so prices for this book will likely increase! The first Josie appearance, Archie's Pals N Gals #23, has been staying under the $1,000 mark, but will likely shoot up in value this year. Archie's Mad House #22, the first appearance of Sabrina the Teenage Witch, has seen a steady increase in prices as well.

Cheryl Blossom's debut, Archie's Girls, Betty & Veronica #320, is primed to get a Riverdale TV boost.

Despite all of the strong prices in the collector world, as a company Archie has seen some growing pains. There was a big backlash from retailers and comic fans when Archie pushed that infamous Kickstarter campaign, which was shut down as quickly as it went up. Afterlife With Archie, one of the companies most popular titles in years, slowed in production resulting in only two books being released last year. Chilling Tales of Sabrina seems to have also had the same fate as Afterlife. If Archie continues to delay production on these titles fans will lose interest. Mega Man has also gone the way of Afterlife, with a hiatus going into effect after issue #55. Archie's superhero line, Red Circle Comics, also failed to keep up interest, and was revamped into Dark Circle Comics with past continuity being ignored.

Overall though, failings in a company are normal. Archie is going through a lot of changes and growth, which will inevitably result in titles being canceled. I personally am not worried about the future of Archie comics. They have come an exceptionally long way since the 1940s, and I know they will continue to grow and venture out into new and exciting mediums.

Tony Starks Comics Ina Flash!

Overall, it's been a good year for the comic book market.

Run type books in average condition continue to sell for less than Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide prices. But where several years ago VG copies of run issues sat around unsold or sold at steep discounts, now they do actually sell - and for more modest discounts. Everything doesn't have to be half price.

Of course you don't need us to tell you that key issues - and especially key issues in high grade - are selling very well. And thanks to movies and TV shows based on comic book characters, it seems every few weeks some new "key" issue is identified. More examples than we can go through - so lets look at couple of newer ones. Or at least new when this is being written - December 2015.

Netflix's productions of Marvel characters have been very well received by fans and the general public alike. Jessica Jones has sent copies of her first appearance in Alias out of the dollar bins and now goes for $75- $100 a pop in NM condition. The villain Killgrave (the Purple Man) in Jessica Jones has sent the price of Daredevil #4 shooting up about a third in lower grades and more than doubling in higher grades. What's next? Well, the announcement that "Lady Cop" Liza Warner would be joining the cast of Arrow on Season 4 has sent collectors shopping for 1st Issue Special #4 - her first appearance. Right now the book is selling for around $7- $10 in NM - a big increase from the 50¢ bins it was in before.

So maybe another reason run type books are selling better is one never knows when something that is currently nothing special might become something very special.

In our catalogs, we sell a lot of run books in average condition for less than Guide prices. Far too many to list, but a few examples of sales would include Action Comics #362 FN/VF @$14; Amazing Spider-Man #28 GD @ $67, #92 FN/VF @ $25; Champions #1 VF+ @ $20; Fantastic Four #59 VF @ $48; Green Lantern #81, #83, #84 NM- @ $100 each; Not Brand Echh #7 and #8 VF @ $13 each; Sea Hunt #4 and #6 FN @ $14 each; Thor #196, #197 VF/NM @ $24 each; Tomb of Dracula #22 VF @ $14; X-Men #16 VG/FN @ $30. Nothing spectacular with these sales - but over the course of a year they add up.

Of course we also sell books that are hot, in demand and are key issues, often times third party graded and encapsulated. Examples include Amazing Spider-Man #50 VG @ $150; #129 CBCS 9.0 @ $1000; Avengers #53 VF/NM @ $120, #57 CBCS 7.0 @ $300; Captain America #112 NM @85, #117 VG @ $75, #119 NM @75; Doctor Solar #15 CGC 9.4 @ $205; Incredible Hulk #180 CBCS 9.2 @ $650, Inhumans #1 CGC 9.4 @ $125; Isis #1 CBCS 9.8 @ $125; Jonah Hex #1 CBCS 9.4 @ $150; Marvel Super Special #16 (magazine) CGC 9.6 @ $175, 9.4 @ $130, VF raw @ $30 (Star Wars #39-44 are reprints of this magazine); Mister Miracle #1 CGC 9.4 @ $250;

Ms. Marvel #1 CGC 9.2 @ $175; My Greatest Adventure #80 VF+ (small color touch) @ $450, Star Wars #1 CGC 9.4 signed 4 actors from movie $1000; Superman's Girlfriend Lois Lane #106 VF/NM @ $100, Wonder Woman #179 CGC 9.0 @ $225 and X-Men #94 CBCS 9.0 @ $800.

A few other trends were observed. Better Copper Age (1984-1991) as well as some early Moderns (1992-on) are showing more collector interest. For Copper, New Mutants #98 and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 lead the pack. New Mutants #98 has far more collectors wanting a copy - but far, far more copies available. With a first print run of just 3,000 copies, TMNT #1 is far more expensive. Other keys include 1st appearances of characters like Constantine (Swamp Thing #37 plus Hellblazer #1), Preacher #1 and He-Man in DC Comics Presents #47. The original Valiant titles are being sought after by an increasing number of collectors as well. And one - Harbinger #1 - is proving to be no easy book to find in NM grades. That's surprising, given its 1992 publishing date, but the book is very prone to small spine splits, and lots of copies are being graded by the grading companies in the 8.0-9.0 range. Note that a lot of these books mentioned have movies in the works or being discussed.

Golden Age is showing some renewed interest. Largely because it is starting to look - to some collectors - more affordable than the hot Silver and even Bronze Age books. Focus so far seems to mostly be on well known characters. Classic Good Girl Art from the GA is also turning heads again. ECs are up in demand as well, with collectors especially interested in the more gruesome covers - by EC and their competitors of the day.

Interesting too it is... how history repeats itself. Almost 40 years ago, Star Wars appeared on movie screens and comic book racks. Selling over one million copies, it is credited with saving Marvel Comics from financial ruin in 1977-78. Now an all new Star Wars is playing to huge crowds at theaters - and another Star Wars #1 comic book has sold a million plus copies.

Movies and television shows featuring comic book characters - actual, in production, or merely rumored. That's the overriding trend to the market these days.

Al Stoltz
Basement Comics

I was talking to Michael Carbonaro, a NY Comic legend and he loved it when I said sitting in a chair at a comic convention that "This use to be fun!" It's not that I don't love that I have been working for myself for over two decades buying and selling old comics and related material but the business of it, the dollars and cents of it overtook the thrill of the hobby many years ago. Comic conventions of the late 1970s when I arrived on the scene as a young teen and through the booming 1980s were just a different kind of animal all together, they were, in a word, FUN! Very few items qualified as wall books and most stuff was still price point and books were bought buy the pile by people who had Robert Bell checklist cards or terrible handwriting on a note pad. Comic conventions were, after all, full of...well...comics! There were a few straggling artists that would sign for free or even sketch like Joe Kubert or Jack Kirby, but mostly it was aisle after aisle of comics.

Today's landscape at the "BIG" Conventions is a totally if not alien landscape compared to the comic shows of past and I guess that it's either progress or just the natural progression of the hobby as time goes on. What we found at many of the bigger shows we set up at in 2015 was a lack of old or even worse new buyers that had huge lists that they were trying to fill and add to their own personal comic shrine at the house. What we found was that we did sell comics to buyers but to buyers that had little or no real interest in the medium but bought them because of a particular theme on the cover of that issue.

What does sell at shows and online endlessly is Key issues! We sold plenty of Marvel and DC Key issues and most of them graded copies with the exception of an Adventure #247 and Detective #225 that made it to Charlotte before we could get them slabbed. A great run of Jumbo Comics were well received by collectors as was a really nice Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 First Print that we were lucky enough to come across. But there you go, Key issues sell. What we did with non-key issues or Silver and Bronze of Fine Minus or worse grade was to sell them, as price point items. They do seem to sell very well at $2.00 to $10.00 price points and if listed on eBay in our online store at Guide prices they tend to sell much better when discount levels reach above 35% off in a particular category like Silver Age Superheroes. We just sold a large stack of Dell File Copies of New Funnies out of the eBay store over the Holidays after they hit 40% off listed price so I guess even the most obscure stuff will go once a super bargain seems real. As I stated maybe a year or so before in one of my reviews was that maybe the cheapening of product could be a good thing if that brings back the type of buyer that then wants to buy long runs of books including keys to make a set of a series they are buying.

At the shows this year with the exception of Heroes Con and Baltimore, comic dealers were a smaller footprint in the room than at anytime I can remember. Wizard Chicago used to be a huge room full of comics but now has a contained area with comics and the rest of the room has all the other things that the new buyers love to seek out that are definitely not comic related. Wizard Philadelphia hosted a fraction of the former dealers that were present during the first few years of this show. Tampa Con was however a pleasant surprise and enthusiasm for comics coupled with a great staff that looked out for the comic dealers made it a decent stop regardless of constant pouring rain this year. The surprise for me was the one day Charlotte Comic Con run by Dave Hinson and Rick Fortenberry....a true comic gem of a show! 1,800+ people pour in for a large comic room, toys and Cosplay....if we can only figure out how to do that where I live I would be forever happy. It's one day and smaller shows like this that I feel still Archie Comics: Archie key issues are an all-time high demand. Collectors now realize most key issues from 1969 and older are scarce to rare in Fine 6.0 or better. In 2015 on eBay these were observed selling: Archie's Madhouse #22 (CGC 7.5=$3351, CGC 7.0=$1304, CGC 6.0=$800); Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #23 (CGC 6.0=$545, CGC 5.5=$456, CGC 5.0=$350) Betty And Veronica #320 (CGC 9.4 $999, CGC 8.5=$452). Most pre-1970 key issues are in the FR/GD to VG/FN condition price range, thus they rarely get sent to CGC. It is not uncommon to see VG range key issues bring NM Guide range prices. "Girls in Swimsuits" covers are better sellers.

The 1961-1962 era Horror & Sci-Fi issues are red hot and hard to find (they sell for 125-400% Guide) including: Archie #123-125,127, Archie Giant #17, 19, Betty & Veronica #70,73,75,77,79,80, Jokebook #58,59,76, Jughead #77-82,85,86,88, Laugh #128,129, 130 (Creature), #132,133,136,139, Life with Archie #9,11,35,39, Little Archie #18,20,22, Madhouse #6,8,11,13,15-26,29,35,36,38,42,48,51,58,60, Pals 'N' Gals #18, and Pep #151-156, 158.

The first 28 appearances of Cheryl Blossom (10/1982 to 6/1985) are STILL all red hot, especially the first appearance in each title. My new minimum price on these key issues is: VF/NM=$50; VF=$36; FN=$24; VG=$16; GD=$8. For first appearances in each title issues, add a 50-100% premium. This includes: Archie Comics #323-326, Archie's Girls Betty And Veronica #320(1st Cheryl appearance), #321-322, 326-328, Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #161(1st solo Cheryl Blossom), Archie At Riverdale High #89,90,92,96-99,103(1st date with Archie), Archie's TV Laugh-Out #91, Archie Giant Series #526 (1 pg. cameo), #530, Betty And Me #136 (1 panel cameo), Everything's Archie #104,107, Jughead #325 (2nd app.), Laugh #380, Pep Comics #396(9/1984). Canadian Newsstand Cover Price Variants exist on all of these, and bring a premium price of 135-200% over the current value of USA editions. CGC copies often sell in the $150-$300 price range and up. Explorers of the Unknown series #1-3 & 6 (cameo) featured Agent Blaze Blossom of the CIA, a futuristic version of Cheryl Blossom. From 7/1985 to 10/1994, there were very few appearance of Cheryl Blossom. The "Love Showdown" storyline from 11-12/1994 (Archie #429, Betty #19, B&V #82, Veronica #39) made Cheryl Blossom a superstar at Archie Comics, with VF/NM copies still at only around $10 range, they're sure to be a great long-term investment.

The Archie Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles & related comics are still in high demand. The 1988-1990 titles are uncommon, 1991 up issues had low print runs and are scarcer, (sell at 200-400% Guide) including: TMNT Adventures #1,19, 40-72 (#72 sells for $75+), Specials #6-10 & Digests, Mighty Mutant Animals (4/1992-6/1993) (Current VF/NM values are = #1-5=$8; #6-8=$12; #9=$18); TMNT Adventures Special (1992-1994; VF/NM values are = #1-6=$7; #7-9=$12; #10=$20); TMNT Mutant Universe Sourcebook (VF/NM values are = #1,2=$10; Update=$15);

Charlton Comics: DC Comics bought all the Charlton superheroes circa 1985 and most of them entered the DC universe thru the Crisis on Infinite Earths storyline. Thirty years later, collectors finally noticed. In 2015 DC and Warner Bros. announced a big screen Blue Beetle and Booster Gold movie was in development. Suddenly demand for the original Charlton key issues of Blue Beetle went into the stratosphere. This started a bid spike in demand for all the Charlton superhero comics, especially the major heroes that have now been well established at DC for nearly 30 years. The key issues are bringing 200-600%+ of Guide #45, while the standard issues sell at 120-135% Guide: Blue Beetle (see Captain Atom #83) #18-21(1955 150-200% Guide) V2 #1(6/1964; 1st S.A. DC Comics: Once again the DC Comics related movies, TV shows & other media comics are the most requested. All the major key issues of DC comics are suddenly up in demand by 200-400%. Collectors have finally noticed that pre-1970 DC key issues are Scarce even in Fine 6.0 or better. Most of the Silver Age key issues in the Marketplace are in the Fair to Very Good condition range, with high grade beginning at FN or better. Sellers are now getting a lot of key issues graded by CGC even in GD/VG through FN/VF grades (where they previously only sent in VF or better) and they are selling fast, as the high grade copies are now too expensive. First appearances of all the major villains for all the major superheroes have skyrocketed in demand, many now selling at 200-400% Overstreet #45 prices. Silver Age DC comic key issues are still very low in prices when compared to their similar Marvel counterparts. Speculators are also starting to buy up all the moderate and minor key issues that still have low Guide values, as many have not yet been broken out in price from runs of surrounding lesser issues. Since there are so very many issues to choose from, the simple appearance of a major villain or important character in an issues, now make it a minor key issue, while the surrounding issues with lesser characters remain slow sellers. For example, most Batman titles with these characters sell 200-600% better than standard issues: Anarky, Bane, Batgirl, Black Mask, Black Spider, Catman, Catwoman, Clayface, Deadshot, Harley Quinn, Hush, Jason Todd, Joker, Killer Croc, Man-Bat, Mr Freeze, Penguin, Poison Ivy, Ra's al Ghul, Riddler, Scarecrow, Talia al Ghul, and Two-Face.

Below I present a list of the most requested, best-selling, and most under-valued (items with potential & future key issues) of DC comics from 2015 (120% to 135% Overstreet #45 prices, unless noted: Absolute Vertigo #1 (300%), Action Comics #242(1st Brainiac 200-400%), #252 (1st Supergirl & Metallo; 200-300%), 253(2nd Supergirl), 254, 255, 267(3rd Legion), 276, 283-288; #297(1st full General Zod; 300%) #298(2nd full Zod; 150%), #300, 309(pre-death JFK 200%), #340(1st Parasite 200%), 347, 360, 373; Whitman Variants(200%); #419(Classic Adams-c; 1st B.A. Human Target VF/NM $99); #425; #432(1st B.A. Toyman, 1st New Toyman 200%); #440(1st Grell On Green Arrow 150%); #471-473(Faora Hu-Ul; 150%); #484(with rare 3-D Superman doll = 400%); #513(1st Full The H.I.V.E.); #521(1st Vixen-c/s; 200-300%); #552-553(1st-2nd Forgotten Heroes team; Immortal Man, Animal Man, Cave Carson, Congo Bill A.k.a Congorilla, Dolphin, Rick Flagg and The Suicide Squad, Rip Hunter Time Master & The Sea Devils; NM- $20) #595(1st Silver Banshee NM- $10) #583(150%); 835(1st Livewire in the mainstream DC Universe NM $20); Adventure Comics #210(1st Krypto), #229(10/1956; first Silver Age app. in title of G.A. version of Green Arrow with George Papp-a; first S.A. DC Comics back issue sales are dominated by their long-standing classic characters and teams, especially Batman, Flash, Green Lantern, JLA, JSA, Legion, Superman and Wonder Woman, so it might shock readers to realize all these titles were poor sellers with low print runs in the early 1980s. Circulation statements reveal these low print runs: Batman #357-402 (75,303 to 97,741/month), Detective #482-569 (64,635 to 89,635/month), Flash (1959) #317-350 (72,771 to 69,881/month), Green Lantern (1960) #150-195 (89,657 to 80,765/month), Justice League (1960) #234-257 (96,281 to 82,406/month), Superman (1939-1986) #403-423 (98,767/month), Wonder Woman (1942) #299-329 (73,256 to 52,145/month); Miller revived Batman, Byrne revived Superman & Crisis revived the others, with sales of these backbone characters never again low since the mid-1980s. Batman is by far the most collected DC character, as Spider-Man is to Marvel, yet 1960s Batman prices are far more affordable. Justice League is easily the mostly collected DC team series, yet prices remain more affordable when compared to Marvel's Fantastic Four of the same time period. Since Crisis and George Pérez resurrected Wonder Woman in 1987, she has become arguably the most important female character in comics history. Wonder Woman (1942) #51-130 are in very low supply on the marketplace, a very tough run to complete with GD-FN condition copies often bringing 125-200% Guide. Wonder Woman (1942) #177-220 are in steady demand. Wonder Woman (1987) #50-100, 121-226 are hard to keep in stock and usually sell at 25-100% over Guide.

Dell Comics: Due to the wide price jump from FN to VF or better copies, most buyers want only FN or lower graded copies, except for KEY issues. Strangely enough, the Guide has recently dropped GD-FN Prices, while leaving VF-NM prices alone, the opposite of what is happening in the REAL Market. Bestselling titles (GD-FN=120-150% Guide; FN/VF-VF/NM= 100-120% Guide) included; Adventures of Mighty Mouse, Air War, Andy Panda #35-56 (Chilly Willy backup-s issues), Annie Oakley, Bat Masterson, Beetle Bailey, Beep Beep Road Runner, Ben Bowie, Beverly Hillbillies, Bewitched, Big Valley, Brave Eagle, Bugs Bunny, Bullwinkle, Cheyenne, Chilly Willy, Cisco Kid, Colt 45, Combat, Creature, Dell Giants (Bugs Bunny, Lone Ranger, Little Lulu, Nancy, Tarzan, Western Roundup, Yogi Bear, etc), Dracula #1, Dunc & Loo, Felix the Cat, Flintstones, Flying Nun, Flying Saucers, Four Color (many people are attempting to collect the entire series; #601-1354 have the majority of the most requested issues, and far outsell the scarcer #1-600), Frankenstein #1, Fritzi Ritz (with Peanuts), F-Troop, Gene Autry #101-121, Get Smart, Ghost Stories, Gidget, Have Gun Will Travel, Hogan's Heroes, Howdy Doody, Huckleberry Hound, I Dream of Jeannie, I Love Lucy, Indian Chief, Jetsons, John Carter of Mars, John Wayne Movie Classics (all), Jungle War, King of Royal Mounted, Kona, Laramie, Lawman, Leave it to Beaver, Little Lulu, Lone Ranger #1-10, 112-145, Looney Tunes #1-50, 201-246, March of Comics (50% of this promo giveaway series are above average sellers), Maverick, McHale's Navy, Melvin Monster, Monkees, Movie Classics (Western, SF & Horror), Mummy, Nancy (Peanuts-s, Oona-s, Stanley-a), New Funnies #65-120, 241-288, Outer Limits, Peanuts, Pogo, Ponytail, Popeye, Quick Draw McGraw, Rawhide, Real McCoys, Red Ryder #1-118, Ricky Nelson, Rifleman, Rin Tin Tin #18-38(TV's Rusty & the Cavalry of Fort Apache issues), Rocky & Friends, Roy Rogers #119-145, *Sgt. Over 100 different Dell comics have a regular edition (with ad on the back cover), but also have a variant edition with a comic strip or other illustration on the back cover = these variants are in increasing demand and currently sell for 20-30% more the regular editions (I have many of the documented on the website under Dell and Walt Disney comics.)

Harvey Comics: The Back To The Future comics are suddenly in demand due to the 30th Anniversary of the first movie and the fact that Doc Brown travels with Marty and Jennifer to the year 2015 in Movie #2. Back to the Future (11/1991-6/1992; all Gil Kane-c) #1-4(VF/NM $20 each)Back to the Future: Forward to the Future (10/1992-2/1993) #1-2(VF/NM $20 each) Back to the Future Special #nn (#1; one-shot; 1991; the Animated Series; promo/giveaway; low print & scarce; VF/NM $30).

Beetlejuice comics are also suddenly in demand due to director Tim Burton confirming that production is to begin the Beetlejuice 2 movie. Winona Ryder will again play Lydia Deetz. (All sell in VF/NM for $20 each); Beetlejuice #1(10/1991; One-Shot; 1st Beetlejuice in Comics). Crimebusters on the Haunt #1-3(9-11/1992), Holiday Special #1(2/1992); In The Neitherworld #1(11/1991; one-shot; 2nd Beetlejuice in Comics).

All 1950-1975 Cartoon titles were in above average demand, in FA/GD thru FN grades. Most 1976-1990 were in moderate demand (mostly in VG to VF grades). Most 1991-1994 titles were in low supply & good demand, in any grades. The high grade Harvey file copies that have hit the marketplace in the last five years, currently have more supply than demand thus usually sell near Guide prices with no premiums, given a few more years these should all be in permanent collections and once again begin to bring premium prices.

Valiant/Acclaim Comics: From 1991-1993 Valiant comics were perhaps the hottest back issues on the planet bringing record prices, but then with Unity they started overprinting & eventually the prices crashed. 24 years later, nostalgic fans are now buying them back again and prices are on the rise.

Valiant & DMG Entertainment have superhero movies in development including: Harbinger and Bloodshot at Sony Pictures, plus Archer & Armstrong and Shadowman scripted by J. Michael Straczynski. Also in the works is X-O Manowar. Sony and Valiant will begin with a Harbinger movie #1 and #2, and a Bloodshot movie #1 and #2, followed by a crossover movie, Harbinger Wars, with both Bloodshot & Harbinger.

Current prices are very volatile, varied from 125-1000% of Overstreet #45, but prices settled down by 12/2015, when the movies get closer, many expect the wild ride to start again. A few of the key issues to buy up while still affordable include: (Print run details from Valiant Comics Com); Archer & Armstrong #0 (7/92; 1st Archer & Armstrong), #1, 2 (2nd Turok), #8 (1st Ivar the Time Walker), #26 (scarcer last issue); Armorines #12(26000 printed scarcer last issue); Bloodshot #50(9000 printed scarcer last issue) Bloodshot (Acclaim; Volume 2) #1(7/1997 only 9,000 printed) #16(1998; 5500 printed) Bloodshot retailer review copy v2 #1 (3/1997; 5000 printed) Bloodshot Last Stand Special nn (#1; 3/1996; 12,000 printed); Concrete Jungle: The Legend Of The Black Lion and The Black Lion #1(4/ 1998; 9000 printed); Destroyer #0(4/1995; US$2.50-c variant 7500 printed VF/NM $49) Doctor Tomorrow #1(9/1997 14000 printed) 12(7000 printed); Eternal Warrior (1992-1996) #1(8/1992) 4(11/1992; 1st cameo Bloodshot) 26(10/1994; scarcer last issue); Eternal Warriors (1997-1998) #1-6(low print) Eternal Warrior (Time & Treachery) retailer review copy v2#1(2/1997; 5000 printed); Goat – H.A.E.D.U S #1(4/1998; 9500 printed); Harbinger (1992-1995) #0(1992; Scarce Promo Pink Variant) #1(1/1992; VF/NM=$99; CGC 9.8=$750 CGC 9.6=$250) 2-7(Pre-Unity) 41(6/1995; scarcer last issue; 28000 printed); *H.A.R.D. Warren, Skywald & Misc Horror & Sci-Fi Magazines: There is high demand for Warren mags in all grades. The affordable GD-FN copies are the most requested and thus the hardest to keep in stock. VF/NM or better high grade copies are still good sellers if raw copies, with CGC slabbed copies being slower movers, due to the added cost of both the slab and the shipping, unless it's a good key issue.

Bestselling Warren mags & scarcer issues include (percentages of Guide #45 are listed): Blazing Combat #1 & Anthology (GD-FN=400% Guide; VF-9.2=200%), Comix International #1(200%), Creepy #9,11,19,29,76,79,146(GD-FN=150% Guide; 8.0-9.2=125%), #32(GD-FN=200% Guide; VF-9.2=150%), #10,14,17,18,34,39,46,47,50,53,63,70,71,78, 85, 91,113,132-145 (GD-FN=135% Guide; 8.0-9.2=110%), Best of Creepy paperback (VF $30), Dracula (TPB; GD-FN=200% Guide; 8.0-9.2=150%), Dracula (UK NEL/ New English Library mag editions 1-12 FN/VF set = $200); Edgar Allan Poe's Fall of the House of Usher Hardcover and Softcover (GD-FN=200% Guide; VF-9.2=150%), Eerie #1, 23(GD-FN=300% Guide; VF-9.2=200%), #8, 25, 48, 135(GD-FN=150% Guide; VF-9.2=125%), #17(GD-FN=400% Guide; VF-9.2=200%), Eerie #18, 24, 28, 38-41,45, 60, 81,125,128, 130-134,136-139 (GD-FN=135% Guide; 8.0-9.2=110%), Famous Monsters #1(VF=$2000; FN=$900; VG=$600; We sold CGC 7.0 for $1400), #2-10(VF = $300-$900 ea; VG=$150-400), #11-30(VF = $150-$300 ea; VG=$50=$125), 1962 Yearbook

The Skywald mags (Crime-Machine, Hell-Rider, Nightmare, Psycho & Scream) are in constant demand, are 3-10 times harder to find than Warren mags and very hard to keep in stock. These are great horror comics and a must try for fans of the genre. Fans especially like the issues with: Al Hewetson stories, Dracula, Edgar Allan Poe, Frankenstein, Heap, "Horror-Mood", H.P. Lovecraft, Human Gargoyles, Lady Satan, Nosferatu, Werewolf, etc. Especially in demand are issues with art by John Byrne, Everett, Jeff Jones, Bruce Jones, Kaluta, Marcos, Segrelles, Boris Vallejo, Wrightson, etc. The Horror-Mood issues are said to have inspired Stephen King. VF or better copies are especially difficult to find and in very high demand. Reading copies sell as fast as we get them. The "KING" mags (3-7/1971; Boris-a) are rare (#1 VF =$100; #2 VF=$70); Crime-Machine & Hell-Rider are also decent sellers (#1=150%; #2=120%); Nightmare, Psycho & Scream (GD-FN= 140-165%; VF-NM- = 120-150%). High grade copies are in high demand (Raw 9.6=300% Guide, 9.4=200%; 9.2=150%.)

Eerie Publ., Modern Day, and Stanley Horror comic mags (many are loaded with pre-Code Horror and published with no Comic Code) are in very high demand in GD-FN, especially in lowest graded Reading copies. About 75% of the copies we get in stock in FR/GD thru VG, sell within just a few weeks and usually most of what we have in stock is in about FN/VF to VF average. Most of the titles have scarcer issues and thus most of the sets are quite difficult to complete. The 1966-1970 issues and 1977-1982 issues are generally the hardest to find, thus the 1971-1976 issues represent most copies still found for sale in the Marketplace. FN/VF thru VF+ are all slow sellers, as most collectors want either Reading copies, or Investment copies. Strict graded VF/NM copies are more popular, with 9.2-9.4 copies in better demand. We sell them at these rates: GD-FN=140-160%; FN/VF, VF,VF+=100-115%; VF/NM=120-130%; 9.2=150%. High grade copies are in high demand (Raw 9.6=300% Guide, 9.4=200%; 9.2=150%.)

Whitman Comics: The Whitman variants of DC Comics are up in demand. They sold to readers from the general public, thus most copies are in FR/GD to VG/FN condition range. For these, higher grade starts at Fine or better, with perhaps only about 10% of surviving copies in FN 6.0 or higher grades. The eight June 1980 Variants are all scarce to rare, typically with zero copies of any of them on eBay in any grade. They include: Action #508, Batman #324, DC Comics Presents #22, Flash #286, JLA #179, Legion #264, New Advs. of Superboy #6, & Superman #348 (VG/FN range now list at $250-$500 on eBay. VF/NM copies are rare to non-existent.)

The rare 8-12/1980 Whitman comics (of former Gold Key titles) are back in big demand. Typically only about 10% of the copies in the Marketplace are in FN 6.0 or better. Demand for 8-12/1980 issues, with nice Fine or better Raw copies at record high asking and selling prices for raw copies on eBay. My new minimum selling prices on these is: (VF+=$100; VF=$80; FN/VF=$60; FN=$40; VG=$30; GD=$20). I often see over-graded Raw copies at absurd prices on eBay (like VG copies worth $30-40 listed at $200, and the sellers wonders why they don't sell). But note that the scarcest issues in strictly graded raw VF/NM to NM will sell for $150 to $300 each on eBay.

The Mttemp Whitman Collection won the CGC Registry Bronze Age Set of the Year Award (for her Pre-Pack Only 8-12/1980 and 1983-1984 Whitman issue set) beating out all the amazing Marvel and DC Comic sets out there!!!

In April 2015, new world records prices were observed (NOT my books); Huey, Dewey & Louie #65 (same Pre-Pack as Scrooge #179; CGC 9.4 = $2000); Little Lulu #260 CGC 9.4 = $1500; WDC&S #480 CGC 9.6 = $2000; Winnie The Pooh #22 CGC 9.4 = $1300. In July 2015 this lot of five comics sold for $4000: Winnie the Pooh #22 CGC 9.6, Donald Duck #222 CGC 9.6, Tom & Jerry #330 CGC 9.6, Pink Panther #75 CGC 9.6, and Popeye #171 CGC 9.8).

Notable recent Whitman sales of my own: Daffy Duck #129 CGC 9.6 = $399; Daisy & Donald #45 CGC 9.6; Porky Pig #97 CGC 9.6; Tweety & Sylvester #105(CGC 9.6 $499), 107(CGC 9.4 $299). Some of my own notable CGC sales in 2015: Daffy Duck #129(CGC 9.6 $399), Daisy & Donald

#45(CGC 9.6 $349), Porky Pig #97(CGC 9.6 $399) Tweety & Sylvester #105(CGC 9.6 $499), and #107(CGC 9.4 $299).

Michael Tierney Collector's Edition & The Comic Book Store

2015 was the year of feast and famine.

I always said that I'd never think about retirement until they stopped making comic books -- and then came the Summer of filler when the publishers stopped making all of their top titles and gave me a taste of what it's like to make a living primarily on old comics sales. Customers who have shopped with me over the last four decades either dropped out completely or their purchases fell to only a tiny fraction of what they traditionally consumed. They weren't finding what they wanted on the shelves.

The year began as a feast and in record-setting fashion. While far below my best month ever, May 2015 was a monster that was the best May in all of my 34 years as a comics retailer. After the Avengers 2 movie got the season off to a fantastic start, I was expecting a great Summer and instead experienced the most precipitous and steady sales decline that I've ever seen, only experiencing a slight bounce-back during what are traditionally the poorest sales months. My sales chart looks like the outline of a really scary roller coaster ride; which is exactly what the year was.

The decline began when Marvel and DC joined forces to put every retailer in America in the dubious position of going back to their first year in business -- by replacing the majority of their ongoing titles with one shots and mini-series. Ordering became a guessing game and I aimed what I thought was far too low. It turned out that I was too high on everything except the first few issues of the Secret Wars, which blew through printing after printing; but the series was cursed by the old scourge of shipping delays, which in turn delayed other books related to the event by, in some cases, well over a half a year! The spin-off mini-series were abject bombs. No one cared about the rehashing of Civil War, the Age of Apocalypse, or Spider-Island. Some titles like Planet Hulk, Old Man Wolverine and Years of Future Present sold moderately well, but still well below expectations and only a fraction of their original runs.

DC's weekly Convergence performed very badly, while the monthly two-parters that replaced their regular titles sold only moderately, except for the Kidd variants. Many of those unlimited variants with half-blank covers didn't sell a single copy. I've been trying to dump the overstock ever since, and no one is taking them even at cheap, cheap prices.

Sell through for both Marvel and DC was abominable and by the time September hit, sales were down nearly 50% from May. Event fatigue has never been more obvious as we had the traffic, but my average ticket sale dropped by nearly 75%, especially with long-term customers who mostly opted to take a pass until the regular titles returned in October -- with all new #1 issues, again; and then came an avalanche of #1s.

The reception for most of the oft-relaunched titles was lackluster at best. I'd ordered low on everything and again went too high. There was some excitement for a the first couple of relaunches, but that soon died out and was replaced by resistance.

The lateness of the last Secret Wars ending, which explained how the characters achieved the changes shown in those #1 issues, had many customers holding off until after they knew the reasons why.

The mantras that I heard repeated over and over were: "I don't know what's going on anymore and don't care anymore;" and "We know they'll just be starting them all over again in a few months."

In the old days, comic universes were so static that you knew no matter how impossible a situation might seem, everything would be back to the status quo by the end of every story. Nowadays, it's the complete opposite as there is no stability or foundation, and the ground is always shifting with universe-changing events that happen one immediately after another. Continuity has been replaced by a constantly rebooting chaos that even the most ardent consumer has difficulty deciphering. Publishers see an ever smaller bump with each restart, then sales drop below where they were before, and once more the cycles repeats. It's a self deprecating downward spiral. I've dropped my orders on most reboots by 90% from where their original titles were selling 20 years ago. Back then, the top selling books all had triple digit issue numbers; but they're all gone now and took their impressive sales numbers with them. All time sales highs have been replaced by all time lows that get lower every year.

Now, normally I see different reactions to changes in my two stores. When DC rebooted everything a few years ago, it really hurt my location North of the river, where most customers had been buying DC their entire lives. They all quit DC and starting buying Marvel. Meanwhile, in my South of the river store, where Marvel had always been the top seller, a lot of new readers started buying DC. The sales results at the two stores were polar opposites.

This time the results of the 'reboots that aren't really reboots' have been identical at each location; the fans wanted none of it. Contrary to what they had said months before, many did not return when their titles did. Every title saw a drop off.

But there were some success stories.

Anything Star Wars sold better than anything superhero. If not for Star Wars, Marvel's sales would have been in the same ultra-steep decline as DC, where even the once top seller of Batman plummeted after Bruce Wayne was replaced by Commissioner Gordon in a rabbit-eared suit. There were a few other new books that also sold well for Marvel; all of them aimed at female readers. Unfortunately, The Unbeatable Squirrel-Girl was beaten down with the relaunch, as was Silk, Ms. Marvel, and even Spider-Gwen. The girl book interest went down with them, as the All New Wolverine was a bust that sold only a fraction of the regular Wolverine. Up to her relaunch, anything attached to Gwen's name had enjoyed solid sales. Now customers only want Gwen-Pool. It wasn't any better for DC either, as the DC Bombshells bombed; selling a fraction of their previous sales.

Independent publishers with reliable non-super hero titles remained rock steady. While mainstream Marvel and DC titles dropped into numbers that were once the realm of independent publishers, they in turn often outsold the former 'big two' with a variety of far more accessible material; and it wasn't just a couple of the publishers. It was the majority of them. Publishers like Boom and IDW did especially well with the top selling All-Ages titles.

Kids really want comics, and here the Independents have passed Marvel and DC to a significant degree. The complaint I've always heard about mainstream comics for kids is that the publishers seem to think kids are imbeciles. In the movie recreation of the making of Doctor Who's first TV season, the BBC director explains the formula for making kid's entertainment to the show's producer, and I'm paraphrasing from memory, as; "You've got to dumb it down enough not to confuse the adults, but keep it complicated enough for the kids to stay interested," which is the exact opposite of the approach taken by American comics.

The overall popularity of comics is as great as ever. Unfortunately, Marvel and DC did a belly flop posing the possibility that this year marked the beginning of the decline of super-hero comics, and that the more comics become mainstream the less unique they become. Hopefully this year will only be a blip on the charts, not a new pattern, and just the result of editorial failures.

Harley Quinn's appearance in Scooby-Doo Team-Up #12 made it a strong seller.

Thanks primarily to a plethora of Star Wars titles with heavy demand stoked by anticipation for the seventh Star Wars movie, Marvel crushed DC in new comics sales. But in back issue sales DC absolutely walloped Marvel. Vintage comics activity has been growing steadily each and every year over the last decade, and sales for 2015 were triple that of five years ago.

Batman's drop in sales on the new shelves did not slow interest in his vintage books. Batman #16 (1st skinny Alfred) sold for $950 in GD+, #22 in VF- for $900, #31 in VG+ for $325, and #33 in VG+ for $375. Sales for the Volume 2 were brisk as well, with #1 selling in NM- for $110, multiple copies of #2 in VF/NM- for $10, #3 in NM- for $22, #4 in VF/NM for $30, and #5 in NM- for $27. The #40 variant with the Joker movie poster cover sold 5 copies in NM- for $15 each.

Other key Batman sales were Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #1 in VF for $42 and the first printing of Batman Incorporated #8, with the death of Damian, selling in NM- for $20. In Detective Comics, #83 sold in GD- for $90, #258 in FN- for $105, #575 (Year Two begins) in VF/NM for $22, #578 in VF+ for $20, and #880 in VF/NM for $65. There was nothing notable happening in the rebooted second Detective series, other than a copy of #23.2 with the Harley Quinn 3D cover selling in VF/NM for $35.

The first full appearance of Darkseid in Forever People #1 sold for #20 in VG-. Another Kirby Fourth World title, New Gods #1, with the 1st appearance of Orion and the 4th appearance of Darkseid went in FN+ for $35.

The once hot Green Lantern has really, really cooled. The cash register green long ago left the Lantern in my comic store just like it did in theaters.

Another issue on the upswing because of an upcoming movie was the New 52 version of New Suicide Squad #1. Sold multiple copies in VF/NM for $25 each. A lot of this demand also had to do with their member Harley Quinn. Harley was hot all through 2015. Sold multiple copies of Scooby Doo Team-Up #12 in NM- for $10 each just because she was on the cover.

The interest in Suicide Squad spilled over to the original series. Sold multiple copies of #1 in VF for $35, and multiple copies of #23 in VF+ for $30 to $40. Also sold the #1 of the 1987 series in NM- for $35 and the #1 of the first New 52 series in NM- for $25.

Rip Hunter, Timemaster #3 went in VG+ for $38, while #5 sold for VF- for $55.

The 1st appearance and origin of the Atom in Showcase #34 sold in FN- for $250.

Superman was flying high with Action Comics #53 selling in VG+ for #384, only a Fair copy of #54 for $77, a VG+ #55 for $423, #59 in VG+ for $422, #60 in VG+ for $422, #61 in FN+ for $652, #63 in VF for $500, #71 in VF for $461, and #78 in VG for $192. Some of those WWII comics were very racist in their depictions of the Japanese, so I was glad when they sold before going under the display counter. Sure enough, a couple who are opening a comic store in mainland China came in and were very disappointed not to have gotten a chance at them, saying how they could have sold books with covers like those for 3 times or more what I did.

Sold a number of Superman in his name series as well: Superman #7 went for $365 in GD-, #19 in VG+ for $617, #20 in VG- for $550, #21 in VG+ for $412, #22 in VG+ for $331, #23 in VG+ for $695, #24 in VG+ for $778, #25 in FN- for $574, and #27 in FN- for $493. These were the top sellers in a very active year for Superman. In the modern era market, we've been selling NM copies of the Death of Superman in #75 for $20 for a couple of decades now. By the end of this year demand finally drove that price up to $30. The first full appearance of Doomsday in Superman: The Man of Steel #18 sold for $25 in VF.

Crisis on Infinite Earth only sells two issues out of the back stock; #7 with the Death of Supergirl and #8 with the Death of the Barry Allen Flash. Sold multiple copies of each for $16 to $18 each.

Justice League of America v1 #34 (with a Joker cover/story) sold in VG+ for $19, while the origin and 1st appearance of the Red Tornado in #64 sold in VG- for $35.

The Silver Age Tales of the Unexpected #50 sold for $43 in VG- and #66 for $35 in VG.

The Watchmen still have not been forgotten. Sold multiple issues of the later numbers, all for $12 each in VF+.

Surprisingly, given her upcoming movie star status, Wonder Woman saw little demand this year. My only notable sale was #179 in FN+ for $37, which had a classic cover.

For Marvel, the Amazing Spider-Man saw brisk sales. Unfortunately, my early Silver Age stock was depleted after the run of movies, so the most notable sales were a couple of copies of #129 featuring the first appearance of the Punisher and the Jackal, in GD for $110 and in FN- for $250. The debut of the red and gold costume sold in VF+ for $15 and another 4 copies in VF/NM for $20 each. The second series was dead, but sold 2 first prints of v3 #4 (featuring the first appearance of Cindy Moon, who becomes Silk) in NM- for $25 and a second printing in NM- for $20.

Web of Spider-Man #1 sold in NM- for $20.

Marvel's Conan the Barbarian #1 went for $125 in VF-, #2 in VF- for $42, #3 in VF+ for $95, #18 in VF+ for $32, and #21 in VF/NM for $48, all of them with Barry Smith art.

Thanks no doubt to the highly successful Daredevil series on Netflix, the original Marvel comics saw renewed interest. The most notable sales were #10 in VG+ for $35, multiple copies of #11 ranging from $25 to $30 each, and the start of co-star Black Widow #81 in FN for $25. Even sold #20 of the unrelated Golden Age Daredevil in GD+ for $75.

Deadpool was very popular as promotional efforts for the upcoming movie grew anticipation. His 1st appearance in New Mutants #98 sold in VG+ for $80 before I could even get it under the display counter. Had a hard time keeping his many mini-series in stock. Deadpool was also selling books for other characters, as multiple copies of the Death of Wolverine #1 with the Deadpool party variant sold in NM for $15.

Wolverine's first full story in the Incredible Hulk #181 sold in GD- for $170.

Another title in hot demand because of a movie/tv connection was the Infinity Guantlet. Sold multiple copies of every issue in VF/NM for from $12 to $25 each, the $25 being the #1 issue.

Journey Into Mystery #72 sold in FN- for $45, and Thor's appearance in #117 in FN- for $35 and #120 in VG+ for $30.

Before Marvel got squirrelly and relaunched Squirrel Girl, her first appearance in the Winter 1991 Marvel Super-Heroes #8 had sold multiple copies in VG for $25.

Daisy (Quake) Johnson's first appearance in Secret War Book #2 sold in NM- for $25.

The normally dormant Sgt. Fury sold issue #5 in VG+ for $55.

Spider-Gwen sold half a dozen #1 issues in VF to NM for $12 to $15 each.

Marvel's Star Wars comics were hotter than the sun. Sold multiple copies of all the early issues, with #1 going for $22 to $45 in VF+ to FN+ condition.

Sub-Mariner #1 sold in FN+ for $40.

All of Marvel's Silver Age horror anthology titles were very popular. Strange Tales #90 went in VG+ for $38. The 1st Scarecrow in Tales of Suspense #51 went for $45 in GD+.

Thor stayed popular, both in Journey Into Mystery and his own name title. Thor #135 sold for $55 in VF.

Marvel abandoning their mutant universe all year had an adverse affect on the back sales of those related titles. I did sell a pair of copies of X-Men #94, one in FN+ for $215 and the other in VF- for $350. #100 and #101 went for $40 and $45 in FN+. Other than those books, the most notable sale all year was the 1st appearance of Dark Phoenix in Uncanny X-Men #134 in VF- for $25.

The first volume of Wolverine by Claremont and Miller has never slowed in demand. #1 sold for $58 in VF/NM for $58, #2 in VF+ for $32, #3 in VG- for $28, ad #4 in NM- for $44.

Sold a huge number of Fawcett's Marvel Family, all of them to one buyer; #2 in NM for $614, #3 in VF+ for $461, #4 in NM- for $461, #5 in VG+ for $100, #6 in VF- for $200, #7 in VF+ for $250, #8 in FN+ for $160, #9 in FN- for $100, #10 in VF- for $225, #12 in VF+ for $200, and #14, #15, and #16 all in VF+ for $200 each. These were very clean one owner books and the grades applied to them are very critical. That grading was also the case when I brokered the sale of a #1 issue with the same buyer for another seller at strict 2014 Guide value.

Well before it was announced that the Archie comic would be relaunching, I sold a couple of related titles. Archie Comics Annual #5 sold in GD+ for $57, the #1 issue of Archie's Girls, Betty & Veronica sold in VG- for $385, and Archie's Pals 'n' Gals #2 went for $45 in VG+.

We've always had a strong market for the Classics Illustrated, and that demand continued, but mostly for reader copies. Notable sales were all first printings; #83 Master of Ballantine in VG- for $22; #84 Gold Bug in NM for $41; #129 Davy Crockett in VG for $30; and #156 Conquest of Mexico in FN+ for $30.

Matt Baker art was key in the sale of Gunsmoke Western #56 in VG for $24, also (and surprisingly) in Lassie #22 in VG- for $28.

John Wayne Adventure Comics #25, the issue when photo covers resumed, sold in VG for $78. Lone Ranger #1 sold in VG+ for $130. United States Marines #3, with the classic Tojo-Octopus cover, sold in VG+ for $138. Western Roundup #5 sold for $20 in VF+.

Warren magazines like Creepy and Eerie have seen a recent increase in demand. Notable sales all had Frank Frazetta covers; Eerie #5 in VG- for $11, #7 in FN+ for $25, and #81 in VF for $16.

The popularity of animated carcasses continued as The Walking Dead #6 sold in NM for $66 and #7 in NM- for $60.

Demand for all sorts of Seventies, Eighties, and New Millennium miscellanea priced at $12 and under was strong all year, while Nineties comics continued to stuff the fifty cent bins and packs of ten for a dollar.

The big sales generated by back issues should have made this year a banner one, but instead that revenue went to offset the hurt from too much product from Marvel and DC with no sales history and very poor sell through.

Whew! We thought last year was hot for comics. This past season has been really sparkin'. On the one hand, vintage high grades and rarities have been in record demand, and on the other, many issues from the'70s through modern times have jumped to life because of movie tie-ins. The continued anticipation surrounding the ongoing release of superhero-related movies is fueling a mad rush to procure first appearances and key issues. New Mutants #98, Batman Adventures #12, Fantastic Four #45 & 52, Marvel Super-Heroes #13, Walking Dead #1, 19, 27 & many others are all maintaining increasing interest. This phenonenon differs from the early '90s speculation boom in that these books are holding their value well, as opposed to the boom/bust rise and crash of prices on Modern keys in the '90s.

The continuing focus on key issues, even in the Golden, Silver & Bronze Ages has been causing a regrettable trend. Many collectors have been abandoning the time-honored tradition of putting runs together in favor of pursuing primarily the key issues only. Maybe we should find a way to designate every book as a key in some way!

Anyways, we primarily deal with higher quality books, and we do indeed sell many books from regular runs of titles. Mostly though, what our clientele wants is "The higher the grade, the better." There's a certain incomparable excitement to finding amazing high grade books. In this category, prices have risen pretty steadily due to the relative scarcity and competitive demand for them. In the mid-grade to lower grade category (we're talkin' 1965 & later with Marvels, 1961 & later with DCs) we often list the books at a discounted price to sell them more quickly. There's a large group of collectors eager to get a great deal on collectible and readable issues, and they sell well, especially the most popular titles like Amazing Spider-Man and X-Men. The Marvels from 1964 and earlier are scarcer in general, and everybody wants them, so we struggle to keep up with the demand on those. DCs from the mid-1960s and earlier are far more scarce than Marvels, especially in the higher grades. However, Marvel mostly rules the roost with collectors. I'd estimate at least a 4 to 1 ratio there.

CGC and now CBCS continue to fire up the market a great deal. Many collectors and investors tend to trust the third party graders to take a lot of their stress away by verifying a grade and professionally checking for restoration on a book. Restoration can be a complicated matter, as there are many levels, some more frowned upon than others. Also, many folks don't realize how restoration can affect the price value of a book. For example: a copy of Incredible Hulk #2 in unrestored FN+ is valued at $2,000. A copy restored to FN+ condition would be valued at $700-$800. CGC is still top dawg, but CBCS has established instant credibility with Steve Borock as one of the principals of the company, and they're doing a bang-up job overall. We still sell the majority of our book au naturel, but have increaded the number of certified books we offer. It definitely takes some of the guesswork out of buying books, especially online. We tend to have a lot of different buyers at shows. Some collectors like to see and handle the books in person, so a big show is the right environment for them. Online, we provide scans, which isn't quite the same, but it's very convenient. We've worked at building trust that you'll get what you pay for online. Even though most shows have turned into pop culture events that are dominated by cosplay, gaming, publishers, celebrities and many other things, the comic presence is still significant. A good show has almost a carnival-like atmosphere, with a buzz of activity in various areas.

Back to the comics themselves. Marvel's Silver Age #1s are off the charts. They seem like they go up weekly, since there's so much demand. Incredible Hulk #1 is a phenomenon, but as great a book as it is, should it be worth 2.5 times more than Fantastic Four #1? Makes no sense. Fantastic Four #1 is the book that started it all for Marvel. Seems undervalued at the moment, if you ask me (which you didn't.) Early Marvels from 1962 & 1963, when they were still just a very small company, are genuinely scarce in higher grades. In the internet age, they've become less scarce, but very high grade copies for most issues are prized.

The first half of the 1970s contains many sought-after keys and non-keys as well, while the latter half of the 1970s contains only a small number of high demand books. It seems that the mid 1970s was the time when people in general became more aware of the value in collectibility. All collectibles and antiques experienced the same sea change at around the same time, and everyone began saving everything and keeping these things in top condition, so ironically, that eliminated scarcity, and therefore value. DCs are more of a scattershot proposition. Some of the scarcer and more key issues are in high demand, but many others seem to lanquish for a while or need to be literally discounted to sell in a reasonable span of time. But, those scarcer issues are REALLY scarce. In the late '60s and early '70s, Adams rules! Neal Adams that is. Issues with his cover art, or better yet, cover and interior art, have remained extremely popular.

Harley Quinn has taken off as well. Her first appearance in Batman Adventures #12 and subsequent appearances are on fire. There's much more going on, but that's all for us this time out.

May the many moons of Moonipoor shine on y'all!

Everything New Is Old Again...Or, How Hell Finally Froze Over

So it's been, what, forever that the black hole of the '90s was verboten? It appears that time really does heal all wounds. Comics from this period - is it Copper, Modern, what? - are en vogue. Let's forget about Gold, Silver, and Bronze for a little bit as we examine some more recent books. After all, with prices being asked by dealers for high grade Bronze now reaching 5 figures I suppose that in 10-15 years the big dealers will just start marking their comics "price-less" and earmark them for the Smithsonian.

Collectors are starting to focus on more modern books and look for new keys as they are being rapidly priced out of the old, classic ones. Is there a massive correction coming? Maybe. It's hard to fathom how anyone can ask $4,000-$5,000 for an Iron Fist #1 CGC 9.8 because it's tough in grade but that's the reality. Collectors are starting to try and identify future keys.

Some books that I'm starting to aggressively target as a collector are modern keys from the '90s that owe a large thanks for their ascension to new media like movies and TV. My biggest key is Silver Surfer #44. We are past the point of looking for key first appearances of characters and now looking for items. This is the first appearance of the Infinity Gauntlet and there is no more important item in the Marvel Universe, especially if you go by their cinematic universe as all roads are leading to Thanos and the Infinity Gauntlet in Avengers 3 Parts I and II as well as future Guardians Of The Galaxy films. I'm pegging this book - very hard to find in high grade - as the new New Mutants #98. I think there are far fewer Silver Surfer #44s. Copies graded 9.8 are selling between $350-$400.

Another great modern Marvel key from the films as of late is Iron Man #305 which has the first Hulkbuster armor. In a totally forgettable movie and one of the worst Marvel films in my opinion, Avengers 2: Age Of Ultron had arguably one of the greatest superhero movie fight scenes with Hulk vs. Hulkbuster Iron Man and Hulkbuster almost emerged as the breakout star of the movie (it certainly wasn't Quicksilver and Scarlet Witch) with endless product and merchandise featuring Hulkbuster. Kids loved him! You're most likely looking at $150-$175 for a 9.8.

I find any Deadpool issues you find (rarely) in comic shops are hot. These include his early X-Force appearances, first limited series, and first solo book. I'm skeptical because the R-rated movie will be a hard sell and pretty much only appeal to the already established Deadpool fans, not new fans in kids.

Comics from 1982-1997 might have had high enough print runs to satisfy the hobby, collectors need to start taking note of comics from 1998-present. Print runs are incredibly low for some titles and key books from this era, and stores simply do not have back issues in grade from even recent back issues of 5-10 years old. If you missed a comic like 2008's Guardians Of The Galaxy #1 you will be forced to be gouged on eBay. My favorite keys to target right now from this more recent period are time sensitive as they will be affected by the upcoming Captain America: Civil War movie. Amazing Spider-Man #529 (first Iron Spider) through #538 (Civil War issues), Captain America #6 (First Winter Soldier), #22-24 (Civil War issues), and Iron Man #12-14 (Civil War issues). Another favorite of mine is Amazing Spider-Man #654 which is the first appearance of Flash Thompson as Agent Venom. You can also dig for a great stand-alone issue in Amazing Spider-Man #574 which tells the origin of Flash Thompson's injury in Iraq War.

If I'm being purely speculative here I'm also starting to load up on Vigilante appearances. He is just far too great a character in both design and story to miss out on appearing on film or TV. He's easy to translate, has a fantastic costume and I always thought the Adrian Chase Vigilante was much cooler than The Punisher. Just a warning.

Keep collecting.

The endless appetite of comic book movie and TV shows for heroes, and to a much greater extent, villains, has caused almost any comic book with a first appearance to skyrocket in value. The Purple Man is the main villain on Jessica Jones, so Daredevil #4 takes off. A minor character like Heat Wave appears on The Flash. Suddenly people are looking for Flash #140. I'm not sure yet if this is good or bad for the hobby. Who knows? I guess I'm glad this kind of attention will bring new collectors to the hobby, but speculating also brings the danger of a bubble and crash, and if that happens it will drive people from the hobby. Regardless, it's clear that other media (film and TV) have become driving factors in what is hot in comic books.

Collected Editions: One of the great things about comic collecting today is the incredible selection (dare I say a golden age) of collected editions. I'm talking about the incredible selection of reprinted comic material, the trade paperbacks and hardcovers that adorn more and more shelf space at comic books shops and bookstores. These collections are an easy way to collect and read mass quantities of classic stories and characters from the past.

Marvel led the way when they created their Marvel Masterworks series back in 1987, a line of books to reprint classic Marvel stories from years past, complete and in order. As of this writing in 2015 there are 226 volumes in the series and it's still going strong. DC had a similar line called DC Archives that unfortunately came to an end in 2013, but still managed over 200 volumes of classic material before it ended. Hopefully with their move to the West Coast complete, DC will now be able to focus on either re-starting or replacing this line. Marvel has also moved towards a more complete line of trade-paperbacks called the Epic Collection. This line offers more issues per volume than the Masterworks and intends to reprint complete runs of major titles. The volumes are not being released in chronological order, allowing them to offer volumes from different time periods simultaneously.

The omnibus format has really gained steam as one of the preferred formats for collected editions. Omnibus volumes often contain 500 to 1000 or more pages, and offer an efficient way to collect huge story runs in one place. The popularity of this format is evident in the proliferation of titles that are available, with not just title runs collected but also volumes that focus on a writer, artist, or character. Some of my favorite omnibus releases of 2015 were: Batman: The Golden Age Vol 1 which contains all the Batman stories from Detective Comics #27-56 and Batman #1-7, JSA Vol 3 (completing the entire JSA run), and Werewolf By Night, which contained the complete series #1-43 plus additional appearances from the same time period.

The most prolific format is the typical 5-6 issue trade paperback or 10-12 issue hardcover collection, and these formats cover almost every title out there, especially for more recently published comics.

New or continuing reprint series in 2015 that I recommend include: Marvel Masterworks Luke Cage, Hero for Hire Vol. 1, Marvel Omnibus Werewolf By Night (complete 1970s series), Marvel Omnibus Hawkeye by Matt Fraction, Marvel Epic Collection Star Wars: The Old Republic Vol. 1, DC Omnibus Batman: The Golden Age Vol. 1 (all the early Batman stories), DC Omnibus Wonder Woman by George Perez, Fantagraphics Complete Carl Barks Disney Library, Fantagraphics Donald Duck and Uncle Scrooge Don Rosa Library, Fantagraphics EC Comics Library, and Dark Horse Archie Archives.

Pulps: A lot of my collecting in 2015 focused on pulp magazines. I'm getting close to completing my Weird Tales collection, a series that boasts the early appearances of Conan the Cimmerian, Solomon Kane, King Kull, Cthulhu, and many other,s and also showcases some incredible cover artwork by Margaret Brundage and others. I still need most issues from the first year of publication, 1923, but I have almost every issue from 1924-40, the era I've been focusing on. It's been a labor of love putting this collection together, and I'm super-excited to have made such progress.

I also filled in some missing hero pulp key issues that I've been looking for, including the first issues of The Phantom Detective, Nick Carter, The Lone Ranger, G-8 and His Battle Aces, and The Secret Six. I love these pre-cursors to comic book heroes and try to pick them up whenever I can find them.

Pulp Sales: Here are some pulps I sold in 2015, usually because I upgraded that issue. Weird Tales Oct. 1927, Good, $250; Apr. 1928, Fair/Good, $110; Jul. 1931, Very Good, $150; Aug. 1931, Very Good, $150; May 1932, Very Good, $200; Sept. 1932 (1st Brundage cover), Fine, $260; Oct. 1932 (2nd Brundage cover), Fine, $225; Jan. 1933 (2nd app Conan), Very Good/Fine, $350; Feb. 1933, Fine/Very Fine, $325; Apr. 1933, Very Fine, $500; May 1933, Fine +, $260; Oct. 1933 (Batwoman cover, Conan story), Very Good -, $675; Nov. 1934 (Conan story), Very Good/Fine, $300; Jul. 1936 (Conan story), Very Good, $225; and Jun. 1938 (classic bondage cover), Very Good, $275.

In last year's market report I addressed questions I had been receiving about whether or not I thought the vintage comic market was overvalued, would crash and if comics would continue to increase. I believed in the comic market last year, and I continue to believe in the vintage comic market this year. Another strong year has proven what I already know, and I am ready to double down on my statements from last year. Not only will the vintage comic market continue to increase in value, but regardless of what increases we see in the upcoming year, the comic market is still undervalued. I say this as I see a rush of new collectors and investors coming into the market. Where are they coming from? Other collectibles like cards, coins, stamps and "fine art" (I put fine art in quotes because I am referring to artwork outside of the comic art market, of which I consider to be very fine artwork. I am tired of hearing that art by the likes of Rothko, Picasso and Warhol is above those of Kirby, Crumb and McFarlane). As I've said in previous reports, in five years we will look back on the prices being realized on many vintage comics and wish we had a time machine to travel back to 2015 to scoop up all these bargains.

In 2015 Metropolis and ComicConnect, through public sales, private sales, monthly auctions and Event Auctions did very well on a wide variety of material. It wasn't just the monster Golden and Silver Age keys we've become well known for in the marketplace. It was the Bronze, Copper and Modern Age comics that are now becoming collectible and selling for great money. The market is diverse, and collectors and investors who grew up in the '90s are now trying to recapture their childhood through the purchase of their favorite heroes who were introduced in that decade.

Speaking of which, Deadpool became the highest grossing R-rated film of all time. Prices on New Mutants #98 have soared. I have been bullishly buying this first appearance, because just like Hulk #181, with Wolverine's first appearance, this comic will continue to become more highly coveted. And watch out for Wonder Woman! She was the big hit from Batman v. Superman. Audiences clapped when she appeared in costume for the first time in a movie. ComicConnect just auctioned off All Star Comics #8 CGC 9.0 for a record $411,000.00. Again, in a few years from now, I believe we will look back on this sale and see it is a great deal.

The Metropolis Gallery, the only art gallery in NYC dedicated to original comic and fantasy art opened in April of 2015 and has been a major success. Our openings have been jam packed with art fans, collectors and investors. Our inaugural show, Frazetta: Icon, drew in over 500 people opening weekend. Our second show, Masters of Fantasy, which showcased the art of Greg Hildebrandt, Jeff Jones, Jeremy Geddes, Bernie Wrightson, Barry Windsor Smith, Mark Texeira, Don Maitz, Neal Adams and many other popular artists grossed over a quarter million in sales on opening night. Our third show, Star Wars: The Art of John Cassaday was a smash hit with art fans around the world and brought in nearly $100,000 in sales. Through our network of collectors, investors, art dealers and gallery owners, Metropolis Gallery is quickly making heads turn in the original art market.

We always try to promote the collectability and investment aspects of comics as well as the art form itself to the next level. This year we introduced the world to the Impossible Collection. One of the world's finest comic collections is going on a world tour, which began in early 2016 in London. The collection is owned by Ayman Hariri. Initially it was supposed to be a collection of characters he loved, but working together with him over the last 16 years it grew into an amazing collection. The crown jewels of the collection are two Action Comics #1s in 9.0 condition. To learn more about the collection and follow the tour, try the "true to life" social media app Vero.

Comics continue to amaze me. The creativity artists and writers put into their stories is incredible. They keep pushing the bounds of the medium, of genre, storytelling and of course art. I hope it continues to make your heart race the way it does mine. Until next market report, Peace, Love and Comic Books.

Sales of major keys like Action Comics #1 rarely occur via the convention circuit. Most sales occur online.

Frank Cwiklik - Metropolis Collectibles

Our gallery is pretty big, but not huge. Not, like, 200+ person capacity huge, but big enough for us to comfortably have regular art shows of original comic art and fantasy art. The reason I'm sure it's not 200+ person huge is because we had that many, maybe as many as 300 people, show up for the opening weekend of the Frank Frazetta exhibit that inaugurated the Metropolis Gallery and there just wasn't room for them all. Luckily, that number was spread out over the course of a full weekend, rather than all at once, but still.

We learned two things from that weekend: one, our experiment with opening a gallery dedicated entirely to comic book art was a no-brainer and an instant success. Two, there's no going back – the vintage comic market has definitively separated from the nostalgia market and pop culture frenzy found at cons and comic shops and has become its own unique and specific market.

The opening show, at which we displayed a tremendous and deeply impressive selection of works by the great fantasy art pioneer, included the first appearance of his iconic "Death Dealer" painting outside the family museum, an event that attracted worldwide attention and global press coverage. We've since presented acclaimed exhibits featuring fantasy and comic art from the Brothers Hildebrandt, Jeffrey Jones, Ken Kelly, and others; and a spectacular display of art from the new series by modern master John Cassaday. We have a lineup of wonderful shows planned for the coming season from a number of modern and vintage comics masters, and our showroom in Herald Square is constantly buzzing with visits from tourists, professionals, luminaries, and even classes from nearby art academies, proving that the art of comics has reached a level of respect and acclaim only dreamed of as recently as a decade ago.

We've also noticed the buying patterns of our major clients changing dramatically: most of our high-ticket, high-profile sales (of which there have been many) have happened in our auctions or by phone and email, with very few, if any, occurring at cons. With the exception of our sale of an Action Comics #1 at the past San Diego show, the major keys (outside of Amazing Fantasy #15, which is still just barely in the price range for con sales) simply aren't sold, or even offered, via the convention circuit, as buyers prefer to bid and negotiate directly with us online, or via professional communication, rather than fight their way through the din and mayhem of the average con. While new buyers do appear at cons, and are hungrily swallowing up as many lower-priced Bronze and Modern keys as they can find, the serious sales and serious buyers have shifted to a model that resembles that of the antiques or fine art market. I've been noting and predicting this trend for years, but can now confidently say the shift has happened, and the future is now.

We've noticed that post-1975 keys that were once punchlines, or at least bargain books, have exploded in the past year as eager new collectors scared off by Golden and Silver Age values are looking for keys with which to start their collection. It remains to be seen whether common books like Batman Adventures #12, New Mutants #98, or X-Men #266 will hold their value in the years to come. On the one hand, any dealer will tell you that these books have been turning up in good shape by the truckload for years; however, the continued demand for, and rise in value of, Incredible Hulk #181 shows that demand can outstrip supply even for common books and can lead to a consistent rise in value and liquidity. Time will also tell whether these new buyers will transition into Silver and Golden Age material. I've noted that there are new, younger buyers starting out in more esoteric fields, i.e. WWII covers, Good Girl Art, ECs, etc., rather than the heavyweight keys, and who are bypassing the Modern key market entirely. I don't pretend to have a crystal ball – it'll be interesting to see if this new trend is a longterm change or a temporary spike. Having said that, anyone who bought Modern keys for a buck apiece in a bargain bin five years ago is getting a hell of a return on investment lately!

I don't want it to sound like I'm down on cons – in fact, the London show this year was the strongest we've had yet, and our Wizard Chicago show in 2015 was a killer con. There's also no doubt that getting out in front of the comic-crazy public via the convention circuit helps generate goodwill, new clientele, and solid PR. But there's no getting around it – while show dealers and collectors still do plenty of wheeling and dealing on the show floor, the action for nearly everyone is now online and on the phone, through auctions and websites. Allow me to indulge my inner Criswell a moment and say I PREDICT! Within ten years, the vintage comics market will split entirely from the convention circuit to become its own art-show-style market, with private showings, galleries, and VIP booths, perhaps not even happening within the larger cons themselves. As comic cons become more and more shopping malls for cosplayers and autograph hounds (and no doubt that market is booming and shows no signs of slowing in popularity), expect serious buyers and sellers to slowly drift away to smaller and more sedate, artfully prepared shows that highlight the historical and artistic impact of vintage comics and comic art.

The speed with which this hobby has grown in ten short years is simply incredible. It's due to the passion, dedication, and heart of countless hundreds of thousands of fans, collectors, dealers, and artists around the globe who have championed it since long before there were any movies, TV series, or tie-ins. Chances are, if you're reading this, you're one of those folks. You should probably feel pretty good right now. On behalf of all of us who work in this field and have toiled to make it grow, with your help, thanks.

As the last word in the Overstreet Market Report 2016, let me assure you, the market has never been stronger. This is my seventh market report and I may have said the same thing each and every year, but that's the state of the current market and the path we're all on. ComicConnect and our consignors enjoyed our best year ever. There simply isn't enough material to satisfy demand so we see hammer prices that, at first blush, look crazy to the layman, but in hindsight, are genius.

First appearances of characters that find themselves in movies or TV shows are still driving the market, just like last year, the year before, and the year before that. Books that were ignored in the back-issue bin are now selling in the thousands of dollars. Netflix has single-handedly driven back-issue prices with their numerous Marvel shows.

We've been telling anyone who would listen for years that Wonder Woman comics were some of the most undervalued books in our inventory. She makes it in to a movie or two and folks get excited and prices soar. Our recent sale of a VF/NM 9.0 All Star Comics #8 at $411,000 was four times last year's Guide. Still, that price is going to look ridiculously cheap in a very short time. New investors in high five and six-figure comics are driving the market while pulling along prices in their wake.

Top 2015 Golden Age Sales: Action Comics #1 CGC 5.0 $658,000, Action Comics #2 CGC 9.4 (R) $92,111, Action Comics #13 CGC 8.0 $102,001, Action Comics #15 CBCS 7.0 $22,500, All Star Comics #8 CGC 9.0 $411,000, Archie Comics #1 CGC 6.5 $61,000, Captain America Comics #1 CGC 8.0 $288,000, Detective Comics #27 CGC 6.5 $725,000, Detective Comics #27 CGC 4.0 $475,000, Detective Comics #27 CBCS 3.0 $305,000, Detective Comics #29 CGC 7.5 $90,555, Detective Comics #31 CGC 5.0 $87,000, Detective Comics #31 CGC 4.5 $86,000, Marvel Comics #1 CGC 9.4 (R) $117,939, Marvel Mystery Comics #37 CBCS 9.4 $27,007, More Fun Comics #53 CGC 9.8 $141,003, More Fun Comics #55 CGC 9.4 $60,000, More Fun Comics #73 CGC 9.0 $160,000, More Fun Comics #73 CGC 8.0 $99,000, Pep Comics #22 CGC 6.5 $135,000, Superman #1 CGC 2.0 $88,000, and Superman #1 CBCS 2.5 $80,333.

Silver and Bronze Age: The Incredible Hulk #1 and Amazing Fantasy #15 are still top investment books and I'm adding Showcase #4 again to the list. The first appearance of Barry Allen has surpassed Peter Parker's first appearance in the same grade in several sales lately. As of this writing, the Flash is red-hot and should be added to your portfolio.

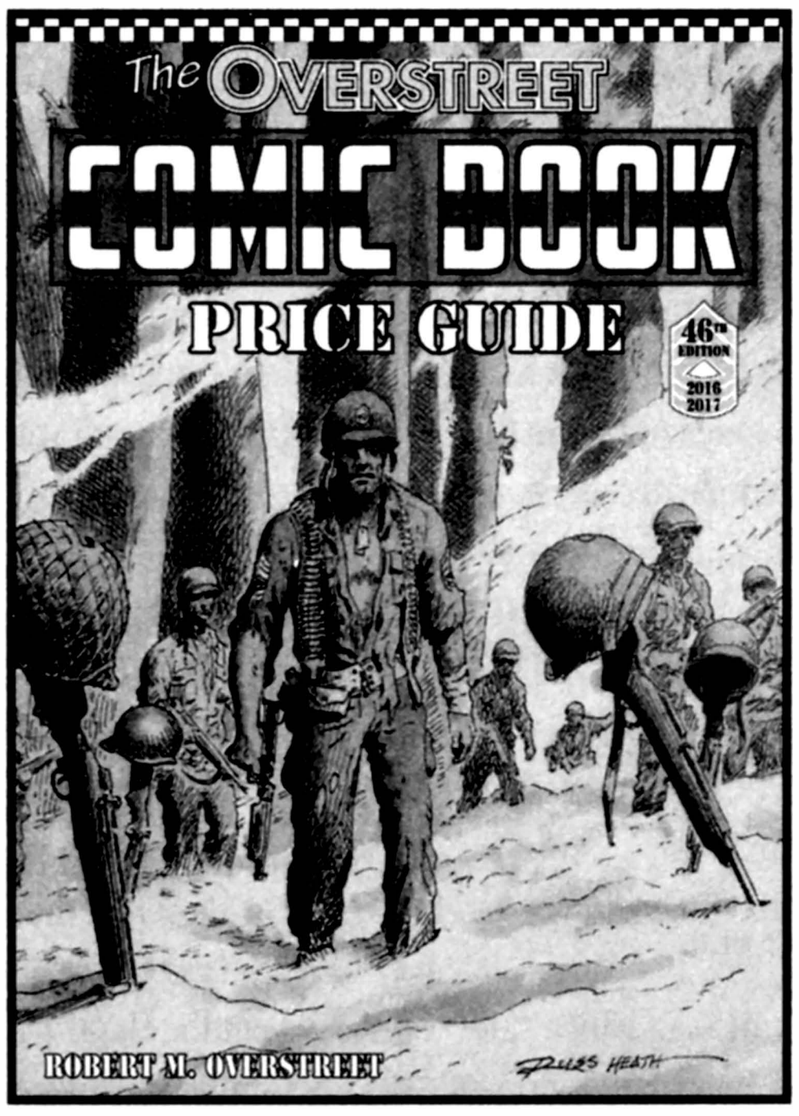
Top 2015 Silver, Bronze and Modern Sales: Action Comics #252 CGC 9.0 $34,500, Amazing Fantasy #15 CBCS 9.0 $237,000, Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 7.5 $73,500, Amazing Spider-Man #1 CGC 9.4 $135,000, Amazing Spider-Man #3 CGC 9.6 $45,001, Batman #171 CGC 9.6 $25,000, Daredevil #1 CGC 9.6 $47,000, Fantastic Four #5 CGC 9.4 $43,000, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 8.0 $70,000, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 8.0 $64,000, Journey into Mystery #83 CGC 8.5 $32,800, Showcase #4 CGC 7.5 $78,500, Showcase #4 CGC 5.0 $29,722, Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.4 $105,000, Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 9.0 $34,000, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 CGC 9.8 $27,222, and X-Men #1 CGC 9.0 $34,001.

Original Art: Covers and splashes have dominated our headlines in our 2015 auctions and marketplace. ComicConnect brokered Frank Miller's Batman and Robin from the Dark Knight Limited Edition Hard Cover in a private sale for $175,000 while the splash to Swamp Thing #1 by Wrightson hit $56,000 at auction. The cover to Amazing Spider-Man #160 by Gil Kane and John Romita hammered at $35,005. A gorgeous Jack Kirby Ant-Man splash for Tales to Astonish #39 sold for $27,999 and a double page spread from Frank Miller's 300 went for $23,500. Another masterpiece by Kirby, page 6 from Fantastic Four #16 went to the highest bidder at $18,533. Kent Williams' and Jon J. Muth's cover to the trade paperback for Havok & Wolverine: Meltdown sold for $45,000.

I expect much more of the same in 2016 and we're already lining up material for the rest of the year's auctions. Prices are driving inexorably higher and buyer's need to jump in now.

THE WAR REPORT

by Matt Ballesteros & the War Correspondents (Andy Greenham, Mick Rabin and Brian Sheppard)



Welcome to the 8th official installment of the War Report, an independently developed annual account of the war comic category as seen by long time devotees of the genre. We produce this digest each year not only for our own edification, but for the true enjoyment we get from sharing with the public and the fans of the genre our thoughts via Overstreet's annual Price Guide publication. If you are a return reader, welcome back! We are delighted to have you perusing our offerings again. If you are new to the report, allow me to describe our purpose and the general nature of this chronicle. The War Report was created in an attempt to satisfy our own questions about a myriad of topics related to the genre. Among other subjects, we aspire and continuously seek to uncover the motivations of the artists and creators, we attempt to illuminate lesser known titles, to spotlight key issues, to reveal details about specific characters, and to speculate about value and/or market importance of war comics in the larger comic book industry. Lastly, and perhaps most fulfilling, we muse candidly about all aspects of collecting and enjoying war comics and the art form upon which it exists.

Before we dig in, I want to pause and once again thank Mick Rabin and Andy Greenham for their continual contributions to this report. And I am delighted to welcome back our sojourning brother trooper, Brian "Shep" Sheppard to the squad. If you get the opportunity to visit the CGC forums you will find that these three fine men are pillars of the Silver Age "War Comic" thread. Not only are they invaluable resources of information through that source, but in my opinion, their wealth of knowledge and direct input each and every year gives this report its validity.

News from the Front

The Best Cover on the Battlefield

Our hope is that you are currently reading this report within one of the very limited edition copies of the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide featuring a dedicated Sgt. Rock (and Easy Co.) cover drawn by none other than the great Russ Heath! If not, run to your local comic store and be sure you get your hands on one of these rare and unique editions. This likely may be the one and only time this price guide will feature artwork specifically drawn for Overstreet by original war comic royalty. If you are even remotely a war comic fan—it is a must have! Couple that with the fact that only 2,000 copies of this limited edition version were published, and you can't have a more enticing proposition to get your hands on one of these copies!

The idea to have Russ Heath illustrate one of the covers for the price guide came about two years ago. It was something Overstreet's J.C. Vaughn and I had discussed over the course of several conversations. Shortly thereafter, I was fortunate enough to spend time with Heath both at San Diego Comic-Con and at the Big-5 War Summit dinner, where he and I had the opportunity not only to talk about it, but also to make the idea a reality.

As some of you may know, Mick Rabin has been instrumental in keeping the Big-5 War Group alive and vibrant; an organization of fans and contributors dedicated to the perseverance of war comic appreciation and fandom. Through this federation, Mick and other members (yours truly included) not only seek to promote war comics and share in the indulgence of the comics themselves, but they also seek ways to give back to the creatives and veterans who propelled the genre into existence. In short, the Big-5 War Group is always looking for ways to support those comic creators directly. For instance, it has sponsored certain war-comic artists to appear and/or attend conventions, it has subsidized their inclusion to the Big-5 War dinner (each year during San Diego Comic-Con), and whenever possible, raised funds (even if small amounts) strictly in an attempt to contribute said monies directly to these long-retired artists. All fun and fulfilling goals to say the least. If you are ever in San Diego for Comic-Con, ask about the "War Dinner." It's an esteemed yet casual event comprised of merriment and fascinating conversation, and includes a small fundraising auction for the organization (and for the aforementioned artist support endeavors). The auction, unsurprisingly, is brimming with war comic-related items.

In any event, Heath and I worked out the details for him to create a one-of-a-kind war cover for the Overstreet Guide, and he set forth to do so. I was surprised and quite honored to have Heath ask me to conceptualize the creative theme for the cover. I took a little time and came up with an idea which I had a colleague sketch into a preliminary comprehensive (thanks Will Smith!). Heath, in turn, used this as the thematic guideline. We could have gone a hundred different ways with what to have Heath capture in his art. Certainly I could have suggested numerous singular characters, or even a group shot of key characters. But, of course, I decided that it had to be Sgt. Rock. Simply put, as most in the hobby and even pop culture perceive it, no one character represents war comics more definitively than does Sgt. Rock. The real pressure was determining how to present Rock and in what setting. Not to sound contrived, but as this was clearly a one-shot opportunity, I wanted to capture the essence of all that is and was the man, the soldier. I therefore proposed a dramatic setting. Rock emerging from a dark, smoldering war-torn forest; an allegory of the trials and tribulations he faced and conquered as told through his several hundred story saga. The men in the background, representing Easy Company of course, are a reminder of the symbiotic strength in their unit. All faces were to be discernably battle-weary, with losses apparent. And yet Sgt. Rock is moving onward, determined… a rock of war. An affirmation that he is here to stay, that he is going to endure.

Needless to say, we're pretty darn pleased with the result.

Field Report

After some calm in 2013 and 2014, war comics are seeing action again in late 2015 and 2016! There are consistent sales happening on either keys, high grade, and/or low census war comics on almost ANY publishing line or title. We are hearing and seeing reports of enthusiastic purchases of war comics selling for multiples of Guide. Not surprisingly, titles that continue to move well include a good swath of the DC Big-5, but they are accompanied by Atlas war titles, EC war in high grade, Fiction House, and Don Winslow issues in the various titles in which he appeared. This bullish uptick is both positive and negative for us long-time collectors of war comics. On one hand, it is definitely good to see that our collections are maintaining and continuing to flourish in their value. On the other hand, now that the lull in rising prices witnessed in 2012 to 2014 is ending, finishing out collections for completists just became that much more difficult. Of course, the lull through those years never diminished the desirability and subsequent sales of key high-grade war comics. Those continued their high-dollar growth during that time.

But even with key issues, high-grade copies, and scarce war titles maintaining strength, a great number of mid- to low-grade war comics are available that are not only affordable, but also continue to experience pretty stagnant growth. This of course is good news for said completists and for new enthusiasts to the genre. We have mentioned these sluggish war comics in previous reports, and we credit their lagging value to poor grade quality, over-pricing, lack of buyer interest, and in some cases over abundance. Just to be clear, typical low- to mid-grade comics in the war genre range from a 1.8 to a 4.0 grade. Mid-high to high-grade in our genre normally range from 4.5 to 8.0. In a good number of cases, super high-grade for war comics (published prior to 1964) top out at 9.0. There are of course one-off higher grade specimens here and there, but that's a rarity, and you are still talking about one or two of these examples in existence. Even throughout the late 1960s and early 1970s high grade war comics that are bestowed with a 9.8 grade are more than likely the single highest copy. Here's a good example of scarcity in market: Sgt. Rock #302, published in 1977 (which is the seminal first issue of the series) has only five 9.8 copies on the CGC census. Compare that to Star Wars #1 (published the same year mind you) which boasts almost 400 9.8 copies on census. OK, so there was a larger print run. Still, it doesn't change the fact that war comics in high grade in any era are very, very tough to find.

So, let's look at some of the war comics that are getting a lot of attention right now:

Don Winslow continues to sell well regardless of which title he is featured in, only re-emphasizing what an important figure he is/was to the development of the war (adventure) genre. In fact, a Merwil Publishing Co.'s 1937 Don Winslow #1 in CGC 7.5 sold for about $2600 since our last report. This is one of the earliest Don Winslow appearances that you can get your hands on. Don Winslow was subsequently featured by Four Color Comics #2 in 1939, and then in 1943 when "Don Winslow of the Navy" had a decade long run with Fawcett. But, if you really want to get your hands on his earliest comic book appearance you're going to have to find a copy of Popular Comics #1. Published in 1936 by Dell, it also features the 1st comic book appearance of Dick Tracy. Good luck finding it.

If you are a Fiction House fan you're probably very aware that both Fight Comics and Wings Comics have been solid Golden Age war comic pillars. Both draw attention from war comic fans and Fiction House comic line collectors. There we've witnessed multiple copies of Fight moving at a good pace, for example Fight Comics #24 in CGC 7.5 going for about $1000. Wings Comics, which is a tough Golden Age comic line to collect due to its great numbers (a 123 issue run), also gets a good deal of action regardless of issue number. Conversely, the first issue is flying high with 2015's reported $15,500 sale of the CGC 9.8 Mile High copy. A bargain, in our humble opinion, for the single highest known copy of Wings #1 (an issue which sits atop our Golden Age war ranking each year). Plus, as I have mentioned before… 9.0s are considered high grade in our realm. So a 9.8 should be put on a pedestal. By the way, someone recently picked up a CGC 5.0 copy Wings #1 for only $650. Nicely done!

It's good to see that the war-centric comics in DC's *Showcase continue to have their day in the sun. Although there are only a few issues dedicated to the war theme, specifically issues #45 (Sgt. Rock), #53 and #54 (G.I. Joe), #57 and #58 (Enemy Ace) and #104 (OSS Spies at War), these mid 1960s war comics still stand their ground. Currently, Showcase #58 in 9.4 and 9.6 seems to garner anywhere from $500 to $650 per copy.

Marvel's Sgt. Fury* #1 has experienced some small value hits to its armor. We're only talking a few percent lost in general across the board though. We are not sure yet if this is a short term irregularity, or if it's a direct correction to the enormous momentum this comic had experienced in the last few years. If you have been following our reports then you've witnessed its strong ascent in the past five years, going from our 10th overall ranked war comic to 2nd, behind Sgt. Rock's Our Army at War #83. We believe and assert that the comic's value and ranking benefitted greatly from the halo effect of the Marvel movie hype. So perhaps it stands to reason that there should be a small market adjustment. Couple that with the fact that there are well over 500 copies of the comic on census and it seems justifiable that Sgt. Fury #1 may readjust a bit in the near term. That said; take advantage of this realignment period as we certainly do not anticipate that this comic will stay in the trenches in the long run. Some approximate sales figures garnered by Sgt. Fury #1 since our last report include: CGC 3.0 $500, CGC 5.0 $800, CBCS 5.5 $950, CGC 6.0 $1700, CGC 7.0 $2600 and CGC 8.5 $5000.

EC War, particularly high grade copies, is maintaining interest among collectors. Issues of Frontline Combat and Two Fisted Tales above 9.0 have no problems selling, and those coveted 9.6 and 9.8 Gaines File copies that pop up here and there are selling for $2000 or $3000 a copy. Notably, key issue Two Fisted Tales #18 in CGC 9.6 just went for about $3600.

Similarly, Atlas War continues to move, whether third-party graded or not. Raw copies of Atlas war of any title continue to move, particularly the titles Battle and Combat. Atlas war in general is still very affordable compared to DC war and Fiction House. We highly recommend getting your hands on these while they are still attainable. Especially high grade copies… if you can find them.

Speaking of DC War, this pinnacle war line continues to grow in strength. Across the board, the Big-5 (All American Men of War, G.I. Combat, Our Army at War, Our Fighting Forces and Star Spangled War Stories) remain the leaders in the war comic genre. And two of the five titles continue to rise with additional fervor: Star Spangled War Stories and Our Army at War. Star Spangled War Stories (SSWS) specifically with Mademoiselle Marie appearances and Dino tales continue to sell at a searing pace, and early to mid-canon Sgt. Rock's in Our Army at War (OAAW) show no sign of waning. For instance, we witnessed a SSWS #85 (2nd Mlle. Marie) in CGC 6.0 go for about $800 recently and were not surprised by the solid price for a 6.0. We anticipate any of her appearances to continue to grow in demand and value for the foreseeable future. We also witnessed multiple copies of SSWS Dino issues in the CGC 9.0 arena selling for anywhere from $500 to $700 each. Someone however did manage to cage a SSWS #90 in CGC 8.0, the rare and coveted first issue of the series (there only 31 of any grade on census) for only around $2600! A steal in our eyes, that comic should easily be gobbling down $3000+. Well done reptile hunter.

Of course that brings to us Our Army at War. Early Rock appearances continue to drive the front lines forward. Let's start with OAAW #83. Some people refer to this issue as the Action #1 of war comics, and who are we to argue with that? Though, I personally think more similes could be drawn to Detective #27 (right?). Nevertheless, this issue continues to grow in value as it is sought out by both war enthusiasts and any collector of key comics (last year it had the distinction of not only breaking into the top 20, but ranking #18 in Overstreet's Top Silver Age Comic Book list). Throughout the last year we saw sales for almost every grade under 6.0 garner solid numbers. From $350 for a mere CGC 0.5 to $5500 for a 6.0 copy. Interestingly, but for a couple of sales, in the last few years we have yet to personally witness a single copy of the comic book go for less than previous sale figures. The biggest sale of note since our last report was the auction close of a CGC 8.0 copy that went for nearly $17,000. With only 120 individual issues on census and less than 10 copies making up the 7.5s, 8.0s and single 9.0. This is a tough key to get your hands on in grade.

Speaking of early Rock, ensuing issues of Our Army at War continue to sell, regardless of whether they are key. Case in point, a CGC copy of issue #108 in 9.0 (25 issues after Rock's first appearance) went for a hefty $2800. It is the single 9.0 on census, so perhaps that's the reason for the high dollar sale. However, we discussed that sale as a group and had difficulty finding comparable phenomena with other Silver Age books. We understand 1st issues and key issues selling for high dollar… but, non-key comics 25 issues after the 1st appearance? Unusual. Punctuating the fact that any Rock book from the early 1960s commands attention, respect, and garners serious bidding. Consequently, even 125 issues after OAAW #83, 9.6 copies are getting $500 or more per comic. OAAW and Sgt. Rock endure.

Battlefield Ops

A Word from a Brother in Arms

(Salutations from Andy Greenham)

Andy Greenham here, reporting in from Canada. Well, another year has passed and another Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide War Report calls. This is always a very exciting time for me. Chatting about war comics is one of my favorite pastimes.

In this year's edition, I plan to talk about two things. First, the Survivor Series of Jerry Grandenetti cover contest, held on the CGC chat boards. Second, I'll talk a bit about the feelings that one can have after selling their collection.

Taking Cover (By Andy Greenham)

I'm a member of the CGC chat boards, and every year I hold a contest called the Survivor Series. This contest is similar to the older TV show called Survivor, where they vote someone off the island. In this case, we start with a bunch of comic book covers, and people vote for the ones that don't impress them as much. For 2016, the topic of our Survivor Series was Jerry Grandenetti. For those not familiar with Jerry, he has drawn a multitude of covers during his 15-year run with these DC war books. We started the contest with just over 100 covers. After the first two rounds of the contest, we were down to just 40 covers. It was difficult to "vote off" covers from this round, as the quality of his work as an artist was very apparent. We went from 40 covers down to 20, and then from 20 covers down to his top 10. Many people who were participating in this contest were expressing how painful it was to be choosing which covers should be removed from the contest. The comic books and their covers are just this good!

Top 10 Best Jerry Grandenetti Comic Cover Contest:

10. Our Fighting Forces #9
9. Star Spangled War Stories #64
8. Our Army at War #70
7. G.I. Combat #69
6. G.I. Combat #44
5. G.I. Combat #75
4. G.I. Combat #71
3. Our Fighting Forces #20
2. G.I. Combat #83
1. G.I. Combat #76

So, there you have it! The winner is G.I. Combat #76!! Just looking at the top 10 list you can see that six of these were from the run of 30 washtone (greytone) covers that G.I. Combat had. This run, GIC #75-104 is known as the "Perty Thirty." It's amazing to see that Jerry Grandenetti drew 13 of those covers, and no great surprise that one of those won this contest. So, hats off to Mr. Grandenetti, and a thousand THANK YOUs for your incredible contribution to this great genre.

G.I. Combat #76

Victories and Tactical Losses

(By Andy Greenham)

As some of you know, I became a pretty serious collector of DC war comics. It wasn't until after I bought Chris Pedrin's Big Five Information Guide back in 1994/95 that it became very clear to me what I wanted to focus on.

I had decided that I wanted to assemble a collection of every DC war comic from the Big Five. That's All-American Men Of War #127(#1)-117, G.I. Combat #44-288, Our Army At War #1-301 (plus Sgt. Rock #302-422), Our Fighting Forces #1-181, and Star Spangled War Stories #131 (#1)-204 (plus Unknown Soldier #205-268).

Well, you can see from such a list and large number of books, that putting a run of all of these together is not overly easy. It takes lots of time, lots of money, and I would have to say lots of dedication and heart. Assembling this collection, for me, was extremely enjoyable. Not only was I learning more about the creators involved, I expanded my network of dealer connections and also made many like-minded friends along the way. So, to be honest, I loved my DC war collection and was ever so proud when I achieved the goal that I set for myself. It wasn't until about two years later that came the hard part.

For most people, at some point, life takes different twists and turns. Circumstances change. For me, I made the decision to sell off my collection of DC war books. Imagine, something that engrossed me so deeply, so strongly, and for so long, was going to be sold off. It wasn't that my hands were tied and that this was my last option, no. I made a decision that this was best for me and my family, and so I carried it out.

Most of my books were sold through Heritage Auctions, and to be honest, even though going through something I didn't really enjoy doing, I had a very pleasant experience with them. I sold many through the CGC boards, trying to offer up some good books at cheaper prices. Many of these latter books, I lost money on, but that wasn't a big deal to me. They were going to my friends and fellow collectors.

After my books were gone, there was actually a big weight off of my shoulders. It was kind of uplifting, to tell the truth. Yes, my pride and joy collection was gone, but I actually felt free. Free from attachment, free from a material possession that had me focused on for a very long time. In this regard, I knew I made the right decision. I feel that for some people, attachment to material goods can take control of their every thought. It can consume a person, and they find themselves caring about nothing else. I was pleased to know that this would not happen to me.

It wasn't until I met up with a group of DC war enthusiasts that something very strange happened. My family and I attended the San Diego Comic-Con one year. This was the first time that I met the wonderful Mick Rabin and Matt Ballesteros, and the first time that I came face to face with some really beautiful DC war comics since I had sold my collection off. Let me tell you all now, honest and straight to the point, I was blown away. When I saw so many nice books all together, lined up for me to drool over, I felt a true hollow feeling inside my chest. I was being torn apart. One side was so happy for the owner of these books, and the other side was thinking "what the heck were you thinking when you sold yours off?"

This was the first time that I regretted selling my books. All of a sudden, I started to get filled with feelings of want, want, want. I've had these feelings before, and I had felt liberated when I was free of them. Uh-oh, they're back now. Lol!

Those feelings did pass, eventually, without too much trouble. It just took a little self-control and reassurance that the decision to sell was the right one for me, at that time. Since then, I have not had those feelings, and it has been years now. All of this being said, I'm not sure how I'll act the next time I see those books again. Andy Greenham, over and out.

The Longest Battle (By Mick Rabin)

There wouldn't be too many people that dispute the claim that much of the focus of the Overstreet market reports, since they began many years ago, has been around pursuit of the keys—major or minor. It's an understandable dynamic. Most people, including yours truly, function as collectors on a limited budget. I was a teenager when I sprung for my first copy of the Overstreet Guide—the Norman Mingo Alfred E. Neuman cover. Even then, there was considerable messaging around the most drool-worthy comics in the color gallery section, as well as the advertisements that offered to pay the highest dollar for what amounted to the stuff of dreams for any budding comic enthusiast. It's the keys that a lot of people want because if they're going to spend their money on something, they want to try to get a segment of those dreams.

For a collector like me, those mega keys always were well beyond my limited budget, so I really focused on specific genres or artists that I could afford. I know a few "all-consuming" collectors (you know who you are) who genuinely love and collect an incredibly wide variety of things; but most collectors (vs. speculators) tend to narrow their focus. For me, the focus on war comics was related, at least in part, to what I read as a little kid. Joe Kubert's covers seared an indelible mark on my pre-reading brain that I never recovered from, even if I hadn't yet processed the notion that comic art was drawn by a real-live artist—much less an incredibly rich array of comic creators whose artistic styles--in and of themselves--drove collectors to pursue everything that they ever drew.

For that and other reasons, the war comics genre—specifically DC war comics—was where my focus landed. Little did I know how broad a brush stroke that actually was when I started to collect it pretty seriously nearly three decades ago. It began with a few issues of Enemy Ace and quickly expanded to virtually everything between 1954 and 1969 for the DC war titles. I have known only a handful of collectors who ever completed an entire run of DC war comics and two collectors who amassed the even more daunting complete Atlas war collection. Every one of these collections was painstakingly assembled piecemeal, no more than a few issues at any one time. The grade range on these piecemeal collections was more expansive than VF, probably because the no-less devoted people who amassed them are more pragmatic than I could ever hope to be. It took me years to finally arrive at a rather nasty conclusion. Essentially, I could go my whole life and likely never complete them all if I was limiting myself to VF or better copies, but I am stubborn and decided long ago that I could live with that reality. A lot of long-time dealers see me at shows, still combing the bins, and express that they're a bit shocked that I'm still looking--decades after I began–but that says something about how truly difficult this quest has been.

I can name only a few occasions--since I started seriously collecting war in 1989--when any substantial high grade DC war collection appeared. There were some that were assembled piecemeal (Andy Greenham's and Keith Marlow's jaw-dropping groups at Heritage and Clink as well as Brent Moeshlin's sale on the CGC message boards back in 2008) and some original owner collections made it to auction (Mound City, Savannah, and Twin City stand out prominently). All of that happened in the last 10 years. Prior to that, there were zero piecemeal collections from 1989 to 2007, but in that same time period, there were about four original owner collections (that I'm aware of). That's 18 years. The big ones I'm thinking of are the Newsboys (Motor City), Massachusetts, and Salida groups. If you consider the Bethlehems, Circle 8s, River Cities, Kubert, Don Rosa runs and a few others, you might have a 4th group between

ALL of them. I might be missing something, but not sure.

If you look at the Gerber Photojournal Guide under a 10X lupe, you can see "Bethlehem" on the G.I. Combat issues. It's hard to see any defects when the thumbnails are so small, but they DO look pretty nice. Except for about three issues (including the OFF #1 that passed through my hands and a couple non-DC war issues), I have never seen any of those Bethlehems in person. That hasn't stopped me from dreaming a LOT about them in the interim. Regardless, those piecemeal and original owner collections have been dispersed to the winds over the past 27 years, but I've snagged an issue or two from nearly all of them in the pursuit of that complete DC war comics run. I've often speculated that, if I happened to be on the "ground-floor" when those collections came out AND I actually had the capital to purchase them, I might have some semblance of a piecemeal–but complete–collection of DC war comics; but those are optimal circumstances that few collectors are ever fortunate enough to bring into alignment. Maybe, if I'm lucky, I'll have a report in a subsequent Overstreet market report about which issues eluded me the longest. With any luck, I'll close in on the final issue before another 27 years passes. . .or maybe not. Look for an update in the pages of the 2043 Overstreet (groan)!

Intel from the War Correspondents
The 'Post-War' Era (by Brian Sheppard)

As most war comic collectors know, the genre can be broken down into a few broad eras. Atom Age (Early Atlas, DC, EC and other publishers), Silver Age (dominated by DC titles, with significant contributions by Marvel and Charlton), and Bronze Age (largely dominated by DC titles until the titles ended their runs in the late 1970s to mid 1980s.) Those have been the focus of collectors for years. But it's worth looking into what I call the 'Post-War' era of war comics, namely titles that have been published generally since the main DC titles ended their runs.

There's a surprisingly large volume of new material in the war genre that has been published since the mid-1980s (amazingly, now over 30 years ago!) While the quality varies, I think this is territory worth exploring for enthusiasts of the war genre, as war comic fans tend to be content-oriented, actually reading and re-reading the books.

The most successful of these 'Post-War' titles is Marvel's The 'Nam, published between 1986 and 1993. This was a title with a big idea – to follow the war in Vietnam in essentially real time, with characters coming and going on a month by month basis. This remains a really important title, with incredible story-telling and some outstanding art throughout the run from Mike Golden (particularly on covers), not to mention art jobs by John Severin (#12) and Russ Heath (#65). Entire runs can be found on eBay quite regularly, for less than the cost of a nice, mid-grade Silver Age war book, so there's good value there. If you don't want to commit quite that much, start with issues #1-#15, or some of the reprinted trade paperbacks. For the time being, they are still quite common and affordable.

Another Marvel title from this era is Semper Fi, a book dedicated exclusively to the experiences of one family in the U.S. Marine Corps through different eras. Fine art in here by John Severin, Andy Kubert, and Sam Glanzman. Definitely worth picking up.

While Marvel seemed to have the most success in longer-running war titles in the modern era, there are many outstanding efforts in the genre from DC, running almost to the present day. When Sgt. Rock ended its regular run, DC followed up with a regular series of Sgt. Rock Special issues, with a rich vein of choice reprint material. These are dirt cheap, and are a great way to get classic DC war tales without breaking the bank. And some new material appeared throughout these books too – in particular, look for Sgt. Rock Special #2 (1994), with a brand new Haunted Tank story drawn by none other than Russ Heath. It's a gem.

Other fondly-remembered DC war characters came back to life in various guises during this era. The Unknown Soldier had a few separate re-incarnations, as did Weird War Tales. Enemy Ace had two significant re-births in this era, which together take us to the end of Hans Von Hammer's life. The first is an outstanding graphic novel illustrated by George Pratt, War Idyll. It's a work of art, and it belongs in any serious collection. Then, Von Hammer appears in World War Two in Enemy Ace – War in Heaven. That might sound cheesy, but the authors treat the subjects with absolute respect, and the story (and continuity) is seamless. That another killer Russ Heath art job fills issue #2 is just icing on the cake. Finally, Joe Kubert took a masterful bow on Between Hell and a Hard Place, a full length Rock and Easy Company tale, written by Brian Azzarello and drawn by Kubert. Excellent stuff.

Other DC war appearances have cropped up throughout the DC universe over the past few decades. There are literally too many to list here, but some things to look for in particular are: the Losers Crisis Special, Sgt. Rock in Swamp Thing #82, Enemy Ace in Swamp Thing #83, and The Haunted Tank in Anarky #7. Scour this guide for other appearances – they are out there for sure. And we'd be fools not to mention the Mlle. Marie tale in 2010's Star Spangled War one shot, with a great cover by Brian Bolland. And those are just a sample – there are lots of appearances, short series and one shots with DC war characters in recent years that are worth keeping an eye out for.

Other publishers got in on the fun too. Apple Comics published Vietnam Journal and High Shining Brass, both from the pen of Don Lomax, and both are a worthy addition to any collection for their frank portrayal of that conflict. Lomax later followed up with a series titled Gulf War Journal, from iBooks. Wayne Vansant, who drew war tales in Marvel's short-lived (and generally excellent) Savage Tales (1980s) and then The 'Nam, has been a veritable one-man industry when it comes to war stories. From Battlegroup Peiper (1991, Caliber Press) to Days of Darkness (1992, Apple) and Medal of Honor (1994, Dark Horse) to graphic novels about the Korean War and the Civil War, Vansant has kept the war comics flag flying high with interesting, historically-based tales of conflict.

Also of note are two graphic novels. Sam Glanzman's A Sailor's Story (Marvel, 1992) recounts more tales of his time aboard the USS Stevens. There's also Doug Murray and Russ Heath's Hearts and Minds (Marvel, 1990) is a harrowing Vietnam tale, with typically amazing art from Heath.

So, if you think war comics ended with Sgt. Rock #422 in 1998, think again. There's good stuff out there in the bins just waiting for you. Next time you hit a shop or a show, you'll find it worth your while to nose around and find some of these lesser known war books of the modern era.

The Spoils of War

Being that this is a price guide, replete with advisors forecasting and predicting value, we would be remiss not to include a small segment dedicated to our opinion on war comics to target for potential investment. Although our passion for the genre is steeped in the appreciation of the art, stories, theme, and creators, we are keenly aware of (and willingly participate in) the asset speculations that are inherent in comic book collecting. Though don't be misled. The more ardent of us would collect these fine comics, whether they were $1 or $2500 each. That said, being that it is a niche corner of the comic collecting hobby, we understand that our passion and pursuit of war comics has some effect on market value, and we are fairly certain that this report, and seemingly our bias, has some impact on the segment. Nonetheless, we love to speculate and discuss amongst ourselves, what is doing well, what is losing momentum, and what seems unstoppable.

These are merely the opinions of seasoned war comic collectors. We urge you to use your own judgment, research, and caution when taking heed to any of our investment opinions.

Long Term Return

High Grade Bronze Age War – As time passes it is clear that the Bronze Age is becoming a stronger and stronger era to invest in for titles on any genre. What makes this an exceptional opportunity is that Bronze Age war is incredibly inexpensive compared to other genres of the same era. Might be a good time to snap up high grade, yet still cheap copies of Blitzkrieg, Combat Kelly, Sgt. Rock, Unknown Soldier, Weird War and key issues of the Big-5. Be patient, but we believe these comics will have their time in the spotlight not too long from now.

Short Term Return

Blazing Combat* (Warren) – Finally, there seems to be action around this war comic/magazine hybrid. This innovative short running line has always been on our hot list. With its incredible art and riveting storylines it's a war comic aficionado's favorite. It's been a problem to ever recommend it though, because as a mid 1960s magazine format war title, it is extremely difficult to find in grade. There are two 9.0s and a single 9.4 of #1 on census. That said, this politically in-tune comic magazine is a must have for any fan of war comics, Warren magazines, and a slew of hot-shot '60s comic artists. Get your hands on the highest grade of any these that you can… and of course target issue #1.

Losing Ground

Sgt. Fury* #1 – As I mentioned in the Field Report above, Sgt. Fury #1 is taking a little hit. We are blaming it on post-Marvel movie market corrections. Couple that with the 500 copies on census and it makes sense that it is taking a small dip. Yet, it is not that big of an adjustment. So, if you own a copy I wouldn't panic. But, if you don't, then this is a great, great time to get one. Now, typically in the "Losing Ground" segment, we are telling you which comics to be weary of. In this case, we say: take advantage of this!! Consider this if you are doubtful. Disney owns Marvel. This intellectual property is now in their tome of mythos. 'Nuff said.

Gaining Ground

Our Army at War* #84 – With OAAW #83 finally securing its foothold as Sgt. Rock's first appearance, and OAAW #81 settling in as the defined final prototype, OAAW# 84 is taking its rightful role as Sgt. Rock's true 2nd appearance. Having been misclassified for so many years has kept it from its proper financial calling. However, collectors are figuring it out and it is starting to warm up. Get a copy. In whatever grade. It is currently really affordable… but, for how long?

GAINING RANK

Eight years ago my colleagues and I worked for several months on assembling the most complete list and ranking system for all comic books with a war theme. Each comic book's position in the ranking was based on criteria such as; who was on the creative team, key storylines, art (both on covers and the interior), 1st appearances, popularity, market value, scarcity, etc. From this we were able to develop what we believe is a fairly accurate representation of the top war comics of the genre. After creating that initial foundation, we have been very careful not to make major adjustments without rather irrefutable market data to influence said changes. That said; each year we do our best to update and modify the raking to reflect the most current state of the war comic market. Following is this year's submission.

Interesting Facts

Although Sgt. Fury #1 has experienced a minor financial decline, we felt it was too significant of a book to lose its current rank of #2.

Our Army at War #82 almost overtook #81 in our voting. But, OAAW #81's legacy keeps it firmly at #4.

Mademoiselle Marie's Star Spangled War Stories #84 creeps up another slot to #12. Is it possible she wins her way into the top 10?!

Sgt. Rock's 2nd true appearance in Our Army at War #84 takes a three slot leap and is now #15.

Atlas' Combat #1, Warren's Blazing Combat #1, and DC's OAAW #100 all crest into the top 30.

Sgt. Rock #302 finally crests into the Top 50 and is the first Bronze Age war comic to do so.

SPEC OPS

Operation 'Pop Art' (by Matt Ballesteros)

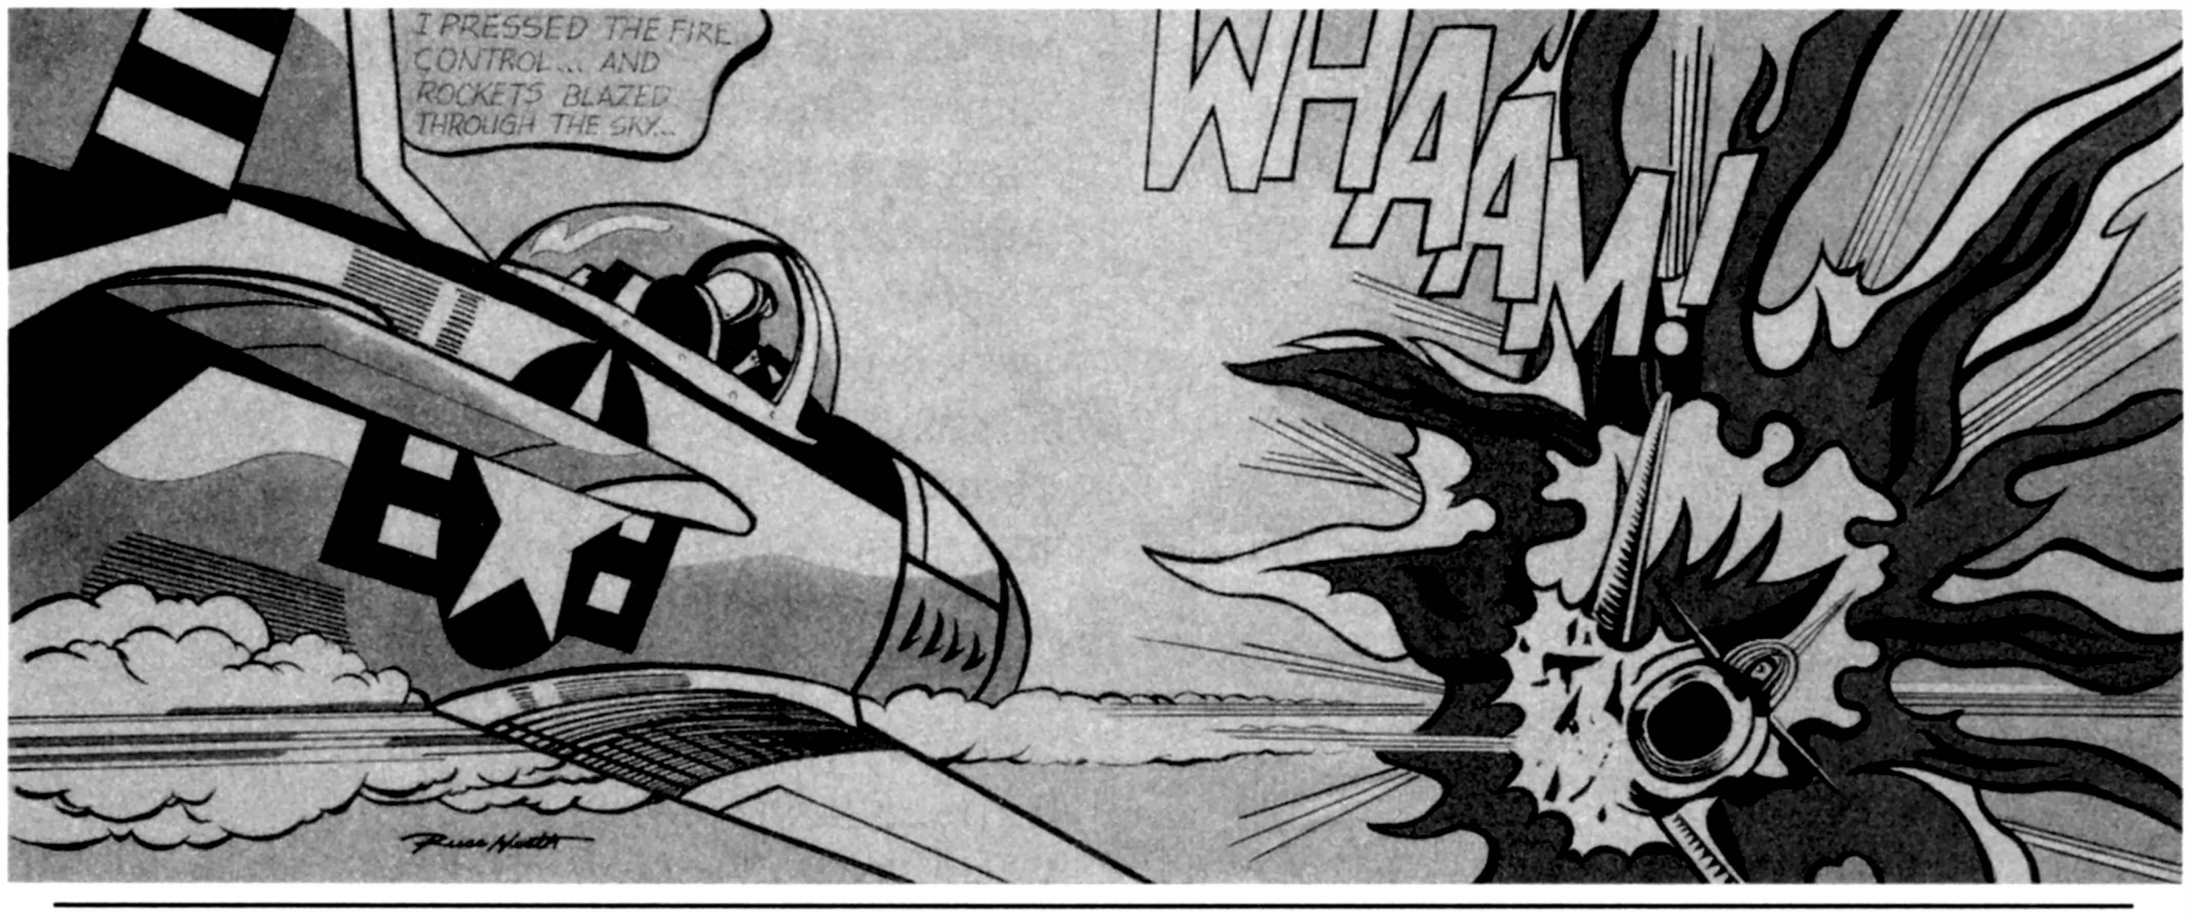
Naturally, I collect original art from all the war comic genre greats, be it Kubert, Heath, Glanzman and so on. Moreover, I have been lucky enough to spend some time with one or two of them, either as a volunteer through the Big-5, a host panelist, or a supporter through this very publication. It goes without saying, that it has been honor and a privilege to know these icons of the comic movement and of pop culture. Consequently, this has provided me the opportunity to request commissioned work that is highly specific. Case and point being the artwork for this very guide. That said, it is not lost on me how important each of the artists have been to the evolution of sequential art and to pop culture as a whole. Each time I am fortunate enough to receive original art, I am reminded of how much comics and comic art helped form modern culture as know it. I'll submit that we now live in, and enjoy a societal paradigm wholly influenced by these comic book greats. A culture that is imbued with their creative signature. And as many of you know, this influence and impact began many decades ago.

Regardless of how it may have been received in the past (as comic art for most of its existence has been considered low-art by high-art critics), comic art has not only inspired the imagination of millions, but has also played a large part in the shaping of every medium we engage with. Be it radio, television, movies, video games and, just as importantly, many aspects of the art world.

A great and singular example of this of course was the Pop Art movement of the '60s, led at some stages by well-known artists such as Andy Warhol and Roy Lichtenstein. I apologize for the forthcoming generalizations, but I am neither an authority on modern art, nor am I a historian. Be that as it may, I submit that it is implicit that the Pop Art movement took many of its extant fundamentals from contemporary culture. Among other stimuli, comic books had a significant influence on the Pop Art style. Of course the most evident and declarative example of this was expressed in Roy Lichtenstein's body of work, where a great number of his most famous pieces directly channeled and emulated the comic book art form. I am of course speaking of "Whaam!", "Drowning Girl," "Blam," "Hopeless," "As I Opened Fire," "Takka Takka," "Grrrrrrrrrr!!" and many others. Works of art, mind you, that borrowed their theme and imagery from original art created for comics by, among others, Jerry Grandenetti, Irv Novick and, of course, Russ Heath.

There is an enormous amount of controversy about Lichtenstein utilizing the preexisting art found in comics to compose his pieces. There are both supporters and critics of his adoption of the medium. Simply search online and you will get volumes of commentary on the topic. Most of which is rather engrossing and fascinating. Irrespective of anyone's position on the matter, the fact remains that the art created by both Lichtenstein AND the comic artists of the time all played a significant role in the development and amelioration of our progressive culture. It was this personal notion, the belief that both breed of artists contributed to the popularity and success to sizable segments of Pop Art—that compelled me to pick up the phone.

Russ Heath was in a jovial mood. We had just wrapped up the work for the cover of the Guide and I was again thanking him for his efforts. The tone changed however after I ventured to make the following proposition: that he produce his very own rendition of "Whaam!" It is of course considered one of Lichtenstein's most popular pieces and is perhaps one of the most recognizable works of Pop Art next to Warhol's Campbell's Soup Cans or his Marilyn Dyptich. It is also generally known and accepted that a variety of Heath's art was the inspiration to many of Lichtenstein's works, among them "Whaam!" A painting that credits both Irv Novick and Russ Heath as the influencing artists to this renowned example of Pop Art. It seemed to me that my relationship with Heath posed a singular opportunity, to suggest that a depiction of "Whaam!" be recreated by him. To produce a redux of the work if you will, by what is technically the original artist. There was a long pause on the other end of the phone line… "Let me get this straight," he said, "You want me to take back from Roy, what Roy took from me?" I expressed to him as succinctly as possible what an interesting exercise that might be, and wondered if he would consider it. His response, you'd be interested to know, was a declarative "I'll do it!" We immediately began discussing details.



The actual particulars to creating the piece were more complicated than either of us expected. He asked that I send him a written request for him to contemplate. Being that he is 90 years old and hard of hearing he wanted to make sure he understood exactly what was being proposed. What followed were a series of letters describing the mission at hand. In the middle of all this I received a call from a number in New York that I didn't recognize. I answered in curiosity. A gruff voice inquired "Matt Ballesteros?" "Yes…" I replied quizzically. "This is Neal Adams," a voice boomed. "The artist?" I bemusedly replied. "The same." he declared. Now, I work in the entertainment industry and know my share of talent. Thus, I wasn't too surprised to be on the phone with this type of personality. Besides, it had only been a few seconds, so I hadn't quite fully linked the call to Russ or the painting yet. And although I was a little foggy as to the nature of his call, the recesses of my mind began to consider the connection. "How may I be of service?" I retorted politely. "I just want to see if I am understanding this right" he said with some incredulity. "You asked Russ Heath to go back and paint Lichtenstein's "Whaam!"?!" "Well…" I replied with some hubris and an air of caution. "Yes, yes I did". "The Balls!!" he cracked. "The Balls!!" And thus began my relationship with the esteemed Continuity Studios.

It turns out that Russ had called Neal looking for some clarity on the proposed project. On hearing about it, Neal's immediate response was to ensure that not only he was represented in some capacity, but that the arrangement was favorable to Heath. Once Neal got to spend a little time with me on the phone, he quickly ascertained that my request was legitimate and that I was a big supporter of Heath's. All in all, as an outside sympathetic supporter of Heath, I was thrilled that a luminary such as Adams was such an enormous advocate for Russ (even more, it turns out Adams' entire family has a keen interest in Heath's wellbeing). In short, Adams necessitated that Continuity oversee the project, that the medium be more in line with what is common to comic book illustrators (such as an illustration board), and that I pay two times the fee originally contemplated. I was happy to agree to all those demands. One, I was going to have Neal and Joel Adams have creative oversight on the final product. Two, I was going to receive "Whaam!" on art board, the format it was originally conceived on (how poetic). Lastly, and most importantly, Heath was to receive more or less, a meaningful sum for his work. Although paling in comparison to the value of Lichtenstein's art, other than Heath's base pay in the '60s, I wondered if this was possibly the first consequential income Heath was going to make for originating this work of art. A little late in my opinion, but about time.

It took a few short weeks from the time that Continuity got involved for the work to be produced. I spoke with Kris Stone (Neal Adams' daughter) several times during that period and she kindly kept me up to date on progress. Joel Adams even visited Heath to check in. The Adams as a whole were kindly focused on the delivery of a quality finished piece. I expressed little concern for that in this particular case, and even intonated that perceived blemishes and/or imperfections only enhanced the work by symbolically inscribing it as a contemporary Heath, developed through the original comic art creative process. And I certainly proposed that Heath have the creative wherewithal to modify the concept at will. In the end, after all the contemplations as to whether to even do this, after all the conversations with Heath, after all the interactions with the Adams, after waiting out its creation, the piece was finally finished and delivered.

Ladies and gentlemen, 54 years after DC published All American Men of War #89, and 53 years after Lichtenstein unveiled his Pop Art phenomena, I am proud to present Russ Heath's "Whaam!"

Folks, Russ Heath is alive and well and his talent prevails!

PSA: You too can support retired artists such as Russ Heath by commissioning work directly from the artists themselves. If five figures is too heady of a commitment at this time, consider donating to organizations such as the Hero Initiative. If you are looking for even smaller scale options, consider supporting organizations such as the Big-5 War Group (who will accept in-kind donations, such as sketches and or comics to auction off in fund raisers for the artists). All the same, contemplate supporting the long retired creators of the medium you love. The endless hours that you enjoyed through comics (and continue to enjoy), came thanks to artists just attempting to pay the bills. Some, like Russ Heath, didn't have the capacity to turn in anything less than staggeringly beautiful page after beautiful page. The suggestions referenced above are just some tangible ways for you to show some appreciation for their brilliance.

TOP COMICS

The following tables denote the rate of appreciation of the top Golden Age, Platinum Age, Silver Age and Bronze Age comics, as well as selected genres over the past year. The retail value for a Near Mint- copy of each comic (or VF where a Near Mint- copy is not known to exist) in 2016 is compared to its Near Mint- value in 2015. The rate of return for 2016 over 2015 is given. The place in rank is given for each comic by year, with its corresponding value in highest known grade. These tables can be very useful in forecasting trends in the market place. For instance, the investor might want to know which book is yielding the best dividend from one year to the next, or one might just be interested in seeing how the popularity of books changes from year to year. For instance, All Star Comics #8 was in 20th place in 2015 and has increased to 16th place in 2016. Premium books are also included in these tables and are denoted with an asterisk(*).

The following tables are meant as a guide to the investor. However, it should be pointed out that trends may change at anytime and that some books can meet market resistance with a slowdown in price increases, while others can develop into real comers from a presently dormant state. In the long run, if the investor sticks to the books that are appreciating steadily each year, he shouldn't go very far wrong.

GRADING DEFINITIONS

When grading a comic book, common sense must be employed. The overall eye appeal and beauty of the comic book must be taken into account along with its technical flaws to arrive at the appropriate grade.

10.0 GEM MINT (GM): This is an exceptional example of a given book - the best ever seen. The slightest bindery defects and/or printing flaws may be seen only upon very close inspection. The overall look is "as if it has never been handled or released for purchase." Only the slightest bindery or printing defects are allowed, and these would be imperceptible on first viewing. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. No dates or stamped markings allowed. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. No interior autographs or owner signatures. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.9 MINT (MT): Near perfect in every way. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.8 NEAR MINT/MINT (NM/MT): Nearly perfect in every way with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is off-white to white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.6 NEAR MINT+ (NM+): Nearly perfect with a minor additional virtue or virtues that raise it from Near Mint. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears are allowed, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/8" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. One corner may be almost imperceptibly blunted, but still almost sharp and cut square. Almost imperceptible indentations are permissible, but no creases, bends, or color break. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered, with only the slightest discoloration. No staple tears, stress lines, or rust migration. Paper is off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.4 NEAR MINT (NM): Nearly perfect with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Minor feathering that does not distract from the overall beauty of an otherwise higher grade copy is acceptable for this grade. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Subtle bindery defects are allowed. Bindery tears must be less than 1/16" on Silver Age and later books, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/4" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples are generally centered; may have slight discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.2 NEAR MINT- (NM-): Nearly perfect with only a minor additional defect or defects that keep it from Near Mint. A limited number of minor bindery defects are allowed. A light, barely noticeable water stain or minor foxing that does not distract from the beauty of the book is acceptable for this grade. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with only the slightest dimming of reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16"-1/8" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.0 VERY FINE/NEAR MINT (VF/NM): Nearly perfect with outstanding eye appeal. A limited number of bindery defects are allowed. Almost flat cover with almost imperceptible wear. Inks are bright with slightly diminished reflectivity. An 1/8" bend is allowed if color is not broken. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted but no creases. Several lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for very minor foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Only the slightest staple tears are allowed. A very minor accumulation of stress lines may be present if they are nearly imperceptible. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Very minor interior tears may be present.

8.5 VERY FINE+ (VF+): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

8.0 VERY FINE (VF): An excellent copy with outstanding eye appeal. Sharp, bright and clean with supple pages. A comic book in this grade has the appearance of having been carefully handled. A limited accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Cover is relatively flat with minimal surface wear beginning to show, possibly including some minute wear at corners. Inks are generally bright with moderate to high reflectivity. A 1/4" crease is acceptable if color is not broken. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. Spine is almost flat with no roll. Possible minor color break allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Very slight staple tears and a few almost very minor to minor stress lines may be present. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

7.5 VERY FINE- (VF-): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

7.0 FINE/VERY FINE (FN/VF): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with outstanding eye appeal. A small accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear beginning to show with interior yellowing or tanning allowed, possibly including minor creases. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Inks are generally bright with a moderate reduction in reflectivity. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. The slightest spine roll may be present, as well as a possible moderate color break. Staples may show some discoloration. Slight staple tears and a slight accumulation of light stress lines may be present. Slight rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream, but not brown. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

6.5 FINE+ (FN+): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

6.0 FINE (FN): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with no significant creasing or other serious defects. Eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of slight surface wear and the accumulation of small defects, especially on the spine and edges. A FINE condition comic book appears to have been read a few times and has been handled with moderate care. Some accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases. Inks show a major reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are more common, as is minor staining, soiling, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor spine roll is allowed. There can also be a 1/4" spine split or severe color break. Staples show minor discoloration. Minor staple tears and an accumulation of stress lines may be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan and fairly supple with no signs of brittleness. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present. Centerfold may be loose but not detached.

5.5 FINE- (FN-): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

5.0 VERY GOOD/FINE (VG/FN): An above-average but well-used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some moderate wear; eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of the accumulation of defects. Still a desirable copy that has been handled with some care. An accumulation of bindery defects is allowed. Minor to moderate cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases and/or dimples. Inks have major to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are increasingly common, as is minor to moderate staining, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor to moderate spine roll is allowed. A spine split of up to 1/2" may be present. Staples show minor discoloration. A slight accumulation of minor staple tears and an accumulation of minor stress lines may also be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan with no signs of brittleness. May have the faintest trace of an acidic odor. Centerfold may be loose but not detached. Minor tears may also be present.

4.5 VERY GOOD+ (VG+): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

4.0 VERY GOOD (VG): The average used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some significant moderate wear, but still has not accumulated enough total defects to reduce eye appeal to the point that it is not a desirable copy. Cover shows moderate to significant wear, and may be loose but not completely detached. Moderate to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Can have an accumulation of creases or dimples. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Store stamps, name stamps, arrival dates, initials, etc. have no effect on this grade. Some discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor soiling is allowed. As much as a 1/4" triangle can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" square is also acceptable. Only minor unobtrusive tape and other amateur repair allowed on otherwise high grade copies. Moderate spine roll may be present and/or a 1" spine split. Staples discolored. Minor to moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. A minor acidic odor can be detectable. Minor to moderate tears may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple.

3.5 VERY GOOD- (VG-): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

3.0 GOOD/VERY GOOD (GD/VG): A used comic book showing some substantial wear. Cover shows significant wear, and may be loose or even detached at one staple. Cover reflectivity is very low. Can have a book-length crease and/or dimples. Corners may be blunted or even rounded. Discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor to moderate soiling is allowed. A triangle from 1/4" to 1/2" can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" to 1/4" square is also acceptable. Tape and other amateur repair may be present. Moderate spine roll likely. May have a spine split of anywhere from 1" to 1-1/2". Staples may be rusted or replaced. Minor to moderate staple tears and moderate stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple. Minor to moderate interior tears may be present.

2.5 GOOD+ (GD+): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

2.0 GOOD (GD): Shows substantial wear; often considered a "reading copy." Cover shows significant wear and may even be detached. Cover reflectivity is low and in some cases completely absent. Book-length creases and dimples may be present. Rounded corners are more common. Moderate soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing may be present. The largest piece allowed missing from the front or back cover is usually a 1/2" triangle or a 1/4" square, although some Silver Age books such as 1960s Marvels have had the price corner box clipped from the top left front cover and may be considered Good if they would otherwise have graded higher. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is likely. May have up to a 2" spine split. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Moderate interior tears may be present.

1.8 GOOD- (GD-): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

1.5 FAIR/GOOD (FR/GD): A comic showing substantial to heavy wear. A copy in this grade still has all pages and covers, although there may be pieces missing up to and including missing coupons and/or Marvel Value Stamps that do not impact the story. Books in this grade are commonly creased, scuffed, abraded, soiled, and possibly unattractive, but still generally readable. Cover shows considerable wear and may be detached. Nearly no reflectivity to no reflectivity remaining. Store stamp, name stamp, arrival date and initials are permitted. Book-length creases, tears and folds may be present. Rounded corners are increasingly common. Soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing is generally present. Up to 1/10 of the back cover may be missing. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are increasingly common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is common. May have a spine split between 2" and 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Staple tears and stress lines are common, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges. Acidic odor may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Interior tears are common.

1.0 FAIR (FR): A copy in this grade shows heavy wear. Some collectors consider this the lowest collectible grade because comic books in lesser condition are usually incomplete and/or brittle. Comics in this grade are usually soiled, faded, ragged and possibly unattractive. This is the last grade in which a comic remains generally readable. Cover may be detached, and inks have lost all reflectivity. Creases, tears and/or folds are prevalent. Corners are commonly rounded or absent. Soiling and staining is present. Books in this condition generally have all pages and most of the covers, although there may be up to 1/4 of the front cover missing or no back cover, but not both. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are more common. Spine roll is more common; spine split can extend up to 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be missing or show rust and discoloration. An accumulation of staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges but not in the central portion of the pages. Acidic odor may be present. Accumulation of interior tears. Chunks may be missing. The centerfold may be missing if readability is generally preserved (although there may be difficulty). Coupons may be cut.

0.5 POOR (PR): Most comic books in this grade have been sufficiently degraded to the point where there is little or no collector value; they are easily identified by a complete absence of eye appeal. Comics in this grade are brittle almost to the point of turning to dust with a touch, and are usually incomplete. Extreme cover fading may render the cover almost indiscernible. May have extremely severe stains, mildew or heavy cover abrasion to the point that some cover inks are indistinct/absent. Covers may be detached with large chunks missing. Can have extremely ragged edges and extensive creasing. Corners are rounded or virtually absent. Covers may have been defaced with paints, varnishes, glues, oil, indelible markers or dyes, and may have suffered heavy water damage. Can also have extensive amateur repairs such as laminated covers. Extreme spine roll present; can have extremely ragged spines or a complete, book-length split. Staples can be missing or show extreme rust and discoloration. Extensive staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as extreme rust migration. Paper exhibits moderate to severe brittleness (where the comic book literally falls apart when examined). Extreme acidic odor may be present. Extensive interior tears. Multiple pages, including the centerfold, may be missing that affect readability. Coupons may be cut.

0.3 INCOMPLETE (INC): Books that are coverless, but are otherwise complete, or covers missing their interiors.

0.1 INCOMPLETE (INC): Coverless copies that have incomplete interiors, wraps or single pages will receive a grade of .1 as will just front covers or just back covers.

OVERSTREET ADVISORS

Even before the first edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide was printed, author Robert M. Overstreet solicited pricing data, historical notations, and general information from a variety of sources. What was initially an informal group offering input quickly became an organized field of comic book collectors, dealers and historians whose opinions are actively solicited in advance of each edition of this book. Some of these Overstreet Advisors are specialists who deal in particular niches within the comic book world, while others are generalists who are interested in commenting on the broader marketplace. Each advisor provides information from their respective areas of interest and expertise, spanning the history of American comics.

While some choose to offer pricing and historical information in the form of annotated sales catalogs, auction catalogs, or documented private sales, assistance from others comes in the form of the market reports such as those beginning on page 96 in this book. In addition to those who have served as Overstreet Advisors almost since The Guide's inception, each year new contributors are sought.

With that in mind, we are pleased to present our newest Overstreet Advisors:

METROPOLIS

THE NATION'S LARGEST COMIC DEALER

METROPOLIS

METROPOLIS ? WE'RE CONFUSED!

We hope that someone who reads this will be able to explain why this kind of thing happens, because we don't get it!

The following is a true story...

At the biggest convention of the year, a dealer who traveled hundreds of miles to set up bought a high-grade Fantastic Four #1 for roughly 1/2 the price that we would have paid. After that comic passed through the hands of several dealers, Metropolis did in fact buy it. The fellow who initially sold it at the convention could easily have made seven thousand dollars more if he had sold it to us.

SHOULDN'T THESE GUYS KNOW BETTER? SHOULDN'T EVERYONE?

Is it still better to get more money for your comics than less? Does the Earth still revolve around the Sun? Are there still people out there who are not offering their books to Metropolis and losing money by selling to the wrong guy?

If anyone out there can shed some light on why this still happens in this day and age, could you please let us know?

The following represents a sample of prices we will pay for your comic books. Other dealers say they pay top dollar, but when it comes down to it, they simply do not. If you have comics to sell, we invite you to contact every comic dealer in the country for offers. Then call us for your best offer. We can afford to pay the highest price for your vintage comics because that is all we sell. If you wish to sell us your comics, please ship us the books securely via FedEx with a tracking number. If your collection is too large to ship, send us a detailed list and we'll travel to you. The prices below are for NM copies, but we are interested in all grades. Thank you.

JUST THE FACTS

METROPOLIS

COLLECTIBLES

FACT 1: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER BUYS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

Although the pages of the price guide are filled with other dealers offering to pay "top dollar," the simple truth is that Metropolis spends more money on more quality comic book collections year in and year out than any other dealers in the country. We have the funds and the expertise to back up our word. The fact is that we have spent nearly 8 million dollars on rare comic books and movie posters over the last year. If you have comic books to sell please call us at 1.800.229.6387. A generous finder's fee will be given if you know of any comic book or movie poster collections that we purchase. All calls will be strictly confidential.

FACT 2: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER SELLS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

We simply have the best stock of Golden and Silver Age comic books in the country. The thousands of collectors familiar with our strict grading standards and excellent service can attest to this. Chances are, if you want it, we have it!

APPRAISAL SERVICE

If you'd like to know the value of your comics, why not ask the guys who created the universal 10 point grading scale? Metropolis offers the following absolutely free!

1. VALUE APPRAISAL to determine your comics' retail value based on all parameters including current desirability of the comic, relative scarcity and historical significance.

2. COMPLETE EXAMINATION of comics for all types of restoration.

3. DOUBLE GRADING SYSTEM to ensure greatest accuracy.

Our staff reflects over 75 years of comic evaluation and retail experience. There is not a more knowledgeable staff anywhere. For more info, call Toll-Free

(6387)

Please limit the number of comics to 10.
Comics should be from 1930 -1975.
That is our field of expertise.

SELLER TIP :

Sometimes having your comics sealed by a 3rd party grader increases the value. Other times it won't and you only lose money on grading fees. Our consultation determines when and when not to have a comic "slabbed" saving you money.

WORLD'S PREMIER ONLINE COMIC MARKETPLACE & AUCTIONEER

For over 30 years, the experts at ComicConnect have been recognized and renowned for selling the most sought after comic books and collections. Our services have been enlisted by individuals who are the most aggressive collectors in the market. ComicConnect will help you realize the best return when you are selling your comics.

In today's market, the decision of just how to sell your comics is critical. Making the right choice is like walking a tightrope without a net. Perhaps the most common pitfall novice sellers fall into is blindly consigning to the first auction house they come across. If you're considering parting with your collection, and think an auction house is the best way to go, we strongly advise you consider the following:

Do the Math. The commission rate an auction house charges you, the seller, is typically 15%. However, the auction house will also charge the bidder a "buyer's premium" of 19.5%. Make no mistake about it, a bidder in an auction simply deducts that additional 19.5% from the final price they are willing to pay. That's nearly a 35% cut from each and every transaction. By having their hand in the pocket of both the bidder and the seller, the auction house ensures the most profit for itself, while the consignor hemorrhages on their investment. With ComicConnect's small commission and No Buyer's Premiums, the rest of the proceeds go back into your pocket where it rightfully belongs.

When you consign to ComicConnect, you have at your disposal the services of the most experienced comic book sellers in the world. More importantly, you benefit from the thousands upon thousands of long-term customer relationships we've developed over the past 30 years. We're in it for the long haul, and will work with you to develop a strategy that will get you the highest return. We won't "square-peg" your collection into a formula that doesn't fit. We will pursue the avenue or avenues that work best for the comics you consign. Sometimes, that means selling your comics to the private individuals who pay the very best for being offered the very best. Oftentimes, we will arrange exclusive viewings at our showroom in Manhattan. We also maintain thousands of want lists of customers waiting in the wings for certain comic books to come to market - comic books that you may have in your collection.

Paying up to 100% or more of guide for many comics of interest

▼ POINTS TO CONSIDER ▼

TO SELL ON EBAY OR NOT TO SELL ON EBAY—THAT IS YOUR QUESTION?

- Consigning your comics to an eBay seller or an auction may not let you realize your collection's potential. EBay sellers and auctions charge 15% to 35% on every transaction regardless if they sell for less than guide. Many items sell for way below guide and you still pay all related charges. Many dealers buy these items well below market value. After you consider all charges and the final selling price you will generally net much less then we would pay. Selling to us there will be no charges, no waiting for payment. It's easy, and you will be treated with honesty and fairness.
- We have over 25 years experience in comic fandom. We have purchased many well-known collections while competing against other interested parties. Give us the chance to show you your top price.
- Being a collector/dealer gives us the ability to buy your entire collection and pay you the most for it. You will maximize your collection's value.

You have everything to gain by contacting us. WHY miss out on your BEST OFFER? Call 603-869-2097 today!

COMIC HEAVEN

JOHN VERZYL AND DAUGHTER ROSE "HARD AT WORK"

John Verzyl started collecting comic books in 1965, and within ten years he had amassed thousands of Golden and Silver Age comic books. In 1979, with his wife Nanette, he opened "COMIC HEAVEN," a retail store devoted entirely to the buying and selling of comic books.

Over the years, John Verzyl has come to be recognized as an authority in the field of comic books. He has served as a special advisor to The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide for the last 30 years. Thousands of his "mint" comics were photographed for Ernst Gerber's Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books. His booths and displays at the annual San Diego Comic-Con, the August Chicago Comic Con, and the New York City Comic Con in October draw customers from all over the world.

The first COMIC HEAVEN AUCTION was held in 1987, and today his color-packed catalogs are mailed out to more than 12,000 interested collectors and dealers.

BIG LITTLE BOOKS

INTRODUCTION

In 1932, at the depths of the Great Depression, comic books were not selling despite their successes in the previous two decades. Desperate publishers had already reduced prices to 25¢, but this was still too much for many people to spend on entertainment.

Comic books quickly evolved into two newer formats, the comics magazine and the Big Little Book. Both types retailed for 10¢.

Big Little Books began by reprinting the art (and adapting the stories) from newspaper comics. As their success grew and publishers began commissioning original material, movie adaptations and other entertainment-derived stories became commonplace.

GRADING

Before a Big Little Book's value can be assessed, its condition or state of preservation must be determined. A book in Near Mint condition will bring many times the price of the same book in Poor condition. Many variables influence the grading of a Big Little Book and all must be considered in the final evaluation. Due to the way they are constructed, damage occurs with very little use - usually to the spine, book edges and binding. More important defects that affect grading are: Split spines, pages missing, page browning or brittleness, writing, crayoning, loose pages, color fading, chunks missing, and rolling or out of square. The following grading guide is given to aid the novice:

9.4 Near Mint: The overall look is as if it was just purchased and maybe opened once; only subtle defects are allowed; paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh; cover is flat with no surface wear or creases; inks and colors are bright; small penciled or inked arrival dates are acceptable; very slight blunting of corners at top and bottom of spine are common; outside corners are cut square and sharp. Books in this grade could bring prices of guide and a half or more.

9.0 Very Fine/Near Mint: Limited number of defects; full cover gloss with only very slight wear on book corners and edges; very minor foxing; very minor tears allowed, binding still square and tight with no pages missing; paper quality still fresh from cream to off-white. Dates, stamps or initials allowed on cover or inside.

8.0 Very Fine: Most of the cover gloss retained with minor wear appearing at corners and around edges; spine tight with no pages missing; cream/tan paper allowed if still supple; up to 1/4" bend allowed on covers with no color break; cover relatively flat; minor tears allowed.

6.0 Fine: Slight wear beginning to show; cover gloss reduced but still clean, pages tan/brown but still supple (not brittle); up to 1/4" split or color break allowed; minor discoloration and/or foxing allowed.

4.0 Very Good: Obviously a read copy with original printing luster almost gone; some fading and discoloration, but not soiled; some signs of wear such as corner splits and spine rolling; paper can be brown but not brittle; a few pages can be loose but not missing; no chunks missing; blunted corners acceptable.

2.0 Good: An average used copy complete with only minor pieces missing from the spine, which may be partially split; slightly soiled or marked with spine rolling; color flaking and wear around edges, but perfectly sound and legible; could have minor tape repairs but otherwise complete.

1.0 Fair: Very heavily read and soiled with small chunks missing from cover; most or all of spine could be missing; multiple splits in spine and loose pages, but still sound and legible, bringing 50 to 70 percent of good price.

0.5 Poor: Damaged, heavily weathered, soiled or otherwise unsuited for collecting purposes.

IMPORTANT

Most BLBs on the market today will fall in the Good to Fine grade category. When Very Fine to Near Mint BLBs are offered for sale, they usually bring premium prices.

A WORD ON PRICING

The prices are given for Good, Fine and Very Fine/ Near Mint condition. A book in Fair would be 50-70% of the Good price. Very Good would be halfway between the Good and Fine price, and Very Fine would be halfway between the Fine and Very Fine/ Near Mint price. The prices listed were averaged from convention sales, dealers' lists, adzines, auctions, and by special contact with dealers and collectors from coast to coast. The prices and the spreads were determined from sales of copies in available condition or the highest grade known. Since most available copies are in the Good to Fine range, neither dealers nor collectors should let the Very Fine/Near Mint column influence the prices they are willing to charge or pay for books in less than near perfect condition.

The prices listed reflect a six times spread from Good to Very Fine/ Near Mint (1 - 3 - 6). We feel this spread accurately reflects the current market, especially when you consider the scarcity of books in Very Fine/Near Mint condition. When one or both end sheets are missing, the book's value would drop about a half grade.

Books with movie scenes are of double importance due to the high crossover demand by movie collectors.

Publisher Codes: BRP-Blue Ribbon Press; ERB-Edgar Rice Burroughs; EVW-Engel van Wiseman; FAW-Fawcett Publishing Co.; Gold-Goldsmith Publishing Co.; Lynn-Lynn Publishing Co.; McKay-David McKay Co.; Whit-Whitman Publishing Co.; World-World Syndicate Publishing Co.

Terminology: All Pictures Comics-no text, all drawings; Fast-Action-A special series of Dell books highly collected; Flip Pictures-upper right corner of interior pages contain drawings that are put into motion when rifled; Movie Scenes-book illustrated with scenes from the movie. Soft Cover-A thin single sheet of cardboard used in binding most of the giveaway versions.

PROMOTIONAL COMICS

by Dr. Arnold T. Blumberg, DCD with new material and additional research by Sol M. Davidson, PhD, and Robert L. Beerbohm

Everyone wants something for free. It's in our nature to look for the quick fix, the good deal, the complimentary gift. We long to hit the lottery and quit our job, to win the trip around the world, or find that pot of gold at the end of the proverbial rainbow. Collectors in particular are certainly built to appreciate the notion of the "free gift," since it not only means a new item to collect and enjoy, but no risk or obligation in order to acquire it.

Ah, but there's the rub. Because things are not always what they seem, and "free gifts" usually come with a price. As the saying goes, "there's no such thing as a free lunch," so if it seems too good to be true, it probably is. This is the case even in the world of comics, where premiums and giveaways have a familiar agenda hidden behind the bright colors and fanciful stories. But where did it all begin?

Some of the earliest characters that were used as successful tools in promotional comics were Palmer Cox's creation "The Brownies." The illustration shown here showcases them drinking and endorsing Seal Brand Coffee.

EXTRA EXTRA

As we learn more about the early history of the comic book industry through continual investigation and the publishing of articles like those regularly featured in this book, we gain a much greater understanding of the financial and creative forces at work in shaping the medium, but perhaps one of the most intriguing and least recognized factors that influenced the dawn of comics is the concept of the premium or giveaway. (Note: Some of the historical information referenced in this article is derived from material also presented in Robert L. Beerbohm's introductory article to the Platinum Age section.)

The birth of the comic book as we know it today is intimately connected with the development of the comic strip in American newspapers and their use as an advertising and marketing tool for staple products such as bread, milk, and cereal. From the very beginning, comic characters have played several roles in pop culture, entertaining the youth of the country while also (sometimes none too subtly) acting as hucksters for whatever corporation foots the bill. From important staples to frivolous material produced simply to make a buck, these products have utilized the comics medium to sell, sell, sell. And what better way to hook a prospective customer than to give them "something for nothing?"

Starting in the 1850s, comics were being used in free almanacs such as Elton's, Hostetter's and Wright's to lure readers for the little booklets to sell patent medicine, farm products, tobacco, shoe polish, etc. Most of these are exceedingly rare today, hence it is difficult to compile an accurate history. More mention of these early precursors can be found in the Victorian Comics Era essay following this one. But although comic characters themselves were already being aggressively merchandised all around the world by the mid-1890s--as with, for example, Palmer Cox's The Brownies--the real starting point for the success of comics as a giveaway marketing mechanism can be traced to the introduction of The Yellow Kid, Richard Outcault's now legendary newspaper strip.

Newspaper publishers had already recognized that comic strips could boost circulation as well as please sponsors and advertisers by drawing more eyes to the page, so Sunday "supplements" were introduced to entice fans. Outcault's creation cemented the theory with proof of comic characters' marketing and merchandising power.

Soon after, Outcault (who had most likely been inspired by Cox's merchandising success with The Brownies in the first place) caught lightning in a bottle once more with Buster Brown, who has the distinction of being America's first nationally licensed comic strip character. Soon, comic strips proliferated throughout the nation's newspapers as tycoons like Hearst and Pulitzer recognized the drawing power of the new medium and fought circulation wars to capture the pennies of the nouveau readership. They paid exorbitant salaries to comic strip artists such as Rudolph Dirks (Katzenjammer Kids), and used the funnies as newspaper supplements and as premiums to attract readers. Corporations soon had the chance to license recognizable personas as their own personal pitchmen (or women or animals...). Comic character merchandise wasn't far behind, resulting in a boom of future collectibles now catalogued in volumes like Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys.

This unused cover was designed as the second cover for "Motion Picture Funnies Weekly." While the concept for this promotional comic title never caught on, the inaugural issue did feature the origin and first printed appearance of the Sub-Mariner.

TWO BIRTHS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Comic books themselves were at the heart of this movement, and giveaway and premium collections of comic strips not only appealed to children and adults alike, but provided the impetus for the birth of the modern comic book format itself. It could be said that without the concept of the giveaway comic or the marketing push behind it, there would be no comic book industry as we have it today. Well-known now is the story of how in spring 1933 Harry Wildenberg of Eastern Color Printing Company convinced Proctor & Gamble to sponsor the first modern comic book, Funnies on Parade, as a premium. Its success led to the first continuing comic book, Famous Funnies, and the rest, as they say, is history.

In 1935, while working on the printing presses of Eastern Color developing how modern comic books get printed, Juliun J. Proskauer came up with an idea for printing "Comic-Books-For-Industry." In July 1936 he made his first sale through his newly formed William C. Popper & Co. to David M. Davies, then advertising manager for Seagram's Distillers Corp. for three million copies of Seagram's Merrymakers in time for the 1936-37 Christmas season. "Thus was a new industry born," wrote Printing News in August 1945.

Even a casual perusal of the listings in this section of the Guide will dazzle the reader with the endless variety of purposes that this medium has served. Yes, promos have been used to hawk products from athletic equipment to zithers and zip codes, but comics are too versatile an art form to be confined to a few uses. They've swayed elections in cities (The O'Dwyer Story, 1949), in states (Giant for a Day: Jacob Javits, 1946) and nationwide (The Story of Harry Truman, 1948); solicited for charities (Donald Duck and the Red Feather, 1948); addressed health issues (Blondie, 1949, mental hygiene); discouraged kids from smoking (Captain America Meets the Asthma Monster, 1987); coached youngsters in sports skills (Circling the Bases, 1947, A.G. Spaulding); explained scientific complexities (Adventures in Science, 1946-61, GE); pleaded for social justice (Consumer Comics, 1975); espoused religious causes (Oral Roberts' True Stories, 1950s); protected the environment (Our Spaceship Earth, 1947); encouraged tourism (Wyoming, The Cowboy State, 1954); conveyed a sense of history (Louisiana Purchase, 1953); taught about computers (Superman Radio Shack Giveaway, 1980); trained employees (Dial Finance Dialogues, 1961-70) and executives (Beneficial Finance System, Managing New Employees, 1950s); cautioned safety (Willy Wing Flap, 1944(?)); announced corporate annual results (Motorola Annual Report, 1952); defended free enterprise (Steve Merritt, 1949); hammered communism (How Stalin Hopes to Destroy America, 1951); fought discrimination (Mammy Yokum & the Great Dogpatch Mystery, 1956, B'nai Brith); aided young workers in job-hunting (The Job Scene, 1969); battled the scourge of sickle cell anemia (Where's Herbie, 1972, U.S. H.E.W.); inspired the overcoming of adversity (Al Capp by Li'l Abner, 1946); fostered reading (Linus Gets a Library Card, 1960); recruited for the armed forces (Li'l Abner Joins the Navy, 1950); beguiled readers into learning languages (Blondie, 1949, Philadelphia public schools); and even instructed in such delicate matters as birth control

Every market and product has been on the promotional comic book bandwagon. Freihofer's Baking Company distributed a comic in the 1940s that featured reprinted pages from "All-American Comics."

(Escape from Fear, 1950 (revised 1959, etc.), for Planned Parenthood).

READ ALL ABOUT IT

The impact of this new approach to advertising was not lost on the business world. Contrary to modern belief, comic books were hardly discounted by the adults of the time...at least not those who had the marketing savvy to recognize an opportunity - or a threat - when they saw one. In the April 1933 issue of Fortune magazine, an article titled "The Funny Papers" trumpeted the arrival of comics as a force to be reckoned with in the world of advertising and business, and what's more, a force to fear as well. At first providing a brief survey of the newspaper comic strip business (which for many of the magazine's readers must have seemed a foreign topic for serious discussion), the article goes on to examine the incredible financial draw of comics and their characters:

"Between 70 and 75 per cent {sic} of the readers of any newspaper follow its comic sections regularly...Even the advertiser has succumbed to the comic, and in 1932 spent well over $1,000,000 for comic-paper space."

"Comic Weekly is the comic section of seventeen Hearst Sunday papers...Advertisers who market their wares through balloon-speaking manikins {sic} may enjoy the proximity of Jiggs, Maggie, Barney Google, and other funny Hearst headliners."

Although the article continues to cast the notion of relying on comic strip material to sell product in a negative light, actually suggesting that advertisers who utilize comics are violating unspoken rules of "advertising decorum" and bringing themselves "down to the level" of comics (and since when have advertisers been stalwart preservers of good taste and high moral standards), there is no doubt that they are viewing comics in a new light. The comic characters have arrived by 1933...and they're ready to help sell your merchandise too.

Fortune wasn't the only one to take notice as World War II came and went. In 1948, Louis P. Birk, the head of Brevity, Inc., an important promotional comics publisher said, "Comics are serious business." In an article in Printers' Ink magazine, he estimated that more than 80 different "comic booklets" had been produced and more than 45,000,000 million copies distributed in the five years before 1948. But of course, comics were serious business long before businessman/historian Birk noted the fact for posterity.

THE MARCH OF WAR AND BEYOND

Through the relentless currents of time, comic strips, books, and the characters that starred in them became more and more an intrinsic part of American culture. During the turmoil of the Great Depression and World War II, comic characters in print and celluloid form entertained while informing and selling at the same time, and premium and giveaway comics came well and truly into their own, pushing everything from loaves of bread to war bonds.

In the 1950s and '60s, there was a shift in focus as the power of giveaway and premium comics was applied to more altruistic endeavors than simply selling something. Comic book format pamphlets, fully illustrated and often inventively written, taught children about banking, money, the dangers of poison and other household products, and even chronicled moments in American history. The comic book as giveaway was now not only a marketing gimmick--it was a tool for educating as well.

The promotional title "March of Comics" was a prolific comic that ran for 36 years and 488 issues featuring a variety of subjects and characters. (#20 shown)

The 1970s and '80s saw another boom in premium and giveaway comics. Every product imaginable seemed to have a licensing deal with a comic book character, usually one of the prominent flag bearers of the Big Two, Marvel or DC. Spider-Man fought bravely against the Beetle for the benefit of All Detergent; Captain America allied himself with the Campbell Kids; and Superman helped a class of computer students beat a disaster-conjuring foe at his own game with the help of Radio Shack Tandy computers.

Newspapers rediscovered the power of comics, not just with enlarged strip supplements but with actual comic books. Spider-Man, the Hulk, and others turned up as giveaway comic extras in various American newspapers (including Chicago and Dallas publications), while a whole series of public information comics like those produced decades earlier used superheroes to caution children about the dangers of smoking, drugs, and child abuse.

Comics also turned up in a plethora of other toy products as the 1980s introduced kids to the joy of electronic games and action figures. Supplementary comics provided "free" with action figure and video game packages told the backstory about the product, adding depth to the play experience while providing an extra incentive to buy. Comics became an intrinsic part of the Atari line of video cartridges, for example, eventually spawning its own full-blown newsstand series as well.

As the twentieth century gave way to the twenty-first, giveaway comics were still being produced for inclusion in action figure and video game packages, as well as in conjunction with countless consumer items and corporations. It seems that the medium still has a lot to offer for all those companies desperate to make the most of their market share.

Today, promotional comics continue to be used as a marketing tool to reach both children and adults alike. This 2005 comic was produced by Marvel Comics as a salute to the men and women of the armed forces.

A COMIC BY ANY OTHER NAME

One of the earliest names for promotional comics was "special purpose comics." In their pursuit of superheroes, collectors have allowed promotional comics to lie fallow - underappreciated and uncollected. Without a legitimate name, these products were given sundry other appellations - industrial comics, promos, giveaways, premiums, promics - each accurate but only for a small segment of the unorganized but lusty and lively medium. Perhaps no one name can cover all the variations and purposes of this branch of comic art, but for practical reasons if we accept the general premise that these comics were created to promote an idea, a product or a person, then "Promotional Comics" is probably as convenient a catch-all title as we can come up with.

We used the phrase "for practical reasons" because the word "practical" goes to the heart of promotional comics more than it does for any other comics product. What greater testimony is there to the medium's impact on American culture than to note their use by hard-headed, profit-minded business people and corporations? They invest their money and they expect results.

Today, premium comics continue to thrive and are still utilized as a valuable marketing and promotional tool. "Free" comics are still packaged with action figures and video games, and offered as mail-away premiums from a variety of product manufacturers. The comic industry itself has expanded its use of giveaway comics to self-promote as well, with "ash-can" and other giveaway editions turning up at conventions and comic shops to advertise upcoming series and special events. Many of these function as old-fashioned premiums, with a coupon or other response required from the reader to receive the comic.

As for the supplements and giveaways printed all those years ago, they have spawned a collectible fervor all their own, thanks to their atypical distribution and frequent rarity. For that and the desire to delve deeper into comics history, we hope that by focusing more directly on this genre, we can enhance our understanding of this vital component in the development and history of the modern comic book.

Whether you're a collector or not, we're all motivated by that desire to get something for nothing. For as long as consumers are enticed by the notion of the "free gift," promotional comics will remain a vital marketing component in many business models, but they will also continue to fight the stigma that has long been associated with the industry as a whole. "Respectable" sources like Fortune may have taken notice of the power of comic-related advertising 71 years ago, but after all this time comics still fight an uphill battle to establish some measure of dignity for the medium. Perhaps the higher visibility of promotional comics will eventually prove to be a deciding factor in that intellectual war.

See ya in the funny papers.

MOTION PICTURE FUNNIES WEEKLY (Amazing Man #5 on?)
First Funnies, Inc.: 1939 (Giveaway)(B&W, 36 pgs.) No month given; last panel in Sub-Mariner story dated 4/39 (Also see Colossus, Green Giant & Invaders No. 20)

1-Origin & 1st printed app. Sub-Mariner by Bill Everett (8 pgs.); Fred Schwab-c; reprinted in Marvel Mystery #1 with color added over the craft tint which was used to shade the black & white version; Spy Ring, American Ace (reprinted in Marvel Mystery #3) app. (Rare)-only eight known copies, one near mint with white pages, the rest with brown pages.	5000	10,000	15,000	25,000	35,000	-
Covers only to #2-4 (set)						800

NOTE: Eight copies (plus one coverless) were discovered in 1974 in the estate of the deceased publisher. Covers only to issues No. 2-4 were also found which evidently were printed in advance along with #1. #1 was to be distributed only through motion picture movie houses. However, it is believed that only advanced copies were sent out and the motion picture houses not going for the idea. Possible distribution at local theaters in Boston suspected. The "pay" copy (graded at 9.0) was discovered after 1974, bringing the total known to nine. The last panel of Sub-Mariner contains a rectangular box with "Continued Next Week" printed in it. When reprinted in Marvel Mystery, the box was left in with lettering omitted.

Other various comic sections were found with the above, but were more like the Sunday comic sections in format.

THE PIONEER AGE

The American Comic Book: 1500s–1828

For the last few years, we have featured a tremendous article by noted historian and collector Eric C. Caren on the foundations of what we now call "The Pioneer Age" of comics. We look forward to a new article on this significant topic in a future edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide. In the meantime, should you need it, Caren's article may be found in the 35th through 39th editions.

That said, even with the space constraints in this edition of the Guide, we could not possibly exclude reference to these incredible, formative works.

The Murder of King Henry III (1589).

Quite frankly, because we can see in them the very building blocks of the comic art form.

The shooting of the Italian Concini (1617).

Over the course of just a few hundred years, we the evolution of narration, word balloons, panel-to-panel progression of story, and so much more. If these stories aren't developed first, how would be every have reached the point that that The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck could have come along in 1842?

As the investigation of comic book history has blown away the notion that comic books were a 20 century invention, it hasn't been easy to convince some, even with the clear, linear progression of the artful melding of illustration and words.

"Want to avoid an argument in social discourse? Steer clear of politics and religion. In the latter category, the most controversial subject is human evolution. Collectors can become just as squeamish when you start messing with the evolution of a particular collectible," Eric Caren wrote in his article. "In most cases, the origin of a particular comic character will be universally agreed upon, but try tackling the origin of printed comics and you are asking for trouble."

"The Bubblers Medley" (1720).

"Join, or Die" from the Pennsylvania Gazette, May 9, 1754.

"Amusement for John Bull..." from The European Magazine (1783).

Cartoons satirizing Napoleon on the front page of the Connecticut Mirror, dated January 7, 1811.

But the evidence is there for any who choose to look. Before the original comics of the Golden Age, there were comic strip reprints collected in comic book form. The practice dated back decades earlier, of course, but coalesced into the current form when the realities of the Great Depression spawned the modern incarnation of the comic book and its immediate cousin, the Big Little Book.

Everything that came later, though, did so because the acceptance of the visual language had already been worked out. Before Spider-Man and the Hulk, before Superman and Batman, before the Yellow Kid, Little Nemo, and the Brownies, cartoonists and editorial illustrators were working out how to tell a story or simply convey their ideas in this new artform.

Without this sort of work, without these pioneers, we simply wouldn't be where we are today.

Another Napoleon cartoon, this time dubbing him "The Corsican Munchausen," from the London Strand, December 4, 1813.

"A Consultation at the Medical Board" from The Pasquin or General Satirist (1821).

Monumental Inscriptions.

THESE Inscriptions, compiled from authentic sources, but principally from Official Documents, communicated by the Department of War to Congress, on the 25th of January, 1828, are, in this form, submitted to the serious consideration of the American People, under the firm conviction, that the facts embodied in them, ought to, and will, produce a cool and deliberate examination of the qualifications, from Nature and Education, of General ANDREW JACKSON, for the high Civil Station to which he aspires, and to attain which he electioneers with a boldness and pertinacity, unexampled in this Republic. If he shall be found guilty of having ILLEGALLY AND WANTONLY SHED THE BLOOD OF HIS COUNTRYMEN AND FELLOW SOLDIERS, ENTRUST NOT THE LIBERTY AND HAPPINESS OF THIS MOST FREE AND MOST HAPPY COUNTRY TO HIS KEEPING.

HERE LIE
A BRAVE
And conscientious soldier in the Militia of the Creek War.
His term of service had expired,
And he returned to his home justified by the officers of every grade.
Fearing that his legal tour of duty had possibly not expired,
He voluntarily returned to Camp,
EXPRESSED GREAT CONTRITION FOR HIS ERRORS,
If any had been committed,
And thereupon received from his General
A WRITTEN PARDON.
He was nevertheless Arrested, Tried, and SHOT TO DEATH, BY THE ORDERS OF
GEN. ANDREW JACKSON,
On the 21st February,
1815.

Oh! reader whoever you are,
Let not the splendour of Military renown,
Blot out from your indignant recollection
this bloody deed,
DONE BY A HERO.

The Mites of Widows and Orphans,
Have contributed to raise this Slab, to the memory of a brave man,
On the 4th July, 1828.

Left: "The Burning of Mr. John Rogers," 1646 is the earliest-known North American cartoon printed on paper printed in the earliest children's primer in America.

"God's Revenge For Murder" By John Reynolds, unknown artist, 1656. Earliest-known sequential comic "panel" strip created in the English language.

Left: From his pamphlet Plain Truth 1747 containing Ben Franklin's earliest-known cartoon titled "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves" depicting ancient "super hero" Hercules in the upper right corner. Middle: "A Warm Place - Hell", one of two images definitely known to be drawn and engraved by Paul Revere, 1768. Word balloons had wide-spread usage in many cartoons in the 1700s. Right: The Tables Turned by James Gillray, 1797 commenting on an "invasion" of England by 1400 French convicts. The use of word balloons was wide spread in many parts of the world long before the Yellow Kid's parrot uttered a few words in 1896.

The Comic Almanac(k) debuted in America in 1831 with the earliest-known titles starting heavy with humor and sporting crude woodcut single panel cartoons. Ellm's American Comic Almanac was one of the first. By 1835 Davy Crockett, one of the nation's earliest national folk heroes, began issuing his own version. In the late 1840s the Comic Almanac(k)s began to offer tall-tale sequential comic strips which became somewhat commonplace in the 1850s, fueled by the advent of the California Gold Rush. They were instrumental in the development of the American comic strip and we will be reporting more new finds after further research into American folklore.

We have a lot of new discoveries to share with you again this year as amply evident in the price index which follows this year's history lesson. A quantum leap has finally been achieved in the area of introducing the comic book collecting world to American Comic Almanac(k)s as well as a huge multitude of American humor periodicals, many of which contained sequential comic strips.

This Victorian Era section is devoted to comic strips and books published during the years the United States expanded across the North American continent, fought a Civil War, shifted from an agrarian to an industrial society, "welcomed" waves of immigrants, and struggled over race, class, religion, temperance, and suffrage - and all of it depicted and satirized by generations of mostly now long-forgotten cartoonists. The social attitudes, beliefs, and conventions of 19th century America, the good as well as the bad, are to be found in abundance. Perhaps the first question to pop into most readers' minds will be, "What, beyond the happenstance of publication date, are Victorian Era comics?"

There has been a long slow-motion evolution of the comic strip which was not invented in America, contrary to many previous history books on the subject. One must examine many aspects of concurrent popular culture. The main aspect that we believe most distinguishes Victorian Era comic strips from those of later eras was the extremely rare use of word balloons within sequential (multi-picture) comic stories. When word balloons were used, it was nearly always within single-panel cartoons. On the occasions when they appeared inside a strip, with very few exceptions, the ballooned dialogue was inconsequential. Nineteenth-century comics tended to place both narration and dialogue beneath comic panels rather than within the panel's borders as they were thought by many to interfere with the art. Many of these comics are to the word balloon-strewn post-Yellow Kid comics of the 20th Century as silent movies are to the later "talkies." Just as sound changed how stories were structured on film, so too did comic strips change when the words were moved from beneath panels to inside them, and dialogue rather than narration drove the story in conjunction with the pictures.

The Victorian Era of actual comic strip books began on different dates in different nations, depending on when the first publication of a sequential comic book on their soil is known to have occurred. For the U.S. this happened when the American literary periodical Brother Jonathan printed the 40-page, 195-panel graphic novel The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck as a special extra dated September 14, 1842. Almost six decades later, America's Victorian comics came to their end, replaced by the onslaught of Platinum Age books reprinting newspaper strips from Bennett, Hearst, and Pulitzer Sunday comic sections, among many others.

There is considerable overlap between Victorian Era and Platinum Age comic books and strips. Those publications that continued from one century into the next, such as Puck, Judge, and Life, have their pre-1900 issues listed within the Victorian Age section, while their post-1899 issues can be found inside the Platinum Age. Some non-sequential (i.e., single-panel) American comic items existing prior to 1842 are also listed herein, going back to 1795. These belong to what could tentatively be called the Age of Caricature (1770s through 1830s). This was a fertile period for the art in England, when Gillray and Rowlandson, and, later, Cruikshank, Heath, and Seymour were that nation's top cartoonists. During the same period in the U.S., there were no artists who made their living as caricaturists, though William Charles, printer and engraver, did produce about two dozen spirited cartoon broadsides from 1805 to 1820, the most important ones concerning events of the War of 1812.

In addition, one can trace origins of American comic books to the humorous Comic Almanacs which began in earnest in the early 1830s.

The earliest known cartoon-like woodcut printed on paper in North America was in a Puritan children's book first published in 1646. Titled simply The Burning of Mr. John Rogers, it showed in flaming graphic detail what happens to those who stray from the flock and have to be burned at the stake. Dr. Wertham would have had a field day with that one!

Cartoon broadsides and other single panel images, often using word balloons, appeared from pre-Revolution days through the end of the 19th Century. The earliest known attributed cartoon, designed by the ubiquitous Benjamin Franklin, was "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves," which first appeared in his pamphlet Plain Truth in 1747.

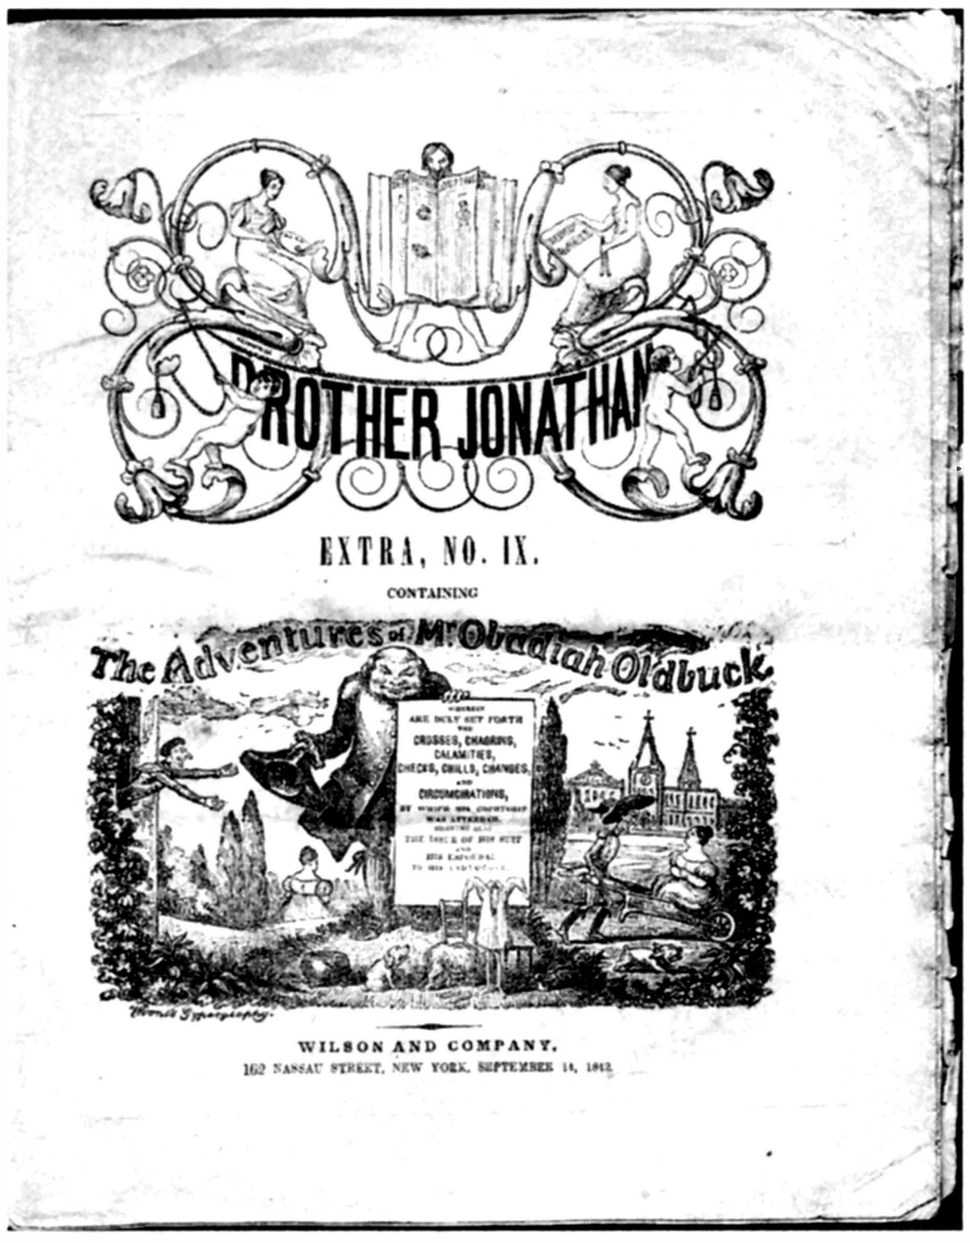
The most popularly remembered 18th-Century American cartoons are likely Franklin's "Join or Die" in 1754, representing the American Colonies as severed snake parts, and "The Bloody Massacre Perpetrated in King Street" -- Paul Revere's 1770 depiction of the Boston Massacre, which he pirated from the earlier Henry Pelham broadsheet cartoon "The Fruits of Arbitrary Power."

In September 1826, John Warner Barber, New Haven, Ct. (1798-1885) designed and self-published the broadside The Drunkard's Progress, Or The Direct Road to Poverty, Wretchedness and Ruin showing in four stages sequentially "The Morning Dram" which is "The Beginning of Sorrow, " "The Grog Shop" with its "Bad Company," "The Confirmed Drunkard" in a state of "Beastly Intoxication," and the "Concluding Scene" with the family being driven off to the alms house. It is an interesting set of cuts, faintly reminiscent of Hogarth. Barber began his career in 1819, age 21, engraving on wood. He devoted most of his career to the multitude of art chores associated with book production. As late as 1870 he was issuing Barber's Temperance Tracts, which built upon his 1826 original plus four panels showing the positive effects of living without alcohol.

The first American whose fame was based primarily on his cartoons appears to be David Claypoole Johnston (1798-1865). Johnston provided illustrations for various almanacs, books, and periodicals, including the masthead for Brother Jonathans. Most notable of Johnston's comics work was his nine-issue series Scraps, which he self-published from 1828 to 1849. This series was highly influenced by George Cruikshank's series Scraps and Sketches, which first appeared in 1827. Because of the resemblance, Johnston became known in his day as "the American Cruikshank." Each issue of Johnston's Scraps consists of four large folio-sized pages, printed on one side, with nine to twelve single-panel cartoons per page, and each page often organized around a theme. Also popular was his comic album Outlines Illustrative of the Journal of F A K (1835), which parodied passages from the journal of recently published observations on America by British actress Fanny Kemble.

Johnston, himself a failed actor, had an interest in the theater his entire career. In addition to producing a number of prints depicting American actors in famous roles, he collaborated with actor Henry J. Finn to produce the 1831 (American) Comic Annual, with Finn as Editor and Johnston as artist, published by Richardson, Lord and Holbrook, Boston. It featured almost 30 full-page Johnston-designed copper engravings and woodcuts. Also that year, Finn solo produced Finn's Comic Sketch Book, a twelve-page album similar to Johnston's Scraps with upwards of half a dozen single-panel cartoons per page. It was published by Peabody and Co, of New York in business from 1831-1843. (Finn died tragically in a steamboat accident Jan. 13, 1840.)

Perhaps Johnston's most interesting contribution to the history of the comic strip in American came in 1837, when he produced the sequential comic broadside, Illustrations of the Adventures & Achievements of the Renowned Don Quixote & his Doughty Squire Sancho Panza (27.4 x 30.4 cm). This blank-reverse engraved print was an elaborate twelve-panel satire of the Andrew Jackson-Van Buren administration. It likely sold for 25 cents, seeing distribution in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Much later, in 1863, Johnston drew another sequential comic broadside, The House the Jeff Built (27.5 x 36.7 cm), a bitter indictment of Jefferson Davis and the Southern slavocracy.



In July 1839, Wilson and Company, a newly formed New York printing firm, began publishing a mammoth newspaper by the name of Brother Jonathan. The publisher, J. Gregg Wilson had employed the newspaper format for Brother Jonathan to circumvent the higher postage rates imposed on magazines, but Brother Jonathan was a newspaper in format only -- it contained not a shred of news, instead specializing in serialized fiction, some of it written by Americans but most of it pirated from foreign sources. Despite the cost savings, the mammoth format had its limitations; when opened it measured a whopping three feet by four feet. So, once Brother Jonathan was an established success, Wilson and Day began in January 1841 the simultaneous publication of a magazine-sized quarto edition of Brother Jonathan that reprinted the contents of the mammoth edition.

Later that same year, to capitalize on the name recognition of their successful twin publications, Wilson and Company started issuing book-length Brother Jonathan Extras in the same format as the quarto magazine. These reprints are counted among the earliest paperback books in America. Most of the Extra numbers were pirated European novels. For example their eighth extra was the first American printing of a Charles Dickens novel. But for their ninth Extra, they did something no American publisher had ever done before -- they pirated a graphic novel, Rodolphe Töpffer's The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck. By reformatting Oldbuck from its original small oblong strip design to fit Brother Jonathan's standard quarto format Wilson and Company inadvertently made this edition (alone) of Obadiah Oldbuck resemble a modern comic book. Oldbuck's arrival on the shores of the New World would directly inspire a wave of American imitators. [This first Wilson printing of Oldbuck from 1842 was reprinted in same-size limited edition facsimile by the Naples Comicon in 2003. An English translation by Leonardo De Sá of Töpffer's original draft is at leonardo desa.interdinamica. net/comics/lds/]

Even though in 1904 (in its September 3 edition), The New York Times accurately identified the Brother Jonathan Extra as the first American comic book as well as Wilson & Co. utilizing Tilt & Bougue's original printing plates as well as still being in print for sale in New York at such a late date, Töpffer has already been largely forgotten in the New World. It is high time Töpffer received credit long overdue as the inventor of the modern comic strip, laying previously long-held myths to rest.

Töpffer (1799-1846) was a playwright, novelist, artist, and teacher from Geneva, Switzerland, who in 1827 had begun producing what he called "picture novels," sharing them with his friends and students. His earliest editions were self-published via lithography on transfer paper as they use the word "autographie" in their imprints. The earliest printers were J. Freydig, Frutiger (1830s) and Schmidt (1840s). These first sequential comic books, scripted in Töpffer's native French language, found their way to Paris and became an instant hit. According to Gombrich in Art and Illusion (1960), "Töpffer recognized that he could rely on the reader to supplement from their own lives what was omitted between the panels. This is crucial in the development of the sequential comic strip."

Cover to the subscriber version of the earliest-known sequential comic book published in America, The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck, Sept. 1842, Wilson & Co. New York, originally conceived in 1828 in Geneva Switzerland by creator Rodolphe Töpffer.

The demand for his comic books soon outstripped the supply, and pirated editions, redrawn by others, were created by Parisian publisher Aubert to capitalize on this. In a world where international copyright conventions did not exist, this was perfectly legal, if morally questionable. Thus, in 1841, London publisher Tilt and Bogue commissioned George Cruikshank to create an English version of Töpffer's Les Amours de M. Vieux Bois by pirating Aubert's pirated edition of the Geneva original.

This English translation, co-financed by George Cruikshank himself, sported a new cover page by George's brother Robert, based on a montage of Töpffer's scenes. Confirmation of this fact came when George Cruikshank's personal copy surfaced in auction recently with the inscription "Copied from a French book by my Brother Robert" above the title page with the same scene. This is the translation that was reprinted by America's Wilson and Company as The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck utilizing the original Tilt and Bogue printing plates.

Tilt and Bogue followed up their success by translating into English two additional stories of Töpffer's seven published graphic novels: Beau Ogleby, circa 1843 (originally Histoire de M. Jabot), and Bachelor Butterfly two years later (from Histoire de M. Cryptogame). David Bogue also published picture-story strip books by John Leighton using the pseudonym Luke Limner. He wrote and drew beautiful comic books titled London Out of Town or The Adventures of the Browns At The Seaside; Comic Art-Manufactures; and The Ancient Story of the Old Dame and Her Pig starting in 1847, but none of these seem to have ever been republished in America. They follow a definite Töpffer influence. This growing body of comic book production was made easier by the spreading understanding of transfer paper lithography, otherwise the panels would have had to have been drawn and lettered mirror reverse. Gombrich referred to Töpffer's comic books as "the innocent ancestors of today's manufactured dreams... everywhere in these countless episodes of almost surrealist inconsequence we find a mastery of physiognomic characterization which sets the standard for such influential humorous draftsmen in the 19th century as Wilhelm Busch in Germany."

A Register of The New York City Book Trades 1821-1842 by Sidney F. & Elizabeth Stege12, Huttner (The Bibliographical Society of America, NYC, 1993) mentions Benjamin H. Day bought into Brother Jonathan's publisher, Wilson and Company, in this year, becoming at some point an equal partner with owner J. Gregg Wilson. The Register lists them both as publishers of Brother Jonathan at the same address of 162 Nassau Street. Other historical artifacts state Day eventually became sole-owner and publisher. Exactly when has not yet been determined, though we have figured out with certainly before 1850 .

This is the same Benjamin H. Day who started the first successful penny newspaper in 1833, The (New York) Sun, transforming it in four short years into the largest circulation daily in the world at that time. He sold out his ownership of the Sun to his brother-in-law during the financial "panic" of 1837, a mistake he regretted the rest of his life. He re-emerged heavily involved in Brother Jonathan definitely by 1840 and as a partner by 1841. Brother Jonathan's offices were right next door to Tamany Hall. (See the first 20 minutes of the 2002 movie Gangs of New York to visualize the period atmosphere and their customer base.) According to The Brothers Harper by Eugene Exmen (Harper & Row, 1965), on page 125, "Brother Jonathan... offered in its weekly edition and also in special supplements very cheap reprints of English novels. In effect, it began a price-cutting war against the older established 'pirates' among the book publishers..." Day, it appears, had found the perfect project on which to build a new empire.

Desirous of repeating the success they had with Obadiah Oldbuck, Wilson and Company published the first American edition of Bachelor Butterfly in 1846. Three years later, they reformatted Obadiah Oldbuck back into its original British shape using lithography, dropping a handful of comic panels and altering the text to hide these deletions. Soon thereafter, they published other comic books for a steadily growing market that they had helped to stimulate. In recognition of their significant role in the dissemination of sequential comics, Wilson and Company deserve to be remembered as the first comic book publisher in America.

Back in Europe, perhaps inspired by his involvement with Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck, George Cruikshank soon created several sequential comic books of his own. These too found their way to America. The Bachelor's Own Book, published first in Britain in 1844, became the second known U.S. published sequential comic book when it was reprinted by Burgess, Stringer and Company the following year. Next was Cruikshank's masterpiece The Bottle, the Hogarthian-style tale of a man whose addiction to alcohol brings himself and his family to ruin. After debuting in London in 1847, it was reprinted the same year in a British-American co-publication between David Bogue and Americans Wiley and Putnam. Both printings were in huge folio form, available in either black and white or professionally hand-tinted versions. In 1848, the story saw American print again, this time in smaller form, placed at the front of the otherwise prose volume Temperance Tales; Or, Six Nights with the Washing-tonians. It continued to be reprinted by a variety of publishers into the early 20th Century. The Bottle was even reproduced onto painted glass slides and then projected by magic lantern onto a screen for the moral edification of temperance audiences. The Drunkard's Children, Cruikshank's sequel to The Bottle, was issued July 1, 1848 as a British-American-Australian co-publishing venture, but was less successful, and had not nearly as many reprints.

The most clearly sequential, as well as fun, of George Cruikshank's comic books was The Tooth-Ache, first issued in London in 1849. It was reprinted in America later that same year by Philadelphia map maker J.L. Smith. An additional current version was also issued from Boston.

When closed, this booklet appears an unassuming 5-1/4 inches tall by 3-1/4 inches wide. Its striking feature is that the book folds open accordion style, stretching the entire 43-panel story along one single strip of paper, which when fully extended is seven feet, three inches long! The Tooth-Ache was issued in both black and white and professionally hand-colored editions. Abridged editions of the story, printed in black and white and with a "normal" page-turning rather than foldout presentation, appeared inside promotional giveaway comics issued by American companies in the 1880s.

Thanks to Töpffer, Cruikshank, and a handful of enterprising American publishers, the 1840s should be remembered as the decade when America first fell in love with the comics. It had seen the U.S. publication of six sequential comic books, as well as the importation of other comics with foreign imprints. America's growing interest in graphic humor was further stimulated by the growth of two other fields: the cartoon broadside and the humor magazine.

The Adventures of Obadiah Oldbuck, rare newly discovered 4th edition from mid 1850s. Says now "Published at Brother Jonathan Offices." Art & Story now accredited to the pseudonym "Timothy Crayon" - see Peter Piper ad previous page.

The Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Bachelor Butterfly by Rodolphe Töpffer (New York, 1846) was America's 3rd comic book; Wilson & Company's second comic book, this time out staying with the original European format.

As mentioned before, the cartoon broadside had been a part of the American scene since pre-Revolution days, but it did not flourish until stone lithography (introduced in 1818 and in wide use by the 1830s) made the reproduction of images relatively fast and cheap. From the early 1830s into the mid 1840s, the leading producer of cartoon broadsides in America was New York printer H. R. Robinson, who either drew his own cartoons or employed others, especially E. W. Clay, to do it. Clay is notable for having produced the first sequential comic broadside in America. Published in 1834 and entitled, "This Is the House that Jack Built" (50 x 32 cm), the nine-panel parody of the classic nursery rhyme was an attack on the Jackson Administration. The dominant theme of American cartoon broadsides was political, as befitted a nation where politics was the leading spectator sport. As the American electorate grew increasingly educated and prosperous, the demand for cartoon broadside also increased. During the 1840s, lithographers in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, entered the field to satisfy that demand. The best known of these, Nathaniel Currier, later Currier and Ives, joined the fray in 1848. The firm employed many artists, but its chief political cartoonist was Louis Maurer and its chief comic artist was Thomas Worth.

Except for the three previously cited sequential cartoon broadsides, nearly all of the cartoon broadsides published in America from 1832 to 1876, its dominant era, were single panels. From the 1860s onward, broadside series on a single comic theme became common, the most famous being Thomas Worth's Darktown series. These can be loosely categorized as sequential comics since they employed the same characters and formed a story of sorts when hung together on a wall, as was the publisher's expectation. Sequential art or not, the cartoon broadsides nearly always employed the speech balloons that later became one of the defining characteristic of the American comic strip.

During the same decade that sequential comics and cartoon broadsides were growing in popularity, the illustrated American humor magazine made its debut. The British comic weekly Punch, founded in 1841, was an immediate success, both in England and the United States. It was a handsomely printed quarto, initially twelve pages and later sixteen, with a repeating cover design, backed by a page of small advertisements, humorous text interspersed with comic spot art, and a single panel full-page cartoon. A significant subset of Punch's subscriber base was located in the U.S., to which thousands of copies were exported on an ongoing trans-Atlantic basis. Inevitably, enterprising American publishers attempted to repulse this invader with a home-grown comic weekly. The first, Yankee Doodle, came to town (New York, that is) on October 10, 1846, for one year. Judy (November 28, 1846 to February 20, 1847), The John-Donkey (January 1 to October 21, 1848), and The Elephant (January 22 to February 19, 1848) soon followed. None of them was successful, but all of them continued to feed the growing American interest in comic art.

By the late 1840s, comic art was flourishing in America. The conditions were right for the production of the earliest known American-created sequential comic book. Brothers James and Donald Read, who had worked for a time as cartoonists on Yankee Doodle, were the creators of Journey to the Gold Diggins by Jeremiah Saddlebags. This spirited send-up of the California gold rush craze was published in June 1849 by Stringer and Townsend, the late publishers of Judy, and, soon after, by U. P. James of Cincinnati. This Töpffer-influenced comic book chronicles the adventures of its hero Jeremiah Saddlebags in his get-rich-quick quest for gold in California. It is highly sought by collectors of Western Americana. Interestingly, the back cover of the Stringer and Townsend edition carries an advertisement for Rose and Gertrude - a Genevese Story, one of Rodolphe Töpffer's non-comics prose novels.

Stringer and Townsend was making something of a name for itself as a publisher of comic art. It will be remembered that it was one of the 1845 participants in the American publication of The Bachelor's Own Book. And, then, in 1846-47, it published Judy. Its decision to issue Jeremiah Saddlebags was all in due course.

The Gold Rush proved to be a gold mine for American comic artists. Aside from being a featured topic in the 1849 edition of David Claypool Johnston's Scraps, in comic almanacs, and in Currier cartoon prints, it was the subject of several other significant sequential series. The first, The Adventures of Mr. Tom Plump (a fat man who nearly starves to death in his failed attempt at California Gold riches), saw print in 1850. The second, The Adventures of Jeremiah Old-Pot (a twelve-part burlesque narrative of a New York businessman who attempts to get rich selling tin in price-inflated California), ran throughout 1852 in Yankee Notions. Though the narrative was distinctly American in its humor, the artwork was probably German in origin. Yankee Notions' Publisher, T. W. Strong, built his business on recycling old woodcuts with new captions attached. It should be noted that the Old-Pot series, borrowed or otherwise, was the first sequential art to appear in an American humor magazine. Yankee Notions, published from 1852 to 1875, also has the distinction of being the first comic monthly published in America.

"Moses Keyser the Bowery Bully's Trip to the California Gold Mines," was a 13-page comic story that appeared in Elton's Californian Comic All-My-Nack for 1850. It was reprinted at least twice in the circa 1850-51 booklet The Clown, Or The Banquet of Wit and later again in Sam Slick's Comic Almanac in 1857. The Clown is also notable as the earliest known anthology of sequential comics, with the bonus that each multi-panel story is by a different artist. Many of the artists are as yet unidentified, and how much of it is original American material versus that reprinted from Europe is presently unknown. But verified are cartoons by George Cruikshank, Elton (American), the Read brothers, Grandville (French), and Richard Doyle (British). The Doyle contribution reprints the comics story "Brown, Jones and Robinson and How They Went to a Ball," which originally saw print in the August 24, 1850 issue of Punch. This is the first known American appearance of these Doyle characters, and was almost certainly pirated.

Richard Doyle's The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson is basically a travelogue in illustrated form, told via humorous episodes, part sequential cartoon sequences, and part snapshots of moments jumping forward in time. This halfway sequential format was ideal for most 19th Century cartoonists, who, with rare exception, had not quite grasped how to maintain a single sequential story for much longer than two dozen successive panels. Doyle had simplified Töpffer's formula in a manner most artists could attempt to emulate. Episodes of "Brown, Jones, and Robinson" originally appeared in Punch in 1850, until a dispute between the Roman Catholic Doyle and Punch's editors over an anti-Papal joke ended with Doyle's resignation. Doyle redrew and expanded the story into a single album, first seeing print in 1854 from British publisher Bradbury and Evans.

New York Publisher D. Appleton brought the album to America, reprinting it in 1860, 1871, and 1877. Next, Dick and Fitzgerald of New York pirated Doyle's story sometime in the early 1870s. Doyle's format from Foreign Tour was emulated again and again. Examples include: the 1857 Mr. Hardy Lee, His Yacht, by Charles Stedman; the 1860s- 1870s G. W. Carleton-published Our Artist In... series, set in various Latin American countries; the Augustus Hoppin 1870s sketch novels On the Nile, Crossing the Atlantic, and Ups and Downs on Land and Water; and Life founder John Ames Mitchell's 1881 (pre-Life) The Summer School of Philosophy at Mt. Desert. D. Appleton, the official, authorized American publisher of Foreign Tour, even commissioned an American artist - Toby - to create a sequel comic album involving Doyle's characters visiting the U.S. and Canada, published in 1872 as The American Tour of Messrs Brown, Jones and Robinson. In terms of influencing the development of mid-19th Century American comics, Doyle's Foreign Tour ranks with the works of Töpffer, Cruikshank, and Busch.

Doyle was also the author of an equally popular earlier cartoon series for Punch, titled, In Manners and Customs of Ye Englyshe, Mr. Pips Hys Diary, which was reprinted in 1849. In this work, Doyle told his story using a deliberately primitive almost stick-figure art style, combined with the Hogarthian structure of large single panel cartoons leaping forward in time with each picture.

Manners and Customs of Ye Harvard Studente, which ran in the first year of the Harvard Lampoon (1876-current), shows the clearest influence. The series by then student Francis Gilbert Attwood was collected in 1877 by Houghton Mifflin. Attwood followed it up with Manners and Customs of Ye Bostonians, again in the pages of the Harvard Lampoon, but it is unknown whether that series was ever reprinted in book form. Attwood later became one of the regular artists in Life.

The Extraordinary and Mirth-provoking Adventures by Sea and Land of Oscar Shanghai, inspired by Bachelor Butterfly, was issued May 1855 by Garrett and Company, Publishers, No. 18 Ann Street, New York. Oscar Shanghai has many misadventures including being swallowed by a whale, making a trip in a flying machine to Africa, where he is shot out of a huge bow by a "Black Prince" for refusing to marry a local princess of color. After more adventures, he makes it back home.

Oscar Shanghai's first publisher was confirmed in 2002 with the discovery of a very rare 36-page catalog from 1856 of books, pamphlets and prints handled by B.H. Day (successor to Wilson and Company) who was by this time publishing Brother Jonathan as a twice-a-year holiday pictorial only. The catalog has a few crossover advertisement pages from an associate publisher, Garrett and Company. This rediscovered treasure, which sold for $750 in 2002, contains within a sequential strip of one panel per page over 32 of those pages titled "Peter Piper in Bengal," by John Tenniel, reprinted from four 1853 issues of Punch. In the narrative, Peter Piper tries his hand hunting all different kinds of wild game with many misadventures.

Amongst the many varied types of "Cheap Books" for sale in this rare catalog are the comic books The Adventures of Obadiah Oldbuck, Bachelor Butterfly's Queer Love Adventures and Misfortunes, and The Fortunes of Ferdinand Flipper, plus the aforementioned Oscar Shanghai. All were priced at "25¢ per copy, postage free, refunds paid out in stamps." There is also an advertisement for a comic book entitled A Day's Sport - Or, Hunting Adventures of S. Winks Wattles, a Shopkeeper, Thomas Titt, a "legal gent," and Major Nicholas Noggin, a Jolly Good Fellow Generally by Henry L. Stephens (1824-1882) of Philadelphia.

Stephens, later the political cartoonist for Vanity Fair (New York, 1859-1863) and a leading children's book illustrator, produced his first work, Illustrations of the Poets: From Passages in the Life of Little Billy Vidkins, a small wrappered album of 32 comic woodcuts, in 1849. It was first published by S. Robinson, of Philadelphia, and reprinted with variant titles several times in the 1850s including Yankee Notions. It is likely that Little Billy Vidkins was printed before Jeremiah Saddlebags, though more research is needed before making this claim.

Garrett and Company was also responsible for the 1856 publication of The Sad Tale of the Courtship of Chevalier Slyfox-Wikof, Showing His Heart-Rending Astounding and Most Wonderful Love Adventures with Fanny Elssler and Miss Gambol. This book parodied the very public relationship between the then-famous wealthy American aristocrat Henry Wikoff, and the even more famous European actress/ dancer Fanny Elssler. It is dated thusly because Wikoff's memoir is pictured in the comic book.

Apparently in late 1854 Garrett and Company formed a brief two-year partnership with Dick and Fitzgerald, officially becoming Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald in November 1856, while continuing to operate out of the same 18 Ann Street address in New York. One month later they issued Richard Doyle's British published graphic novel The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson, reformatting it into the same oblong shape as Garrett's two prior comic books (which in turn were formatted in imitation of Töpffer's albums). This information came to light just this year. The interested scholar is encouraged to check out the new listings for Garrett's The Home Circle in the index.

In 1858, Garrett appears to have dropped out, leaving Dick and Fitzgerald alone with the former's book stock, his place of business, and most importantly, the printing plates for his comic books. For reasons unknown, Dick and Fitzgerald steered away from reprinting Garrett's comic books for more than a decade. But in the 1870s they resumed publication - not only of the three albums published by Garrett, but also of Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly from Wilson and Company, and Ferdinand Flipper from Brother Jonathan - all of them also making use of the original printing plates. The inclusion of books from Brother Jonathan, Wilson and Company, and Garrett and Company all within the same promotional Peter Piper catalog from B.H. Day suggests that these early publishers of comic books had many over-lapping fields of interest,, and that Dick and Fitzgerald became the inheritor/acquirer of all of it. Dick and Fitzgerald also reprinted in the 1870s the earlier William T. Peter published Ichabod Academicus (how that title might have connected, if at all, with B.H. Day's business remains unclear). We can now say, though, that an evolving group of a handful of publishers was responsible, over a span of 46 years, beginning with the very first graphic novel published in America in 1842, for keeping in print in America a cluster of slightly over half a dozen graphic novels.

Tebbel's History of Book Publishing in the US (vol. 1, pages 351-2) states that Burgess and Stringer was dissolved in late 1840s and became two firms, Stringer and Townsend, and Burgess and Garrett. Burgess retired in 1850 and his nephew William Brisbane Dick stepped into the partnership, whereupon the new company was renamed Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald. Garrett retired in 1851 and the firm became Dick and Fitzgerald. The firm persisted under that name until 1917.

Collections reprinting cartoons from Punch saw print in the U.S., such as Merry Pictures by the Comic Hands, imported for the 1859 Christmas Season, plus various John Leech, George Du Maurier, and Phil May books which appeared from the 1850s through 1910s. Finally, many American weekly newspapers and weekly and monthly magazines, humorous and non-humorous, reprinted cartoons from Punch. Such inclusions often became a prelude to switching to original material by American artists, if that publication find's cartoon section find American cartoonists of sufficient talent.

Harper's Monthly, the leading American monthly, was a prime example. Soon after it commenced publication in November 1850, it began to carry a few pages of single panel cartoons reprinted from Punch at the rear of each issue. This evolved into reprinting sequential comic pages from the British periodical Town Talk, and then, starting December 1853, original sequential comics by the great Frank Bellew.

Journey to the Gold Diggins By Jeremiah Saddlebags, June 1849, so far the earliest known sequential comic book by American creators, J.A. and D.F. Read. Above: a couple sample pages. Note similarity to Töpffer's comics especially Bachelor Butterfly

Bellew (1828-1888) should be regarded as the "Father of American Sequential Comics." Born in India, educated in France and England, he emigrated to America in 1850. His earliest work shows an influence from Doyle, but he rapidly developed his own unique art style. Bellew's comics, both sequential and single panel, graced nearly every American comic periodical published from the 1850s into the 1870s.

A month after the publication of the anonymous first installment of Jeremiah Old-Pot in Yankee Notions, Bellew began contributing his six-part, 18-panel comic series, "Mr. Blobb in Search of a Physician" to The Lantern, a New York comic weekly published from January 10, 1852 to July 2, 1853. The series ran in six of the nine issues published from January 31 through March 27, 1852. This was followed in April and May by the 16-panel, three-issue comic sequence "Mr. Bulbear's Dream", which concluded with the main character awakened from his dream by falling out of bed, exactly like Little Nemo would do five decades later.

These two series were just the beginning for Bellew, who contributed a voluminous amount of work to the New York Picayune (1850-1860) (which he also edited for a time in 1857-58), The Comic Monthly (1859-1881), Momus, an 1860 comic daily, The Phunniest of Awl (1864-1867) (which he also edited), Punchinello (1870), and Wild Oats (1870-1881), to name the most prominent.

The Comic Monthly deserves special mention. Started in March 1859 and published by J. C. Haney and Company, of 119 Nassau Street, New York, The Comic Monthly was a profusely illustrated 16-page folio, the same size as Harper's Weekly. It focused its graphic satire on politics, the theater, and the comedy of everyday life. A preponderance of the purely comic satire took the form of sequential art. Here are random samplings of highlights from issues from 1860:

• February: "A Day of Humiliation, Fasting, Supplica-tion, and Prayer (four panels, unsigned), "New Year Calls under the Influence of Hard Times" (twelve panels, unsigned), "Young Trouble-some; or, Master Jacky's Holidays" (nineteen panels covering three and half pages, unsigned);

• April: "Four Years After Marriage" (sixteen panels, unsigned), "Our Masked Ball" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "Trials of a Witness" (eight panels, Bellew);

• May: "Precocities of Young Springles" (seven panels, unsigned), "The Fight for the Championship" (twenty-four panel centerspread, Bellew), "Steam Applied to Music" (three panels, unsigned), "The Course of True Love" (four panels, Bellew);

• June: "Further Particulars of the Fight" (nine panel cover, Bellew), "The Man Who Went to See the Fight" (twelve panels, unsigned);

• July: "Explaining American Politics to an Intelligent Foreigner" (twelve panels, unsigned), "The Meerschaum Mania" (two panels, Bellew), "The Art of Stump Speaking" (ten panels, unsigned), "Our Little Friend, Tom Noddy" (three panels, unsigned); "The Japanese in New York" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "The Observant Child" (three panels, unsigned), "Mr. Dibbs Goes to Pike's Peak and Comes Back Again" (fourteen panel back cover, unsigned);

• September: "The Zouave Fever" (four panel cover, unsigned), "Mr. Lupell" (two panels, Bellew), "The Prince of Wales in America" (twenty-four panel centerspread, J. H. Howard), "D'ye Think It's True?" (three panels, Bellew);

• October: "The Duties of the Wide Awake" (four panels, Bellew), "Our Charley (two panels, unsigned), "The Three Young Friends" (eighteen panel back cover, unsigned);

• November: "The Hanlon's (sic) At Home" (nine panel back cover, unsigned);

• December: "The Target Excursion" (seventeen panel centerspread, signed with an unidentifiable monogram); "The Sporting Critic" two panels, Bellew).

The Comic Monthly also published many multi-panel cartoons grouped under a single heading, which were not strictly sequential in nature. Bellew was the monthly's chief artist, assisted by Thomas Nast, A. R Waud, and others. Some of the unsigned art was certainly by Bellew, some by journeymen artists, and some of it pirated from European journals.

The Comic Monthly was not the first folio-sized humor magazine. Those laurels go to The New York Picayune, which began as a newspaper, switched to a folio in 1856, adopted Punch's format for thirty-five issues in 1857-58, and returned to a folio for the remainder of its run.

Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, the greatest of the folio monthlies, began in January 1859 and was published until June 1878. Its star cartoonist during the sixties was William Newman (c. 1817-1870), one of the founding artists of Punch. As we have noted, The Comic Monthly began two months later.

Frank Leslie was born Henry Cart in Ipswich, England in 1821. He became a very skilled engraver before coming over to Yankee Notions #1, January, 1852. This title began the first sequential comic strips in an American humor magazine, The Adventures of Jerimiah Old-Pot.

America in 1948. He first worked as manager for P.T. Barnum's New York Illustrated News for several years. in 1850 he legally had his name changed to Frank Leslie. He died in 1880 and his wife continued the numerous publications he was publishing. Many of Frank Leslie's periodicals had a lot of sequental comic art.

Quarto-sized monthlies to compete with the successful Yankee Notions were also proliferating. Nick-Nax was the first (May 1856 to December 1875), followed by Phunny Phellow (October 1859- 1876) and Merryman's Comic Monthly (January 1863 to December 1875), to name the most prominent.

Enterprising publishers continued to attempt an American comic weekly in the style of Punch. The most notable efforts, Vanity Fair (1859-1863), Mrs. Grundy (1865), and Punchinello (1870), were distinguished but unsuccessful.

Nearly all of them, weeklies and monthlies, to varying degrees, featured sequential comic art. By the time of the American Civil War, sequential comic art was a part of the American graphic landscape.

While Bellew stood out for his sequential comics, Thomas Nast (1840-1902) brought a new style to American political cartoons, of which he is regarded the father. Even though he created several sequential strips early in his career (especially for Nick-Nax in 1859), Nast made his name in the pages of the national news periodical, Harper's Weekly, for which he worked from 1862 until 1886. Nast was influenced more by the dark wood engravings of Franco-German illustrator Gustave Dore than by the cartoonists of Punch. His somber cartoons were a novelty in American cartooning. Nast in the pages of Harper's Weekly (and Newman in the pages of the Budget of Fun) popularized the extravagant double-page folio-sized cartoon, which had no precedent in European or American cartooning, save for the separately published cartoon broadsides. This format would come to full maturity after 1876 in the pages of Puck (1876-1918) and then Judge (1881-1947).

As Nast grew in prominence and success, American cartoonists increasingly emulated him. U.S. humor publications evolved towards an amalgamation of Nast and Punch, rather than sheer imitation of the latter. After the War, with Nast's style of cartoons more entrenched in American readers' minds, efforts to launch Punch-like American periodicals floundered quickly. Mrs. Grundy, ironically most famous for its cover design by Nast, died after a mere twelve issues (running July 8 to September 23, 1865). Punchinello (April 2 to December 24, 1870) struggled nine months before its backers gave up. Punchinello had been financed by Tammany Hall politicians Tweed and Sweeney, as counter-propaganda against Nast's ongoing assault upon their corruption. They attempted to buy and threaten Nast into silence, to no avail.

American comics continued their pull away from Anglo-Franco imitation with the infusion of a third major European influence – the German humor magazine. The German-American community swelled significantly after the failed revolution of 1848. These émigrés brought with them a culture of humor, expressed most flamboyantly in their native humor magazines, the most famous being Kladderadatsch, Fliegende Blätter, and Münchener Bilderbogen. As high in quality, as were the graphic artists who contributed to them, one German comic artist in particular excelled beyond the rest, his stories breaking out and crossing over into English language translations, the demand for which resulted in numerous printings. This artist, of course, was Heinrich Christian Wilhelm Busch (1832-1908).

Busch's work appeared in English in the 1860s in both British and American periodicals, often uncredited. For example, four of Busch's strips appeared in English in the pages of Merryman's Monthly in 1864, while in 1879 his graphic story "Fipps der Affe" was serialized across a 10-issue run of Puck as "Troddledums the Simian." The earliest known English language appearance of Busch in book form was The Flying Dutchman, or The Wrath of Herr von Stoppelnoze, in 1862, from New York publisher G. W. Carleton. Carleton not only pirated Busch's strip, but went so far as to credit the entire story to American poet John G. Saxe, with Busch's cartoons mere illustrations accompanying Saxe's prose!

The next known English language Busch book was A Bushel of Merry Thoughts, an 1868 London-published anthology collecting various Busch strips. Some of these same stories later appeared in the U.S.-published The Mischief Book (1880), newly translated and with a few more Busch tales added. One of these additions was "Hans Huckebein," a tale of a mischievous pet raven who in the end gets drunk and accidentally hangs himself. It became, at least in the States, Busch's second most popular sequential comic story. The unrepentant bird was promoted to title character in two later collections: the rare Hookeybeak the Raven and Other Tales in 1878 and Jack Huckaback, the Scapegrace Raven, circa 1888. There were also at least three trade card series in the 1870s and 1880s that reprinted the ending sequence, as Fritz Spindle-Shanks, The Raven Black.

The most popular Busch tale, though, was easily Max und Moritz, which in the U.S. saw print as Max and Maurice - A Juvenile History in Seven Tricks. Published in Boston in 1871, this English language version saw at minimum of 60 reprintings by the century's end, plus countless more printings thereafter. A separate British translation debuted in 1874, under the title Max and Moritz. It is well known that the later Rudolph Dirks comic strip series, Katzenjammer Kids, beginning in late 1897, was based on Max und Moritz.

According to documents found by comics historian Alfredo Castelli, Katzenjammer Kids may not have been pirated as has been assumed but was licensed by William Randolph Hearst instead. Hearst's New York Journal was published in different language editions for New York City's immigrant communities. In the German edition, the strip was published under its original name, Max und Moritz. Numerous other translations of Busch were published in America - too many to name in this article. Several can be found in the Victorian Age Price Index.

The most significant humor magazine of the 1870s, prior to the founding of the German-language Puck in 1876, was Wild Oats (1870-1881), which for part of its run also published a German-language edition, Schnedereddeng. In terms of the quality of its cartoons and comics, this New York City publication was in 1872 at an artistic level Puck would not achieve until 1880. Published by Winchell and Small (later Collin and Small) and distributed through the New York News Company, Wild Oats carried a cross-section of old and new generation comic artists, from the more established W. M. Avery, Frank Beard, Frank Bellew, E.S. Bisbee, Michael Angelo Woolf, and Thomas Worth, to up-and-comers such as Livingston Hopkins, Frederick Burr Opper, Palmer Cox, and James A. Wales.

Wild Oats began carrying sequential comic strips as early as #26, dated March 14, 1872, with the Livingston Hopkins strip pictured on the next page (we do not know anything yet about the first 25 issues). The very next issue has a Worth double-page spread titled "The Political Humpty Dumpty... Horace Greeley" told in eleven panels plus the sequential fictional "Graphic Account of the Assassination of Queen Victoria" and "Love As the Angels Love." "The Doings of the Japanese Embassy At Washington" related in twelve panels by W. M. Avery follows up in #28 April 11, 1872. An unknown hand drew "The Physiology of Moving" in six panels in #30. Hopkins returns with a beautiful intense 28-panel double-page spread in #31 May 23. Hopkins and Worth alternated for many issues with sequential comic strips on baseball, horse racing and other pertinent subjects of the day. In #45 December 5, 1872, E.S. Bisbee contributed his first sequential in seventeen panels and Worth showed up in "Humor and Pathos of a New England Thanksgiving" in eleven panels. Issue 47 expands the concept with a twelve-panel job by Bisbee, twenty-panel effort on one page by Hopkins and a three-panel effort by Worth. And on it goes through 1873 as well - comic strip after comic strip. Issue 58 June 5, 1873, includes a particularly humorous nineteen-panel double-pager drawn by someone still unknown titled "The Terrible Adventures of Messrs. Buster and Stumps, with the Indians" which begins with two white men heading out west in an effort to exterminate Indians - and their misadventures of not quite getting the job done. It reads across both pages in a unique evolution similar to Popeye #2052 (found in the Platinum listings). Issue 65 contains two nine-panel Thomas Worth strips "Only a Mad Dog Scare - Another Lesson For Nervous People" and "Only a Cholera Scare - Something For Nervous People to Read and Ponder Over." Issue 66 Sept 18, 1873, has the very funny Hopkins twelve-panel strip as well as two more ten-panel Worth strips on the delights of Hunting and Fishing plus one by Hopkins titled "The Adventures of Mr Old Party with Jersey Mosquitoes" in twelve-panels. All told, four comic strips in this issue. They obviously liked what they were doing, judging from the exuberance of the work.

The next issue has Worth's nine-panel report on "The Adventures of Young Muttonhead among the Free Lovers" which was all about the "free sex" convention recently held in Chicago. Issue 68 has a nine-panel "An Adventure with a New Jersey Mosquito" which smacks of Winsor McCay in subject and even art style. Maybe McCay was inspired by this for his later animated cartoon as well as earlier Rarebit Fiend. We'll never know for sure. On through 1875, Wild Oats presented sequential comic strips issue after issue. With #148, October 27, 1875, Frederick Opper contributes his very first Wild Oats cover, a political cartoon on inflation then rampant in the US. He does covers through at least #161 before a short break and then comes back with many more. In #158, January 5, 1876, Palmer Cox - some five years before inventing The Brownies - begins a wonderful series of 24-panel double page spread comic strips, with a couple sample titles being "The Adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Sprowl And Their Christmas Turkey-A Crashing Chasing Tearful Tragedy But Happily Ending Well" and "Bachelor Broke and Widow Snuggi: A Pictorial Account of Their Sleigh Ride and What Became of It."

Even though he had been contributing many covers and interior single panel jobs to Wild Oats for years, Frank Bellew does not show up with his first comic strip until #190, August 16, 1876, with a nine-panel effort he titled, "Rodger's Patent Mosquito Armour." By this time America's "Father of the sequential comic strip" had inspired many other cartoonists to try their hand telling stories with words and pictures.

Another highly desirable American graphic novel, sought especially by collectors of Western lore, is Quiddities of an Alaskan Trip by William H. Bell which debuted in 1873. Bell was Timothy O'Sullivan's assistant photographer on the 1871-74 expeditions of Lt. George Wheeler, surveying and mapping the western territories for the U.S. government. The story panels are laid out within ornate frames like those of stereograph cards, such as Bell was involved in creating on the expedition. It involves a parody of a trip from Washington, D.C., to survey the newly purchased territory of Alaska, which at the time was derisively referred to as "Seward's Folly." Bell published Quiddities in Portland, Oregon, in 1873, meaning that he drew it while he was on just such an expedition.

The seemingly disparate influences of Thomas Nast and German comics came together in the work of Austrian immigrant Joseph Keppler (1838-1894). Like many cartoonists in America, Keppler desired to rival Nast. Unlike most, he possessed the talent and drive to accomplish it. Keppler, trained as an artist but working as an actor, began contributing comic art to Kikeriki (1861-1923) in his native Vienna. He emigrated to St. Louis in 1868, where he took his first stab at starting a comic weekly, the German language Die Vehme (Aug 28, 1869 - Aug. 20, 1870). Seven months later, still in St. Louis, he tried again, launching another German language humor periodical, titled Puck. This German Puck began on March 18, 1871, joined by an English language version one year later, but both

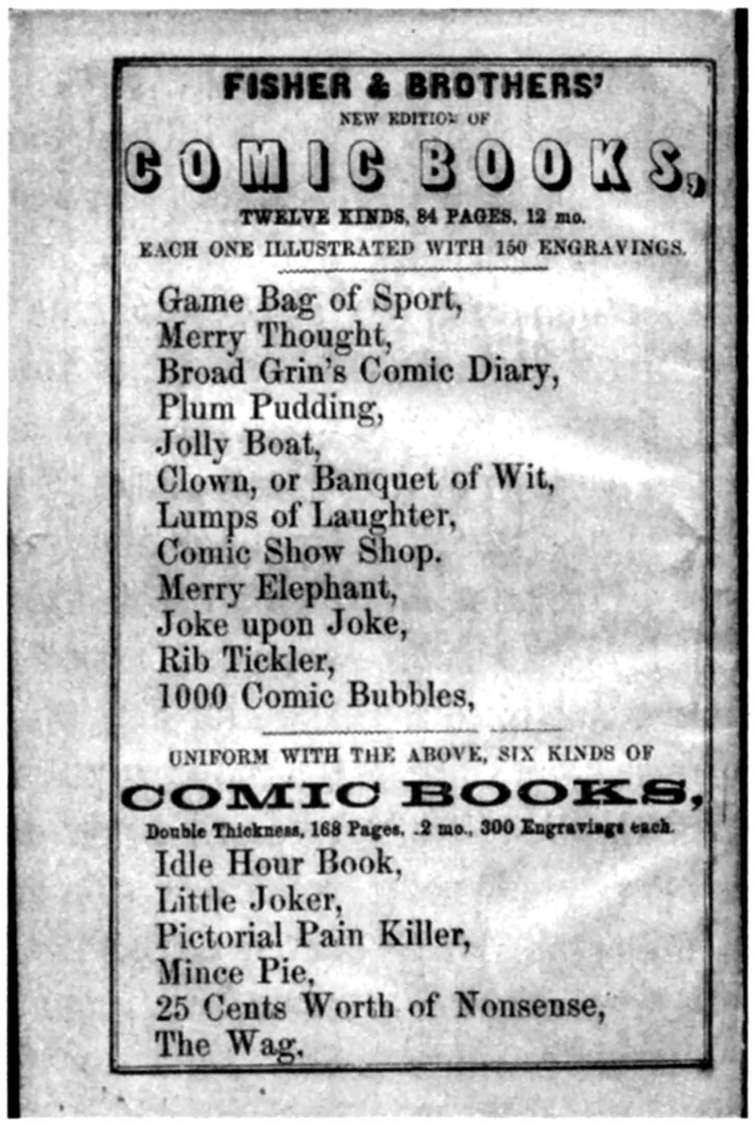
Keppler moved to New York City and began working for Frank Leslie. His cartoons appeared in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, and the Leslie-owned Jolly Joker and Day's Doings. (To capitalize on the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, Leslie published in that year a paperback collection of Centennial-related humor, Centennial Fun, most of which was Keppler's work.) Four years after the first Puck died, Keppler was ready to try again. He re-launched the German language edition of Puck in New York City on September 27, 1876.

This Puck was both familiar and exotic. Its format of an extravagant center-spread cartoon sandwiched between front and back cover cartoons had by this time become something of a comic periodical standard, certainly for the monthlies. But Puck was different from what had come before. The cartoons were lithographed, not engraved, which lent to them a softer, more pleasing quality, and they were in color, something virtually without precedent in American comic periodical literature.

Initially, the magazine's cartoons were tinted in just one color, but Puck appeared, ambitiously, every week, and the coloring set it apart from anything else on American stands. The parallel English language edition of Puck was launched six months after the German version, on March 14, 1877. This English edition of Puck was a money-loser for several years, kept afloat by the German edition's profits and the determination of the English edition's literary editor, H.C. Bunner, not to give up. By 1880, Puck was a huge success. It became the new model for American humor publications. In time, Keppler hired other artists, most notably Frederick Burr Opper, Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim") and F. M. Howarth, and added black and white sequential comics to the magazine's interior and then, with increasing frequency in the early 1890s to the magazine's back cover. Funny Folks by F. M. Howarth, 1899, collected many early sequential comics from Puck; one of the titles many consider bridges the Victorian and Platinum Ages of comics. Puck was the model that inspired William Randolph Hearst to add a color comics section to his Sunday Journal in 1895.

With the first issue dated October 29, 1881, Puck's chief rival, Judge, was born. Founded by Puck artist James A. Wales, it also featured the work of Thomas Worth and Livingston Hopkins. Judge made several forays into Puck's talent pool over the years. Its best capture was Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim"), who became for Judge the star artist that Frederick Burr Opper was for Puck.



Judge struggled financially for several years, and likely would have ceased publication had it not been for Puck's powerful performance during the 1884 election. Puck's success galvanized Republican powerbrokers into recognizing the importance of the political cartoon weekly. They financed newspaperman W. J. Arkell's purchase of Judge in 1886 to turn it into a reliable Republican house organ.

Also worthy of mention is the New York City newspaper The Daily Graphic (March 4, 1873 to Sept 23, 1889), which claims the distinction of being the first regularly illustrated daily newspaper in the world, published every day except Sundays and holidays. The majority of its illustrations were portraits or depictions of news events, but nearly every issue contained some comic drawing, many of them gracing the front cover.

With so many pages to fill on a daily basis, The Daily Graphic became a rotating door for many young American cartoonists in the early stages of their careers (making one suspect that it was not the best paying gig in town). Within its pages, like needles to be found in the haystack of its more than 4800 issues, is early work by Livingston Hopkins (who mysteriously appears, vanishes, reappears, etc., for months to whole years at a time, right up to his 1884 departure to Australia), pre-Life work by Kemble, pre-Harper's appearances by A.B. Frost and W.A. Rogers, pre-Puck and Judge Opper, C.J. Taylor, Hamilton, and Gillam. Old hats, too, appear at times, such as Michael Woolf and Frank Bellew, Sr.

Further, The Daily Graphic regularly plundered British periodicals for its back and sometimes center pages, not only perpetrating the usual swipes of single-panel Punch cartoons, but also stealing sequential strips from Punch's two main rival publications, Judy and Fun. This included occasionally reprinting (albeit at random) episodes of continuing British strips "The British Workman" by James Sullivan, and "McNab of that Ilk" by James Brown, though, strangely enough, not Marie Duval's Ally Sloper, despite the fact that The Daily Graphic did reprint some of Duval's non-"Sloper" strips. ("Ally Sloper" was a continuing sequential strip character who debuted in 1867, lasting into the 1920s, and had very successful solo British book collections of his strip appearances published as early as 1873, more than two decades prior to Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats).

Livingston Hopkins, whose art style changed like a chameleon from one year to the next, exhibited a definite Duval influence in his work within a year following the publication of the first Ally Sloper collection. Given that Hopkins worked for The Daily Graphic during the same period in which this newspaper was stealing cartoons from Sloper's home publication, Judy, this can hardly be considered coincidental. Hopkins contributed a daily comic strip to The Daily Graphic in 1874-75, complete with word balloons. By the time Hopkins was preparing to emigrate to Australia to become lead cartoonist for the Sydney Bulletin, his art style was an imitation of Kemble's, who was also working at The Daily Graphic.

Earliest-known use of the description COMIC BOOKS dates from the early 1850s.

Life debuted on January 4, 1883, founded by J.A. Mitchell, and modeled after the Harvard Lampoon. It quickly rose to become the third main pillar of late 1800s American humor periodicals. Smaller in size, black and white, and priced the same as Puck and Judge, it nevertheless succeeded by appealing to a more genteel audience. Its earliest artists included Kemble and Palmer Cox, but its foremost artist was Charles Dana Gibson, becoming world renowned as the hand behind the graceful, aristocratic "Gibson Girls."

Unlike Judge, which had to become a low-brow imitation of Life to survive in the next century, and Puck, which attempted but failed to become an American version of the highbrow European humor magazines, Life transitioned into the 20th century virtually unaltered, and thrived. By the mid-1880s, with Puck, Judge, and Life all solidly in place, American comics and cartoon humor had come very much into their own, no longer looking first at Europe to take their cues.

Almanacs began to appear in America starting in 1639. Humor was introduced as early as 1647 by Samuel Danforth. A very important one was Leed Almanac beginning in 1687. John Tulley produced the first humorous almanac in 1688. James Franklin, brother of Ben, began the Rhode Island Almanac in 1728 using the name "Poor Robin" and his younger brother began Poor Richard's Almanac in 1732. Farmer's Almanac began in 1792 and used some humor.

The first comic almanac totally devoted to humor was published by Charles Ellm in Boston in 1831 and featured the artwork of D.C. Johnston. Perhaps the most famous comic almanacs (certainly the most valuable) are the Davy Crockett series (1835-1856) which began in Nashville, Tennessee. The comic periodicals all ended up issuing comic almanacs beginning with Yankee Notions in 1856 and continuing into the 1890s with a one-shot comic almanac published by Judge for the year 1894.

Beginning in the 1850s, a new breed of almanacs appeared. Usually created by medicine and farm product companies, they were distributed for free to promote the company's product. Competition amongst companies, whose goal was to get customers to read the almanacs and the advertisements contained therein again and again, meant that attention-getting humorous cartoons soon found their way back into these giveaway pamphlets. Initially their cartoons were done cheap, either poorly drawn or pirated from elsewhere, such as those found in the Hostetter's and Wright's almanac series. More elaborate promotional almanacs eventually did evolve, though, and amongst the best of these was Barker's Illustrated Almanac, first produced for the year 1878, and annually into the 1930s. Each Barker's Almanac contained ten to twelve full page cartoons, wonderful and bizarre in design, frequently racist, but also comically manic and crammed with details in a manner similar to Outcault's much later Yellow Kid pages. The cartoons in Barker's Almanac were so popular that in 1892, The Barker, Moore, and Mein Medicine Company published their first edition of Barker's Komic Picture Souvenir, reprinting nearly 150 pages of cartoons from their almanacs.

This first Barker's Souvenir features a wraparound color cover depicting people headed towards the Columbian World's Fair Exposition, which was to be held in Chicago the next year. It is the earliest confirmed "premium" comic book, sent to customers who mailed in a box label and outside wrapper from two different Barker's products. The Souvenir album was Barker's most in-demand premium. It was reprinted as a thick unnumbered booklet three more times in the 1890s, with the contents reorganized each time. Later, between 1901 and 1903, Barker's broke the album into three separate "Parts," each of which required still more box labels and wrappers to obtain. The 3-part series of reprint albums expanded to four parts circa 1906 or 1907. Both the 3 and 4-part album series had multiple printings.

Also very American in character were the country's promotional comics, which flourished throughout the latter half of the 19th century. They trace their beginnings to Comic Almanacs, which flourished in England and the United States since they first appeared in the 1830s. The first promotional comics which did not double as almanacs began to appear in the 1870s. They included the aforementioned reprints of Cruikshank and Busch strips, reprints of strips lifted from American sources (A.B. Frost's strip "The Bull Calf" was a particular favorite), and original material placing the product being promoted as the focus of the story. These original short cartoon dramas were in many ways similar in storyline to those found in modern television advertisements, except that the clothing is Victorian, and the claims, pre-F.D.A. and F.C.C., were unabashedly wild, over-the-top, and blunt. Chewing tobacco and snuff saved romances, calmed crying babies, and made the sick well. Stove polish that propelled you to wealth and power. Corsets that brought you a husband. The objective, of course, in an era before TV or radio, was to make each comic handout so entertaining that customers would want to keep and read the advertisement again and again.

The more wonderful graphics and outrageous claims tended to come from tobacco companies, who were using comic books and strips to sell their products more than a century before cries against "Joe Camel." The most elaborate of these were printed full color, and unfolded into a single long strip, just like Cruikshank's The Tooth-Ache from the 1840s, though usually limited to just the cover plus seven panels.

The earliest known anthology devoted to collecting the comic strips of a single American artist was A.B. Frost's Stuff and Nonsense in 1884. The next known American collection came in 1888, the very rare Frederick Burr Opper anthology, Puck's Opper Book. Both proved popular, so more Frost and Opper collections followed, to be joined within a few years by reprints collecting the cartoons and strips of Keppler, Kemble, Zim, Gibson, Mayer, Taylor, Frank Bellew's son "Chip," Howarth, Woolf, etc.

Puck, Judge, and Texas Siftings all began monthly Library series - 8-1/2" x 11" magazines, mostly black and white, which organized previously published material around one theme or one artist. For example, the first Puck's Library (July 1887) was titled "The National Game," and gathered beneath one cover Puck material poking fun at the game of baseball. The third (March 1888) and ninth (November 1889) issues of Judge's Serial (later named Judge's Library) were devoted entirely to the work of Zim.

Life tended more towards hardcover collections, such as its annual ten-issue series The Good Things of Life (1884-1893), which included cartoons and strips by Palmer Cox, T.S. Sullivant, Hy Mayer, and others. The Good Things of Life was published initially by the firm of White, Stokes, and Allen, but which by the fourth book, had become simply Frederick A. Stokes. Stokes published a number of other cartoon books in the 1880s and 1890s, the majority of them reprint collections. The experience he gained at this time with these reprint albums placed Stokes in the perfect position to pick up the wealth of material about to be created for the comics supplements of William R. Hearst's newspapers, making Stokes the first major publisher of the coming Platinum Age.

In 1892, Charles Scribner's Sons published A. B. Frost's Bull Calf and Other Tales. It contains sequential comic strip art on quite a few pages as well as single panel cartoons. By 1898, Charles Scribner's Sons also issued Kemble's The Billy Goat and Other Comicalities as a 112-page hardcover, which also has sequential comic strips.

In the early 1890s, the slum children cartoons of artist Michael Woolf (many of which were reprinted in the 1896 collection 99 Woolfs from Truth and in the posthumous 1899 collection Sketches of Lowly Life in a Great City) were popular. Truth magazine, which followed Puck's format of color front cover, back cover and centerspread cartoons, but in style was more akin to the aristocratic Life, was initially unable to secure Woolf's services, creating an opportunity for the young cartoonist Richard F. Outcault, who desired to break into one of the weekly comic periodicals.

It was in his Woolf-inspired slum children cartoons for Truth that Outcault's prototype of the Yellow Kid first emerged. The bald, sack-clothed youngster made four appearances in Truth, starting with #372 on June 2, 1894, prior to his newspaper debut.

During the rise of Yellow Kid's popularity, he appeared in American comic magazines in parodies drawn by others, with politicians, even Hearst and Pulitzer, dressed up as the Yellow Kid. Such cartoons are known to have appeared in Judge, Life, The Bee, and Vim plus various newspapers across the country. More about the Yellow Kid's importance can be found in the Platinum Age section of this book.

While comics definitely have their roots in Europe, and the earliest American comic books either reprinted or emulated those of Europe, the direction of influence was by no means one way. By at least the 1870s, American cartoons were being published and seen in the Old World, as evidenced by the arrest in Spain of the on-the-lamb corrupt Tammany Hall politician Boss Tweed by Spanish police who recognized Tweed from a Nast cartoon.

European piracy of American cartoons was just as lucrative as the American piracy of Europeans. In the 1880s and '90s, the comics of Zim, Chip Bellew, and Charles Dana Gibson all saw reprint in Europe. In April 1899, Pictorial Comedy, a monthly magazine destined for a ten-year run, commenced publication in London. It was made up entirely of cartoons reprinted with permission from Puck and Life. F.M. Howarth's domestic comedies from Puck were favorites in France. American Hy Mayer was commissioned to create original comics work for Black and White (Britain), Le Rire (France), and Fliegende Blätter. Michael Woolf's slum children cartoons saw print in the British periodical Pick-Me-Up, during the same years that top British artist Phil May's first published work debuted in that publication. May later became famous for his Woolf-inspired street children cartoons as well as his influence on the development of comics in Australia.

As the 19th Century ended, American comics were coming to the fore worldwide, soon to explode into a position of dominance with the Platinum Age revolution brought about by the emergence of the color comic supplement in America's newspapers and the arrival of Richard F. Outcault's Yellow Kid.

END NOTE: Victorian Era comics were issued in many relatively obscure formats compared to what most of us are used to today. The Victorian Era section can only grow as there are many more heretofore undiscovered comics from the 1800s which have fallen off the radar of history. Some may wonder why some of the earlier items listed contain as of yet no prices. The reason is simple. These books are part of a relatively "new" market which is still establishing itself.

High-grade copies are almost unheard of in almost all instances. Some books may truly have only a handful left in existence. We are sure there are some known to have been published which no (as of yet) known copies have survived the ravages of time and neglect.

Each year expect another quantum leap in our ever-expanding knowledge of the fascinating earliest origins of the comic strip as it relates to North America. Your input in helping this section of the Guide grow and mature is most welcome!

COLLECTOR'S NOTE: Most of the books listed in this section were published well over a century before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. With some of these comics now over 160 years old, they almost never surface in Fine+ or better shape. Be happy when you simply find a copy.

This year has seen price growth in quite a few comic books in this era. Since this section began growing almost a decade now, comic books from Wilson, Brother Jonathan, Huestis & Cozans, Garrett, Dick & Fitzgerald, Frank Leslie, Street & Smith and others continue to be recognized by the more savvy in this fine hobby as legitimate comic book collectors' items. We had been more concerned with simply establishing what is known to exist. For the most part, that work is now a fait accompli in this section compiled, revised, and expanded by Robert Beerbohm with special thanks this year to Terrance Keegan plus acknowledgment to Bill Blackbeard, Chris Brown, Alfredo Castelli, Darrell Coons, Leonardo De Sá, Scott Deschaine, Joe Evans, Ron Friggle, Tom Gordon III, Michel Kempeneers, Andy Konkykru, Don Kurtz, Richard Olson, Robert Quesinberry, Joseph Rainone, Steve Rowe, Randy Scott, John Snyder, Art Spiegelman, Steve Thompson, Richard Samuel West, Doug Wheeler and Richard Wright. Special kudos to long-time collector and scholar Gabriel Laderman.

The prices given for Fair, Good and Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in this book or contact the authors of this essay. Items marked Scarce, Rare or Very Rare we are still trying to figure out how many copies might still be in existence. We welcome additions and corrections from any interested collectors and scholars at robert@BLBcomics.com

NOTE: Earliest known original sequential comic book by an American creator; directly inspired by Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly The New York and Cincinnati editions were both published in 1849, one soon after the other. Antiquarian Book sources have traditionally cited that the Cincinnati edition preceded the New York, but without referencing their evidence. Conflicting with this, the Cincinnati edition lists the New York publishers' 1849 copyright, while the New York edition makes no reference to the Cincinnati publishers. Such would indicate that the New York edition was first. Both are very rare, and until resolved both will be regarded as published simultaneously. A New York copy with missing back cover, detached front cover, and G/VG interior sold for $2000 in 2000. Two copies sold at auction in 2006 for $11,500 and 12,000. (Prices vary widely.)

The publisher appears to have gathered whichever printings of each booklet were available when copies of THE JUVENILE GEM was assembled, so that the booklets within, and the conglomerate cover, may be from a mixture of printings. Contains two sequential comic booklets: THE ADVENTURES OF MR. TOM PLUMP, and OLD MOTHER MITTEN AND HER FUNNY KITTEN, plus five heavily illustrated children's booklets - The Pretty Primer, The Funny Book, The Picture Book, The Two Sisters, and Story Of The Little Drummer. Six of these -- including the two comic books -- were reprinted in the 1960's by Americana Review as a set of individual booklets, and included in a folder collectively titled "Six Children's Books of the 1850's".*

This was a separate, parallel run of Puck, published during the 1893 Chicago World's Fair from within the fairgrounds, and containing all new and different material than the regular weekly Puck. Smaller sized and priced the same, this originally sold poorly, and had not as wide distribution as Puck, and so consequently issues are much more rare than regular Puck issues from the same period. Not to be confused with the larger sized regular Puck issues from 1893 which sometimes also contained World's Fair related material, and sometimes had the words "World's Fair" appear on the cover. Can also be distinguished by the fact that Puck's issue numbering was in the 800's in 1893, while these issue number 1 through 26.*

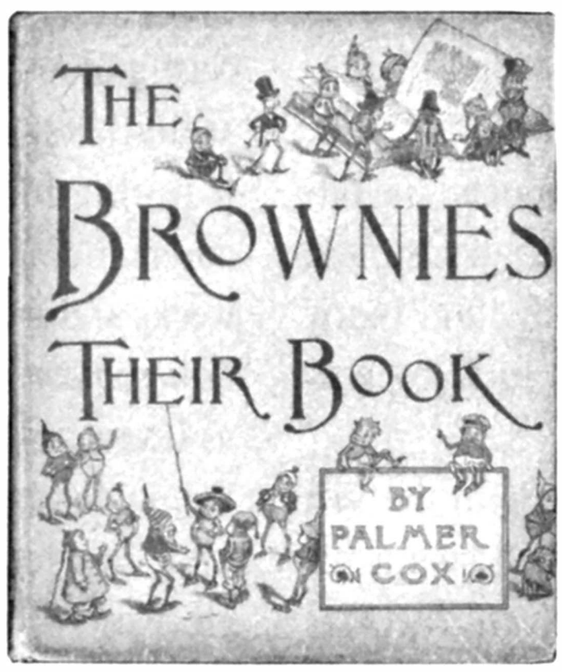
The American Comic Book: 1883–1938



A Concise History & Price Index Of The Field As Of 2016

NEWSPAPERS HARNESS COMICS POWER MYRIAD FORMATS COMPETE

by Robert Lee Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson, PhD ©2016

(This article was originally created by Robert L. Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson beginning in CBPG #27 1997 and is revised annually as new information comes to light.)

The story of the success of the modern comic strip as we know it today is tied closely to the companies who sponsored and bought licenses from the copyright holder for the purpose of advertising products. Platinum Age comic books have come back into their own after languishing mostly forgotten for a few decades. With this series of comics history research updates now marking its first decade, these historically important books are seem by many now as very collectible. Online sources such as eBay and bookfinder.com have demonstrate that many of these Platinum books are actually not scarce at all as previously thought, though they are in any type of higher-grade condition. Even so, most Platinum Age books are much rarer than so-called Golden Age comic books, yet despite this scarcity, Mutt & Jeff, Bringing Up Father, The Katzenjammer Kids, and many more were more popular than say Superman and Batman when they were introduced. Recent research has come up with some more amazing rediscoveries. There is much that can be learned and applied to today's comics market by a simple historical examination of the medium's evolution over more than 160 years.

The Brownies' first book, 1887 by Palmer Cox, set a precedent for the Platinum Age, collecting and reprinting previously published material.

It should be noted that "ages" are applied to historical periods in the history of comics for convenience. In fact, ages typically overlap and there is no discrete beginning or ending for any given "age." This is the case with the Platinum Age, which clearly began with Palmer Cox's creation of The Brownies in 1883 even though it overlaps with the Victorian Age which ran through the end of the 19th Century. Cox introduced a qualitative change to the field, not an incremental quantitative change. Specifically, he produced art and verse for children in children's magazines and then merchandised those characters. He published work for children not only in books but in magazines and newspapers, and he merchandised his creations to an extent that had never been done previously.

Palmer Cox was born in 1840 near Granby, Quebec. He journeyed to Oakland, California in 1863, and began publishing cartoon, prose and poems in the local press and media outlets such as The San Francisco Examiner wherein by 1867 it has been reported he also began creating sequential comic strips, though none have yet surfaced.

His first book, Squibs of California, was published in 1874. He subsequently moved to New York in 1875 and almost immediately began working for the magazine Wild Oats, of which more is written about in the preceding Victorian Age history introduction as well as a sample of his sequential work. He drew dozens of sequential comic strips for Wild Oats, a humor magazine so scarce only one issue has been offered on eBay in the past six years.

Soon thereafter he became a major contributor to the Scribner publications, including The St. Nicholas, an illustrated magazine for young folk. His first cartoon for them was "The Wasp And The Bee," published in the March 1879 cover-date issue. While it is now clear that Cox used elves and brownie-like characters in his art for several different magazines as early as 1877 in Harper's Young People magazine as well as using Brownies-type characters beginning in the Feb 1881 issue of Wide Awake, the first true appearance of the Brownies in their own story using that title, a combination of art and verse was February, 1883, in St. Nicholas. Palmer Cox's The Brownies were the first North American comics-type characters to be internationally merchandised. Even though Cox was continuously doing sequential comic strips in magazines like Wild Oats, he left the popular medium of comics when he hit paydirt with The Brownies. For over a quarter of a century, Cox deftly combined the popular advertising motifs of animals and fairies into a wonderful, whimsical world of society at its best and worst.

The Brownies in the Philippines by Palmer Cox, Oct 1904 - scarce original art from the book. President Roosevelt is pictured within these multitudes of Brownie madness, a Cox "signature trademark." Cox's stories are comic strip-oriented in nature of time sequence as he boldly took his Brownies around the world.

The Brownies' first book was issued in 1887, titled The Brownies: Their Book; many more followed. Cox also added a run of his hugely popular characters in Ladies Home Journal from October 1891 through February 1895, as well as a special for December 1910. With the 1892-93 World's Fair, the merchandising exploded with a host of products, including pianos, paper dolls and other figurines, chairs, stoves, puzzles, cough drops, coffee, soap, boots, candy, and many more. Brownies material was being produced in Europe as well as the United States of America.

Cox tried out The Brownies as a newspaper strip in the San Francisco Examiner during 1898, where he had begun his newspaper career over 30 years before, and then in the New York World in 1900. It was then syndicated from 1903 through 1907. He seems to have retired from regularly drawing The Brownies with the January 1914 issue of St. Nicholas when he was 74. A wealthy man, he lived to the ripe old age of 84, spending his last decade in his home he affectionately called Brownie Castle, back in Granby, Quebec.

By the mid-1890s, while keeping careful track of steadily rising circulations of magazines with graphic humor such as Harper's, Puck, St. Nicholas, Judge, Life and Truth, New York based newspaper publishers began to recognize that illustrated humor would sell extra papers. This is what The Yellow Kid taught these publishers. Thus was born the Sunday "comic supplement." Most of the super star favorites were under contract with these magazines. However, there was an artist working for Truth who wasn't. Roy L McCardell, then a staffer at Puck, informed Morrill Goddard, Sunday Editor of The New York World, that he knew someone who could fit what was needed at the then-largest newspaper in America.

Richard F. Outcault (1863-1928) first introduced his street children strip in Truth #372, June 2, 1894, somewhat inspired by Michael Angelo Woolf's slum kids single panel cartoons in Life which had begun in the mid 1880s. The interested collector should seek out a copy of Woolf's Sketches of Lowly Life In A Great City (1899) listed in the Guide for comparison study. Edward Harrigan's play "O'Reilly and the Four Hundred," which had a song beginning with the words "Down in Hogan's Alley..." also likely provided direct inspiration.

It's also probable that Outcault's Hogan's Alley cast, including the Yellow Kid, was inspired by Charles W. Saalburg's The Ting Lings, which began in the Chicago Inter Ocean Jr supplement post-dated May 1, 1894 in the April 29, 1894 edition of Chicago Inter Ocean. That first episode is titled: "The Brownies Welcome The Ting-Lings."

There is also a definite similarity in Mickey Dugan's appearance and clothing style to Saalburg's creation which we will now examine in more detail thanks to welcome, on-going research by long time comics historian Allan Holtz supplemented by living comics history legend Bill Blackbeard .

Charles Saalzburg was an artist who was also the genius behind color printing in newspapers. He seems to have pioneered the concept from whom all others learned their craft.

On June 23, 1892 the Chicago Inter Ocean introduced a section with mostly editorial cartoons titled the Illustrated Supplement, commemorating the Democratic National Convention held in that city. Early regulars included Thomas Nast and Art Young. Starting June 26, the Inter Ocean began steadily issuing this weekly four page supplement, typically featuring full page editorial cartoons on its front and back covers. In May 1893 the supplement began coming out twice a week, and even greater frequency to daily during the World Columbian Exposition held in Chicago later that same year as it was used as a wrapper to attract sales from fair goers. Art Young did some of the color cover art and comic strips for the early Fair supplements, printing them right at the Fair to goggle-eyed fair tourists. Thomas Nast did some art as well during a visit he made to the Fair.

By September 10, 1893 the Inter Ocean introduced color, a multi-panel editorial comic strip by Charles Saalburg. The supplement used yellow ink, a further nail in the coffin of various Yellow Kid myths which had clouded serious comics scholarship in earlier decades before being proven wrong.

On October 1, Tom E. Powers introduced their first sequential non-political comic strip in color, a humorous pantomime.

As the Exposition ended in November, the contents were soon aimed more at children, enhanced with color added to the center as well by December 24, 1893, then changing its title to Inter Ocean Jr in January 1894. This was accomplished easily by folding the single four page sheet into eight pages.

In the January 1894 Saalburg began using Brownies-inspired characters in his color comic strips. The present theory is the Ting-Ling characters took over solo five months later in response to a presumed cease and desist letter which inevitably must have been issued from Palmer Cox to the Inter Ocean.

However, on July 8 1894, the Inter Ocean Jr stopped color and full page comics-type work in this supplement, devolving back to simple small spot art works. By mid-1894, color comics printing genius Saalburg had been lured to Pulitzer's New York World, becoming Art Director in charge of coloring for the new color printing press at the New York World. The color supplement was soon to be unleashed in the largest city in America.

By the November 18, 1894 issue of the World, Outcault was working for Goddard and Saalburg. Outcault produced a successful Sunday newspaper sequential comic strip in color with "The Origin of a New Species" on the back page in the World's first colored Sunday supplement. Long time pro Walt McDougall, a famous cartoonist reputed to have turned the 1884 Presidential race with a single cartoon that ran in the World, handled the cartoon art on the front page. Earlier, The World began running full page color single panels on May 21, 1893. McDougall did various other page panels during 1893, but it was Jan. 28, 1894 when the first sequence of comic pictures in a New York World newspaper appeared in panels in the same format as our comic strips today. It was a full page cut up into nine panels. This historic sequence was drawn entirely in pantomime, with no words, by Mark Fenderson.

The second page to appear in panels was an eight panel strip from February 4, 1894, also lacking words except for the title. This page was a collaboration between Walt McDougall and Mark Fenderson titled "The Unfortunate Fate of a Well-Intentioned Dog." From then on, many full page color strips by McDougall and Fenderson appeared; they were the first cartoonists to draw for the Sunday newspaper comic section. It was Outcault, however, who soon became the most famous cartoonist featured. After first appearing in black and white in Pulitzer's The New York World on February 17, 1895 and again on March 10, 1895, The Yellow Kid was introduced to the public in color on May 5, 1895.

Some have erroneously reported in scholarly journals that perhaps it was Frank Ladendorf's "Uncle Reuben," first introduced May 26, 1895, which became the first regularly recurring comics character in newspapers. This is wrong, as even Outcault's "Yellow Kid" began in Pulitzer's paper a good three months before Uncle Reuben. Until firm evidence to the contrary comes to light, that honor will forever be enshrined with Jimmy Swinnerton's Little Bears cartoon characters, found all over inside Hearst's San Francisco Examiner beginning October 14, 1893 with the first one called "Baby Monarch. Though never actually a comic strip, they nonetheless were the earliest presently-known recurring comics-type characters in American newspapers. In June 1895, a semi-regular "Little Bears" feature began. On January 26, 1896, children were introduced, the title eventually changed to "Little Bears and Tykes," forever confusing some scholars decades later. There never was a strip titled Little Bears and Tigers, as the Tigers were strictly for New York consumption when Hearst ordered Swinnerton to move to the Big Apple to compete better in the brewing comic strip wars.

Walt McDougall & Mark Fenderson, the 2nd sequential comic strip in New York World, February 4, 1894, predates Yellow Kid in The World by over a year. Mark Fenderson drew the first NY World newspaper comic strip.

The Yellow Kid's importance is widely recognized today as the first newspaper comic strip to demonstrate without a doubt that the general public was ready for full color comics. The Yellow Kid was the first in the USA to show that comics could increase newspaper sales, and that comic characters could be merchandised. The Yellow Kid was the headlining spark of what was soon dubbed by Hearst as "eight pages of polychromatic effulgence that makes the rainbow look like a lead pipe."

Ongoing research suggests that Palmer Cox's fabulous success with The Brownies was a direct inspiration for Richard Outcault's future merchandising work. The ultimate proof lies in the fourth Yellow Kid cartoon, which appeared in the February 9, 1895 issue of Truth. It was reprinted in the New York World eight days later on February 17, 1895, becoming the first Yellow Kid cartoon in the newspapers. The caption read "FOURTH WARD BROWNIES. MICKEY, THE ARTIST (adding a finishing touch) Dere, Chimmy! If Palmer Cox wuz t' see yer, he'd git yer copyrighted in a minute." The Yellow Kid was widely licensed in the greater New York area for all kinds of products, including gum and cigarette cards, toys, pinbacks, cookies, postcards, tobacco products, and appliances. There was also a short-lived humor magazine from Street & Smith named The Yellow Kid, featuring exquisite Outcault covers, plus a 196-page comic book from Dillingham & Co. known as The Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats, dated to early 1897. Check out the covers in "The Platinum Age" three-page comic strip elsewhere in this Guide. In addition, there were several Yellow Kid plays produced, spawning other collectibles like show posters, programs and illustrated sheet music. (For those interested in more information regarding the Yellow Kid, it is available on the Internet at www.neponset.com/yellowkid.)

Mickey Dugan burned brightly for a few years as Outcault secured a copyright on the character with the United States Government by September 1896. By the time he completed the necessary paperwork, however, hundreds of business people nationwide had pirated the image of The Yellow Kid and plastered it all over every product imaginable; mothers were even dressing their newborns to look like Dugan. Outcault, however, kept regularly utilizing images of The Yellow Kid in his comics style advertising work confirmed as late as 1915. Outcault soon found himself in a maelstrom not of his choosing, which probably pushed him to eventually drop the character. Outcault's creation went back and forth between newspaper giants Pulitzer and Hearst until Bennett's New York Herald mercifully snatched the cartoonist away in 1900 to do what amounted to a few relatively short-run strips. Later, he did one particular strip for a year–a satire of rural Black America titled Pore Li'l Mose His Letters to his Mammy, and then his newer creation, Buster Brown, debuted May 4, 1902. Mose had a very rare comic book collection published in 1902 by Cupples & Leon, now highly sought after by today's savvy collectors. Outcault continued drawing him in the background of occasional Buster Brown strips for many years to come.

William Randolph Hearst loved the comic strip medium ever since he was a little boy growing up on Max & Moritz by Wilhelm Busch in American collected book editions translated from the original German (these collections were first published in book form in 1871, serving as the influence for The Katzenjammer Kids). One of the ways Hearst responded to losing Outcault in 1900 was by purchasing the highly successful 23-year-old humor magazine Puck from the heirs of founder Joseph Keppler. With Puck and its exclusive cartoonist contracts, he commanded, among others, the very popular F. M. Howarth and Frederick Burr Opper's undivided attention. Opper first burst upon the comics scene in America back in 1880. Within a year Hearst had expanded this National Lampoon of its day into the colored Sunday comics section, Puck-The Comic Weekly. At first featuring Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids (1897), Happy Hooligan and other fine strips by the wildly popular Opper and a few others including Rudolph's brother Gus Dirks, the Hearst comic section steadily added more strips. For decades to come, there wasn't anything else that could compete with Puck. Hearst hired the best of the best and transformed Puck into the most popular comics section anywhere.

Outcault, meanwhile, followed in Palmer Cox's footprints a decade later by using the nexus of a World's Fair as a jumping off venue. Buster Brown was an instant sensation when he debuted as the new merchandising mascot of the Brown Shoe Company at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair in a special Buster Brown Shoes pavilion. The character has the honor of being the first nationally licensed comic strip character in America with this time Outcault in almost full control. Many hundreds of different Buster Brown premiums have been issued. Comic books by Frederick A. Stokes Company featuring Buster Brown & His Dog Tige began as early as 1903 with Buster Brown and His Resolutions, simultaneously published in several different languages throughout the world.

After a few years, Buster and Outcault returned to Hearst in late 1905, joining what soon became the flagship of the comics world. Buster's popularity quickly spread all over the United States and then the world as he single-handedly spawned the first great comic strip licensing dynasty. For years, there were little people traveling from town to town performing as Buster Brown and selling shoes while accompanied by small dogs named Tige. Many other highly competitive licensed strips would soon follow. We suggest getting Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys for info on several hundred Buster Brown competitors, as well as several pages of the more fascinating Buster Brown material.

Soon there were many comic strip syndicates not only offering hundreds of various comic strips but also offering to license the characters for any company interested in paying the fee. The history of the comic strip with wide popularity since The Yellow Kid has been intertwined with giveaway premiums and character-based, store-bought merchandise of all kinds. Since its infancy as a profitable art form unto itself with The Yellow Kid, the comic strip world has profited from selling all sorts of "stuff" to the public featuring their favorite character or strip as its motif. American business gladly responded to the desire for comic character memorabilia with thousands of fun items to enjoy and collect. Most of the early comics were not aimed specifically at kids, though children understandably enjoyed them as well.

Comic books have generally been associated with almost all of the licensed merchandise in this century. In the Platinum Age section beginning right after this essay, you will find a great many comic books in varied formats and sizes published before the advent of the first successful monthly newsstand comic magazine, Famous Funnies. What drove each of these evolutionary format changes was the need by their producers to make money so more books could be issued.

A very significant format was F. M. Howarth's Funny Folks, published in 1899 by E. P. Dutton and drawn from color as well as black and white pages of Puck. This rather large hard-cover volume measured 16 1/2" wide by 12" tall. It contains numerous sequential comic strip pages as well as single gag illustrations. Howarth's art was a joy to behold and deserves wider recognition.

By Oct. 1900, Hearst had already caused Opper's Folks In Funnyville to be collected by publisher R. H. Russell, NY in a 12x9 hard cover format from his New York Journal American Humorist section. At the end of 1900, Carl Shultze had a first edition of Vaudevilles and Other Things published by Isaac H. Blanchard Co., NY. It measures 10 1/2" wide by 13" tall with 22 pages including covers. Each interior page is a 2 to 7 panel comic strip with lots of color.

There were also recently unearthed format variation second and third printings of Vaudevilles with the inscription "From the Originator of the 'Foxy Grandpa' Series" at the bottom of its front cover of the third printing. This note is lacking on the earlier first two editions, and it also switches format size to 11" tall by 13" wide. Discovered last year was a heretofore undocumented The Adventures of Foxy Grandpa - also issued in 1900 - new to the Platinum listings. The second number dated 1901 drops the words "The Adventures of..." from the title.

E. W. Kemble's The Blackberries had a color collection by 1901, also published by R. H. Russell, NY, as well as a few other comic-related volumes by Kemble still to be unearthed and properly identified. An earlier one was titled Coontown's 400 (1899) newly listed this year. While the title is definitely not "PC" by today's standards, Kemble's drawings are excellent slices of African-American life in the USA with some humor injected. Kemble did a good job documenting aspects of life.

Confirmed is the exact format of Hearst's 1902 The Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan And His Brother Gloomy Gus. They both measure 15 5/16" wide by 10" tall and contain 88 pages including covers. Confirmed also is the fact that there are two separate editions with different covers for the pictured 1902 first edition and a 1903 Frederick Stokes edition of Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan with differing contents. They both are two different books entirely, and what confuses many collectors is that they have identical indicia title pages, but so does an entirely different KK from 1905.

Settling on a popular size of 17" wide by 11" tall, comic books were soon available that featured Charles "Bunny" Schultze's Foxy Grandpa, Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids, Winsor McCay's Little Sammy Sneeze, Rarebit Fiend and Little Nemo, and Fred Opper's Happy Hooligan and Maud, in addition to dozens of Buster Brown comic books. For well over a decade, these large-size, full-color volumes were the norm, retailing for 60¢. These collections offered full-size Sunday comics with the back side blank per page.

Though not the first daily newspaper strip, the very rare Brainy Bowers and Drowsy Dugan by R. W. Taylor is now crowned the first collection of strip reprints from a daily newspaper published in America. There are now four different collections of Brainy Bower known to exist.

The Outbursts of Everett True by A. D. Condo and J. W. Raper was first published by Saalfield in 1907 in an 88-page hardcover collection. It qualifies as the second daily comic strip collection as it predates the first Mutt & Jeff collection from Ball by three years. Condo & Raper's creation began its regular run several times a week in 1905 daily newspapers and lasted until 1927, when Condo became too sick to continue. This same Everett True collection was later truncated a bit by Saalfield in 1921 to 56 strips in just 32 pages measuring the standard 10"x10" Cupples & Leon size.

By 1908 Stokes had a large backlist of full color comic books for sale at 60¢ each. Some of these titles date back to 1903 and were reprinted over and over as demand warranted. Note the number of titles in the advertisement pulled from the back of The Three Fun Makers shown below.

With the ever-increasing popularity of Bud Fisher's new daily strip sensation, Mutt & Jeff, a new format was created for reprinting daily strips in black and white, a hardcover book about 15" wide by 5" tall, published by Ball starting in 1910 for five volumes. In 1912, Ball also branched out with at least the now-obscure Doings of the Van Loons by Fred I. Leipziger, a rare comic book in the same format as the Mutt & Jeffs.

Cartoons Magazine also began in 1912 and ran through 1921 before undergoing a radical format change. It is notable as a wonderful source for information on early comics and their creators. See also the Platinum index.

The next significant evolutionary change occurred in 1919, when Cupples & Leon began issuing their black and white daily strip reprint books in a new aforementioned format, about 10" wide by 10" tall, with four panels reprinted per page in a two by two matrix. These books were 52 pages for 25¢. The first ones featured Bringing Up Father and Mutt & Jeff; there were about 100 others.

By 1921, the last of the oblong (11"x15") color comic books were issued, with Cupples & Leon's Jimmie Dugan and The Reg'lar Fellers by Gene Byrne, and EmBee's The Trouble Of Bringing Up Father by self publisher George McManus. Of special historical interest, Embee issued the first 10¢ monthly comic book, Comic Monthly, with the first issue dated January 1922. A dozen 8-1/2"x9" issues were published, each featuring solo adventures of popular King Features strips. The monthly 10¢ comic book concept had finally arrived, though it would be more than a decade before it became truly successful.

Skippy by Percy Crosby debuted in the long-running humor magazine Life in the March 22, 1923 issue. By 1924 the first hard cover collection, Life Presents Skippy, was published. The newspaper comic strip debuted June 23, 1925 with the McClure syndicate. Hearst soon picked up a Sunday page a year later in mid-1926, then added a daily strip in 1929. By the 1930s it was red hot - think Calvin & Hobbes or Peanuts in popularity. In its day, it was one of the most popular comic strips ever created. Read the Modern era essay for more on Skippy's immense popularity.

In 1926, Cupples & Leon added a new 7" wide by 9" tall format with Little Orphan Annie, Smitty, and others. These were issued in both softcover and hardcover editions with dust jackets, and became extremely popular at 60¢ per copy.

Dell began publishing all original material in The Funnies in late 1929 in a larger tabloid format. At least three dozen issues were published before Delacorte threw in the towel. Even the extremely popular Big Little Book, introduced in 1932, can be viewed as a smaller version of the existing formats. The competition amongst publishers now included Dell, McKay, Sonnet, Saalfield and Whitman. The 1930s saw a definite shift in merchandising comic strip material from adults to children. This was the decade when Kellogg's placed Buck Rogers on the map, when Ovaltine issued tons of Little Orphan Annie material. Merchandising from such pioneers as Sam Gold and Kay Kamen spearheaded this next transformation of the comics biz beginning in the early 1930s.

Upwards of a thousand of these Funnies On Parade precursors, in all formats, were published through 1935 and were very popular. Towards the end of this era of once-popular comic book formats, beautiful collections of Popeye, Mickey Mouse, Dick Tracy, and many others were published which today command ever higher prices on the open market as they are rediscovered by the advanced collector who appreciates and enjoys truly great classic comics.

END NOTE: Each year we strive to add to the many 1930s variant formats. This Platinum Age section has grown as a result of advanced collectors who continue to report in with new finds. We encourage interested collectors and scholars to help with this section of the book, as each new data entry is very important for recovering our history. COLLECTOR'S NOTE: The books listed in this section were published many decades before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. Consequently, copies of most all of these comics do not often surface in Fine+ or better shape. eBay has proven after more than a decade that many items once considered rare actually are not, though they almost always are in higher grades. For items marked scarce, we are trying to ascertain how many copies might still be in existence. Your input is always welcome.

Most Platinum Age comic books are in the Fair to VG range. If you want to collect these only in high grade, your collection will be extremely small. The prices given for Good, Fine and Very Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in the front of this price guide or contact the authors of the Platinum essay. Most measurements are in inches. A few measurements are in centimeters. The first dimension given is Height and the second is Width.

For ease of ascertaining the contents of each item of this listing, there is a code letter or two following most titles we have been adding in over the years to aid you. Bibo & Lang: 1930-1931 (12x9", stapled-c, 20 pgs., 4 printings) nn - First Disney licensed publication (a magazine, not a book–see first book, Adventures of Mickey Mouse). Contains story of how Mickey met Walt and got his name; games, cartoons & song "Mickey Mouse (You Cute Little Feller)," written by Irving Bibo; Minnie, Clarabelle Cow, Horace Horsecollar & caricature of Walt shaking hands with Mickey. The changes made with the 2nd printing have been verified by billing affidavits in the Walt Disney Archives and include:Two Win Smith Mickey strips from 4/15/30 and 4/17/30 added to page 8 & back-c; "Printed in U.S.A." added to front cover; Bobette Bibo's age of 11 years added to title page; faulty type on the word "tail" corrected top of page 3; the word "start" added to bottom of page 7, removing the words "start 1 2 3 4" from the top of page 7; music and lyrics were rewritten on pages 12-14. A green ink border was added beginning with 2nd printing and some covers have inking variations. Art by Albert Barbelle, drawn in an Ub Iwerks style. 1st printing. Contains the song lyrics censored in later printings, "When little Minnie's pursued by a big bad villain we feel so bad then we're glad when you up and kill him." Attached to the Nov. 15, 1930 issue of the Official Bulletin of the Mickey Mouse Club notes: "Attached to this Bulletin is a new Mickey Mouse Book that has just been published." NOTE: "The conditions of workers and the corruption of a political system beholden to corporate interests have been a major focus of human rights concerns since the 19th century. This early graphic novel depicts the social evils of unreformed capitalism. Ryan Walker was a syndicate cartoonist for many mainstream newspapers as well as for the communist Daily Worker." This description comes from http://www.lib.uconn.edu/DoddCenter/ascexh3.html, where you can find also a reproduction of the cover. I add that Ryan Walker was the editor of "The Saint Louis Republic" comic section since its inception in 1897; the supplement published "Alma and Oliver", George McManus's first series.

THE JUSTICE SOCIETY OF AMERICA

By Ed Catto

From the vantage point of 2016, it's hard to believe that the Justice Society of America, comics' first super team, had its first revival almost 40 years ago. This was the first of many revivals for the Justice Society of America, often referred to as the JSA. It's also fascinating to realize that at that time, in the mid-'70s, the JSA had been created a little less than 40 years before that.

This '70s revival relaunched the venerable All Star Comics title in late 1975. The Justice Society of America, along with the clumsily branded Super Squad, (used to reference the younger heroes: Star-Spangled Kid, Robin and Power Girl) adventured through All Star issues #58 to #74. Instead of starting with an issue #1, as is the tradition today, the numbering was picked up from the point in the sequential numbering where All Star had ended all those years ago.

The revival continued beyond the pages of All Star Comics. In 1977, Paul Levitz and Joe Staton used DC Special #29 to reveal the origin of the JSA.

That same year, they debuted a young super heroine, the Huntress, in DC Superstars #17, as an alternate version of Batgirl. She would become an integral part of the Justice Society. One could argue that the Huntress back-up stories in the Wonder Woman comic, by the All Star creative team of Paul Levitz and Joe Staton, were part of this revival.

When All Star Comics was cancelled as part of a company-wide pruning of titles, the JSA soldiered on in Adventure Comics starting in issue #461. But in reality, by 1979 this wonderful iteration of the JSA had run its course. Adventure Comics #466 told the story of the JSA's "last case," and that proved to be an appropriate place to wrap up their 1970s revival.

ICONIC AND FAMILIAR

The Justice Society had been off the main stage for a while, but like out-of-town relatives who visit just a little too frequently, they were loved by and familiar to readers and fans.

The '70s iteration of All Star Comics was important and fresh in many ways. It dealt with the conflict between age and youth. It offered an opportunity for a legendary artist to render iconic characters. It was an on-ramp for other professionals who would enjoy long careers in the industry, providing strong and lasting contributions. The series introduced new characters that, despite necessary tweaking and tinkering, remain vibrant today. It also validated the passion fans held for characters, and helped cement the concept that in comics, there's always an opportunity to enjoy the adventures of old characters.

So much has been written about these characters and this mythology. But there are more insights to share about this beloved, all-too-brief, Camelot-like chapter in the history of comic's first super team.

SECRET ORIGIN

Roy Thomas might be the world's biggest Justice Society of America fan. As a young boy he enjoyed the series during the Golden Age of Comics and when presented the opportunity in the early '80s, he relaunched the concept with the All Star Squadron. After his long run scripting, he has written exhaustively about the world's first super team in his Alter Ego magazine and associated books.

In remembering the 1970s relaunch, Thomas reflected how his idea provided a spark. At this time Thomas was still working at Marvel Comics. But his friend and associate Gerry Conway, who would become the initial writer of All Star Comics #58, had left Marvel and was just starting as a writer at DC.

Both writers lived in New York and one fateful day, Thomas went over to Conway's house. Conway was living on the East Side of Manhattan and Thomas was living on the West Side. As Thomas remembers it, Gerry and Carla Conway were both at home at the time, and Gerry was eager to initiate some new projects at DC. He asked Thomas for some suggestions.

Thomas remembered two ideas beyond those that Conway had already brainstormed himself. The first idea was to do a legitimate Superman vs. Captain Marvel (i.e. Shazam) fight. The two iconic strong men had never truly crossed one another's path at this point. This idea eventually became an epic story published in an oversized Treasury Edition.

The second idea, and one that Thomas pushed more strongly, was a revival of All Star Comics and the JSA. He couldn't exactly recall who decided to continue the numbering from All Star Comics. "I don't know if I suggested continuing it with #58," Thomas said.

In the end, Thomas was pleased that Conway took up this project. "He did it in his own way," Thomas said.

THE OTHER SECRET ORIGIN

But there's another piece of the origin story puzzle. And like the Justice Society characters themselves, it's all about loyalty, friendships and men who became legends in their own lifetimes.

Back in the '50s, MAD was a phenomenal success. How could it not, with top talent like Wallace Wood, Joe Orlando and Harvey Kurtzman? Wallace (aka Wally) Wood was the original star artist at MAD and helped build their success for more than a dozen years. He was also the only artist whose work was in every single issue for the first decade.

Friendships and loyalties grew. And at that time, Joe Orlando was very close to publisher Bill Gaines. Years later, Orlando and award-winning author-historian J. David Spurlock became very close.

"Orlando worked for Gaines as a freelancer and his wife worked in the MAD office. In fact, the two couples, the Orlandos and the Gaines, would go out to dinner together several times each week," Spurlock said.

When Harvey Kurtzman, one of the guiding forces, left MAD to create Trump, he took along several top artists. Spurlock explained, "Gaines, understandably upset, reached out to Orlando. He reasoned that if they could just keep Wood as a MAD artist, they might be able to survive Kurtzman taking all the other artists with him."

Orlando told Spurlock that if they couldn't retain Wood, "Gaines was going to close down the magazine and go back to teaching high school."

According to Spurlock's Eisner Award-nominated Wood biography, Wally's World, Harvey Kurtzman had just opened up an office in New York City for Trump magazine. Hugh Hefner financed the start-up. Kurtzman invited Wood to come speak with him. Hefner was there too. The pair adamantly insisted that Wood come to work exclusively for their new venture.

But Wood was loyal to Gaines and explained that while he was willing to do work for Trump magazine, that he would not turn his back on Bill Gaines.

"Wood had become one of the biggest stars in comic-book history with much thanks to Gaines, and while he was likewise loyal to Kurtzman, Wood wasn't about to help put MAD out of business," Spurlock said.

By the time the 1970s rolled around, Joe Orlando was working as an editor at DC/National under his close friend, publisher Carmine Infantino. Since the '50s, Wood had emerged as one of the most sought-after talents in comics. Infantino and Orlando wanted him at DC.

While Wood had contributed to many comics at DC, he never had a lasting influence on major characters. His longest run on a major DC character at that time was his 1969 run with Bob Brown on Superboy.

Orlando, as directed by Infantino, worked to find a project, or to create a title, that would hold Wood's attention for a significant run. Since leaving MAD in 1964, Wood highly valued his independence and had reservations about large publishers. With the exception of his own creation, The T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents, which ran from late 1965 through 1969, Wood didn't stay on any mainstream superhero title longer than his Superboy run for DC. How could DC attract him? How could they keep him interested? No one in the business knew Wood better than his old protégé and one-time partner, Joe Orlando. If anyone could do it, Joe could.

Orlando created a superhero project designed specifically to Wood's interests. The new All Star Comics combined Golden Age superheroes that Wood was nostalgic about from his youth, a hot, young, blonde bombshell—visually, almost a PG-rated superhero version of Wood's own Sally Forth, and leveraged someone else for layouts, as was Wood's preference, to ease him into the series.

The hope was that Wood would settle into the series and eventually co-write as well as handle full pencils and inks. He had done this on his landmark Daredevil and T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents runs. And for the JSA, he eventually did too, in the culminating issues of his All Star run, issues #64 and #65.

"All Star #65 properly credits Wood as plotter/co-writer," Spurlock said. "But though Wood received no plotting credit on the splash of issue #64, DC had already published a mention, crediting Wood as plotting issue #64, on the All Star #63 letters page. Paul Levitz confirmed to me that the story was constructed around Wood's concept of Superman as a knight in armor."

Though Infantino and Orlando had gotten the project rolling, as Infantino left DC, Orlando's job duties increased, so Conway took over as the All Star editor (having started as writer on the first stories). Though many played a role, the origins of the Power Girl character are specifically connected to Wood. Inspired by Wood's work and tastes, Orlando produced the first sketch as his idea of a Wood-like blonde bombshell superhero. Estrada and Conway both recall doing a sketch or two themselves, prior to Power Girl's inspiration, Wood, finishing the job and making her his own. All four men really deserve co-creator credit for Power Girl.

All Star Comics, starring the Justice Society of America, spotlighted Power Girl in that first new issue. This debut was scripted by Conway with equal "Artists" billing — listed in alphabetical order — for Ric Estrada and Wally Wood. The next issue credited Estrada as "Designer" for his rough layout work, with Wood receiving a solo "Artist" credit. Keith Giffen took over the layout duties after that, until Wood ultimately took over all.

Each issue's credit listings struggled to convey each contributor's role correctly. In issue #62, for example, Giffen is listed as responsible for "pacing" and Wood is responsible for "pictures."

"Despite his getting some layout assistance on many issues, Wood did the bulk of the art: finished pencils and inks, and he was always considered the primary artist of his entire run, as evidenced by the fact that the published letters were addressed to the writer and Wood," Spurlock said. "The original run introduced a younger, Bronze Age audience to Wood and the JSA alike. It has proven very popular over the years and has been reprinted in various collected editions. And of course, it is hard to see Power Girl and not think of Woody."

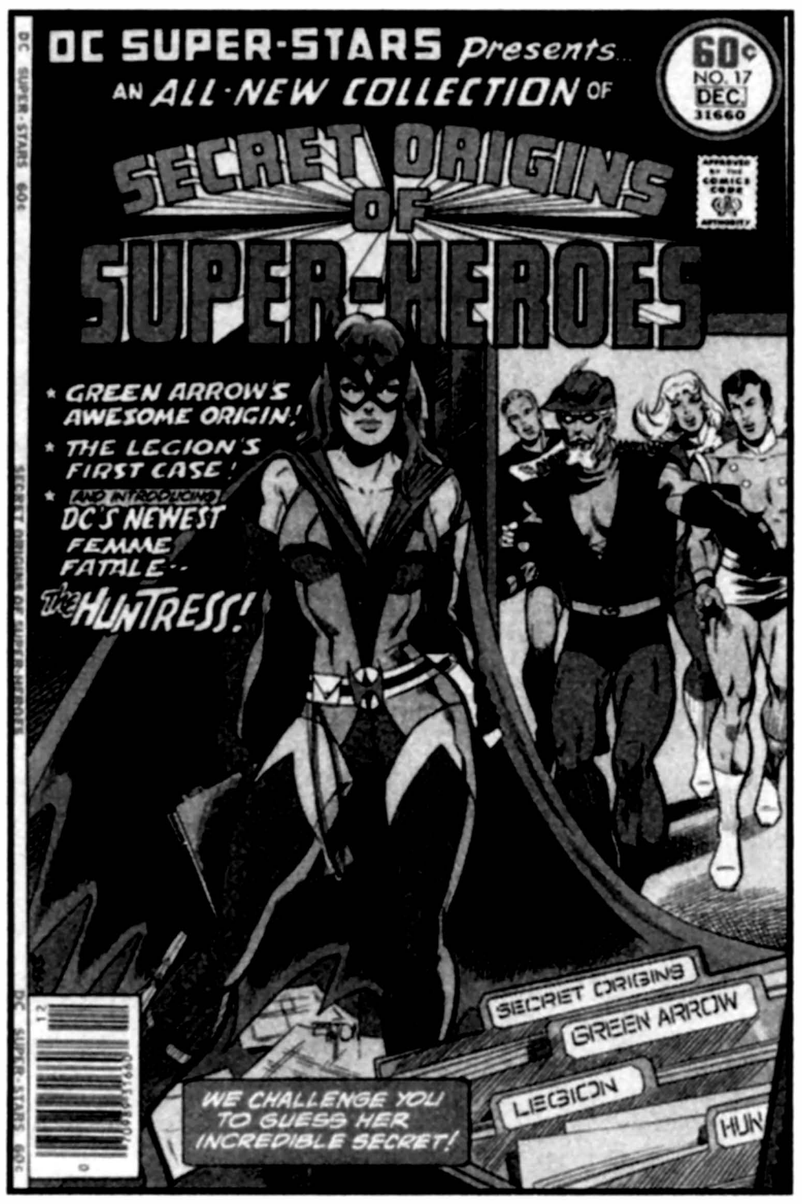
Wood did eventually leave the series, and Joe Staton took over. Staton explained that he was doing finishes on the Karate Kid over Ric Estrada and was "on that for a while." He was also doing Metal Men. These got him into DC, and he got along very well with Paul Levitz, who was by that time writing the series.

Staton had a lot of respect for Wood's work and it served as a basis his for own work on the series. "I kept looking at Wally Wood to see what he was doing. A lot of us admired the way he handled the [inks] – the characters were so solid," Staton said.

THE NAME GAME

And there's another part of the JSA's revival story - how part of the iconic super team got its name.

For the longest time, Thomas had thought that Conway came up with the name, the All Star Squad (and/or All Star Super Squad) and then Roy had just borrowed it back in '80s for the All Star Squadron. But recently



Roy found a letter he had sent to fellow JSA enthusiast and comic historian Jerry Bails.

In that letter, Roy had suggested that he thought of another name for the team – the All Star Squad. So the irony is that in the '80s, Roy thought he was fixing the name, but in reality he was just borrowing it back.

ROY THOMAS' FIRST FIRST ISSUE

Officially, Thomas has a very minor part in the first issue – it included a letter he wrote. Conspiratorially, Thomas admitted that he thought he could get away with something like that, and that it would probably not be brought to Stan Lee's attention (Lee was Thomas' boss at Marvel at that time). He was concerned that contributing anything more might be in violation of his contract.

There was also a worry, at that time, that this might his "last opportunity" to provide a professional contribution to the Justice Society of America. Little did he realize that the DC implosion would kill the series, and he would be able to jump-start it anew. But, as they say, that's another story.

STALKING THE HUNTRESS

Joe Staton remembers that "we had Power Girl in the group," and she needed another female character with whom to interact. As noted, Power Girl was an alternate version of Supergirl, and one of the three younger heroes who joined with the JSA for these adventures.

Power Girl, an outspoken, strong beauty, frequently caused tension with the older heroes of the established "boys club" that the Justice Society had become.

There was another element at work here. Levitz had a great fondness for an occasional series of Batman stories. These tales portrayed a possible future as penned by Alfred, the Wayne family butler and surrogate mother. These stories, like the Justice Society stories, offered a slightly different version of official characters. For instance, in one adventure that stuck with Levitz, the young Bette (Batgirl) Kane grew up to be Batwoman II.

Developing this friend for Power Girl and channeling this old Batgirl story, Levitz realized he didn't want to just create another Batgirl. Anthony Tollin and Bob Layton had discussed with Levitz the idea that she should be the daughter of Batman and Catwoman. Working with Staton, and borrowing the name from an old '40s character, the Huntress was born.

"She still has quite a few fans," Staton said. In fact, Staton and his lovely wife Hilarie are frequent stars on the comic convention circuit and he is very encouraged when he sees the Huntress cosplayers. "I try to be careful so they don't say, "Who is this old guy?"

THE DAY THEY KILLED BATMAN

One of Staton's favorite stories came near the end this JSA revival, when he illustrated the story in which the Golden Age (Earth Two) Batman was killed. In Adventure Comics #262, Bruce Wayne, after battling cancer due to years of pipe smoking, fights one last battle. With echoes of that original night when his parents died, Batman dies a hero's death.

"Paul Levitz understood it was a big deal. 'It was exciting,' I remember thinking to myself," Staton said.

BACKSTAGE DRAMA REFLECTS ONSTAGE DRAMA

Paul Levitz has had such an impressive career in the industry, but when he took over the writing of All Star Comics from Gerry Conway, he was just starting out.

Upon reflection, Levitz explained that his conflicts as a rookie amongst established professionals mirrored what was going in the Justice Society's stories.

Levitz was surrounded by and working with industry giants for whom he had great respect. These included Joe Orlando, Wally Wood, Joe Kubert, and so many more. They were the "greatest generation" – guys who have lived through the Depression and may have served in the Military in WWII or Korea. As was natural, Levitz and the organizations other younger professionals would often think, "Am I worthy of being a peer?"

Sometimes Levitz had to embrace these people as peers, and sometimes he'd even have to be their boss. Sometimes he'd learn what to do from them and sometimes he'd have to learn what not to do from them.

"We'd argue about the choices being made. In some cases, the old guard was right. In other cases, we were right," Levitz said. "It was a wonderful opportunity. It was an amazing time. They were a decent bunch of people."

He reiterated that they didn't have any concept that what they were doing was art or that it was going to last. They were just working to pay the bills, make people smile and take care of their families.

WHO'S YOUR FAVORITE?

"My favorite was Wildcat," Joe Staton said. "His memory was going and he was a sentimental favorite. Every once in a while we'd team him up with the Huntress."

On the other hand, Staton remembered: "I never really got a handle on Hourman, the costume or what he was doing."

Levitz always liked the original Flash and Green Lantern, and likened writing them to visiting old friends. He also enjoyed bringing new characters like Power Girl and the Huntress to life. Thomas said that as a big fan of Kubert's artwork, Hawkman was always his favorite.

WHY IT WORKS

The Justice Society works in the modern age because they are not quite the Justice League of America. Characters can change and grow old. They need not be as timeless as their corporate icon counterparts.

"The Justice Society were the originals, even though they occasionally get updated, and they are the ones to get back to," Staton said. "Part of the charm is that they offer a peek into how things can be."

At the heart of this revival, Levitz said, is the conflict between youth and experience.

Why do people like things that are familiar but different? "That's what I thought was cool about it," Staton said. Readers knew a little bit about the Justice Society of America's original adventures, he reasoned, and that familiarity owed a lot to the 100 Page Super Spectacular reprints.

"The goal is to leave the toys in better shape than when you picked them up," Levitz said.

The iconic heroes of the Justice Society started it all, and have enjoyed several revivals. When the series was conceptualized in 1940, could anyone have ever dreamed of the endurance it would enjoy? The many jump-starts and reboots have provided fans in each decade with an opportunities to thrill to the adventures of the Justice Society of America and maybe - for just a moment – to feel like they are part of the club.

"Every once in a while, all the parts come together and it comes out nice," Staton said.
